Pay Raises For City Officials Approved

The City Council has approved pay raises ranging from 2 to 14 percent for department heads and other top full-time city officials.

The salary increases are the first in five years for Mayor James Sheets and the city councilors, and the first significant raises in five years for 50 department heads and other non-union employees. The City Council approved the raises June 30, two days before the start of the new fiscal year.

The last raise given non-union employees was a 1 percent raise in 1992. Mayor James Sheets said the raises average 8 percent based on the fact that the raises given to the city's union employees have averaged 8 percent over the last three years.

The mayor's salary is going up 12 percent, from $55,587 to $62,500 a year, but his raise will not take effect until Jan. 1. The same holds true for the nine city councilors, whose pay will rise 25 percent to $12,607. In addition, councilors will get $200 a month for car allowance, up from $160 a month, while the mayor's car allowance will remain at $150 a month.

Other pay raises went into effect July 1, the first day of FY95.

The money for the raises was included in the city's $133.5 million FY95 budget, which the council approved last month. However, the raises were not made official until the City Council enacted the related ordinances last week.

Sheets' salary is not the highest among city officials. The annual salary for Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Police Chief Francis Mullen is now $69,500. Other officials, such as Public Works Commissioner David Colton and City Auditor Robert Foy, earn $63,500.

The mayor said he consulted residents and business people before proposing the pay increase for himself and the councilors. Because Quincy's finances have stabilized and he is not raising taxes this year, Sheets said he felt the raises were justified.

Sheets said many people expressed the sentiment that the mayor should be the highest-paid city official in Quincy. The mayor said that over time, he also would like to see that happen.

Sheets: 'Two Major Steps Forward' Weld Signs College, Golf Course Petitions

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Gov. William Weld has signed into law two home-rule petitions that will pave the way for a new system of governance at Quincy College and construction of a golf course/recreation facility at the former landfill site in West Quincy.

Mayor James Sheets made the announcement after receiving notification from Weld's office Tuesday. The two petitions were passed by the City Council in March and by the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate June 21.

Sheets said he was thrilled with the news.

"I'm pleased that the petitions have been passed," he said. "This means two major steps forward for the city."

Sheets' home-rule petition for Quincy College, which calls for the college to be governed by a new, independent board of trustees, is similar to an initial governance plan formulated by a mayoral task force led by School Committee member Linda Stice. Attempts to reach Stice by telephone Tuesday were unsuccessful.

The college petition had become a necessity after the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) ruled that the college must change its governance system or face losing its accreditation. Currently, the college is governed by the Quincy School Com-

20 Firefighters Participate In Tunnel Training Course

Twenty firefighters from the Quincy Fire Department participated in a five-day tunnel training program recently at the department's new Fire Training Center at the Fore River shipyard.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the specialized training can help firefighters prepare for such emergencies as the recent fire in an underground sewage tunnel off Deer Island that caused the evacuation of 50 tunnel workers. The tunnel, which is currently under construction, is part of the $4.3 billion Boston Harbor cleanup project.

The chief added that the training is aimed specifically at preparing for problems that could arise during construction of an unrelated tunnel being built under Quincy Center as part of the $40 million Town Brook flood control project.

Gorman said 20 Quincy firefighters participated in the training program, as well as one from Boston, one from the Massachusetts Fire Academy, one from the Army Corps of Engineers and three from Cajima-Marra Majestic, the contractor of the Town Brook project.

Gorman also said he hopes other members of his department will be able to receive training from a similar program in Boston in the near future.

The chief noted that such training is important because battling a fire that erupts in a tunnel is not the same as fighting a house fire.

"It's a whole different operation," he said, "Situations can develop in a tunnel, and we don't want anyone to get hurt."

Among the things taught during the tunnel training course were the operation of special underground masks and instruction in the readings of toxic and explosive underground gases, the chief said. He added that the $30,000 course was jointly funded by Cajima-Marra Majestic and the Quincy Fire Department.

Rte. 3 High Occupancy Vehicle Lane Meeting July 11

The Massachusetts Highway Department will hold a public meeting/technical workshop to discuss its plans for a high-occupancy vehicle (HOV) lane for the Southeast Expressway/Rte. 3 corridor.

The meeting will be held Monday, July 11 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the second floor Community Room at the Richard J. Murphy School, 1 Worrell St., Dorchester. The building is wheelchair accessible.

MassHighway is planning a six-mile contraflow HOV lane between Purname Brook Parkway and Freeport Street to be implemented as a short-range measure. Using movable barriers, the HOV lane will be created by borrowing a lane from the off-peak direction and converting it to a peak-direction HOV lane reserved for buses, carpools, and vanpools. Construction will start this summer.

Topics for discussion at the meeting will include the short range contraflow lane and its impact on the community, how the movable barrier system works, and how disabled vehicles will be removed as part of the contraflow lane operations/incident management plan. MassHighway's long-range HOV plan for the highway will also be discussed.

For more information, call 973-7858.

IMPACT Quincy Tobacco Program Participant

Impact Quincy, as part of the Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program, participated recently in a panel discussion entitled, "A Victory For Question 1: Your Communities' Response To The Tobacco Epidemic." Massachusetts Public Health Commissioner David Mulligan was a featured guest at the program.

Along with other area health and community organizations, each group discussed the goals, components and accomplishments of their respective tobacco control programs.

Last fall, public health departments of 16 cities and towns throughout the South Shore received nearly $1.5 million from Massachusetts Tobacco Control Program funds. The goal of this statewide program is to reduce tobacco use in Massachusetts by 50% by 1999.

Search Continues For Missing Irish Student

The search continues for a college student from Ireland who has been missing for a week and a half.

Divers, dogs, state troopers and helicopters with heating devices have been used to find 19-year-old Patrick McDonagh in the Granite Quarry in Quincy and the woods surrounding the quarry. So far, no trace has been found.

City officials said at press time Tuesday that it appears McDonagh will not be found in the quarry.

"I spoke to John Blackadar (head of the Quincy Underwater Recovery Team), and he feels confident that that person (McDonagh) is not there," said Police Chief Francis Mullen.

"Nothing's for certain, but I think they probably would have found anyone who was down there (in the quarry) by now," said Mayor James Sheets.

Both Sheets and Mullen, however, said the city will continue to aid the investigation in any way possible. State Police planned to search the quarry yesterday (Wednesday) with an underwater camera from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute in Falmouth.

In addition, more than 500 "missing" fliers were posted over the weekend in Dorchester and Quincy by McDonagh's relatives. The fliers show McDonagh's picture and description, along with several phone numbers, and were posted after relatives and State Police made public appeals for help in the search.

Officials are asking that anyone with any information that might be helpful to the search to call the State Police at the Blue Hills Reservation in Milton.

McDonagh, a student at University College-Galway who was visiting his relatives in Dorchester for the summer, was last seen leaving J.J.'s Irish Pub and Grille on Dorchester Avenue with a friend, Mark Walsh, 21, of Dorchester, the night of June 26.

Walsh initially told police that after drinking with McDonagh at the quarry, he fell asleep, and McDonagh was gone when he woke up. However, State Police Sgt. Joseph Howley said Walsh has changed his story several times, confusing both police and McDonagh's relatives.

One story Walsh told police was that he dropped McDonagh off near the Dorchester Street home where McDonagh was living with his brother, Robert, according to Howley. He added that another time, Walsh told police he didn't remember McDonagh being in the car with him on the way to the quarry.

Howley said there is no proof McDonagh went to the Granite Rail Quarry. McDonagh's relatives have said they no longer believe McDonagh is in or near the quarry.

Last Thursday (June 30), as many as 23 divers from the Quincy Underwater Recovery Team searched the quarry. The team, composed of volunteers from across eastern Massachusetts, has extensive training in wreck diving and recovery operations at depths 300 feet or more. All are members of the South Shore Neptunes, a dive club founded by Blackadar, the team's dive chief.

State Police divers gave up the search June 29 after reaching their maximum dive depth of 100 feet.

The recovery team stayed within 30 feet of the quarry's towering granite walls. Tanking containing a special mixture of helium, nitrogen and oxygen were brought along to allow some divers to reach depths beyond 300 feet.

The bends, which occur when nitrogen from the air a diver breathes is compressed into the bloodstream are a threat to the divers. The bends cause excruciatingly painful cramping in the joints and, if left untreated, death.

Divers said the quarry's waters are as dangerous to divers as the youths who leap from its 100-foot-high cliffs. There are a number of cars, along with other debris, below the quarry's deep waters.

The team dived on lines tethered to buoys for more than three hours to depths of 197 feet, but came up with nothing.

THE FEARS OF HEART DISEASE

The choking, suffocating sense of pain that often accompanies angina is bad enough. Doctors are finding, though, that the fear of what that angina may mean can be harder for many heart patients to face than the physical discomfort itself. Topping the list of fears is often the fear of surgery. This worry may be eased somewhat by the knowledge that many angina patients can live full lives without surgery by making such lifestyle changes as quitting smoking, switching to a healthier diet, and exercising. Sharing the spot as top fear is usually the fear of a heart attack. Again, confidence about the benefits of healthy living and knowing the signs of when to get help for a heart attack can help soothe these fears. P.S. Deepen fears, heart attacks rarely occur during sex. If sex brings on angina, ask your doctor about ways to prevent symptoms.

You can significantly reduce your risk of heart disease by switching to a low-fat diet and by simply taking a brisk half-hour walk at least three times a week. If you'd like more information on how to help prevent heart disease, feel free to call either myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We place strong emphasis on caring for the patient, rather than simply treating the disease. Office hours are by appointment. We have ample parking at our office, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospital.

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

Lincoln Theater: Farewell To A Friend

(The following Sunbeams column was originally written by Henry Bosworth in March, 1980 as a fond farewell to the Lincoln Theater, a long-time Quincy Point landmark and friend, when it was razed that year. It is reprinted now because a few people have requested it (honest) and old Henry wants to take the day off.)

The old Lincoln Theater is gone and if you grew up or lived in Quincy Point during the 1930's and 1940's, you've got to feel a bit sad.

A landmark since the days of Charlie Chaplin and silent movies, the theater has fallen to the thump-thump of a wrecking ball to make room for a John Hancock Insurance Co. office building.

But it was more than a theater and landmark. It was also, during its 1930's-1940's heyday, a social center and friend.

After World War II, it was never quite the same. Like other neighborhood theaters, it gradually succumbed to television, changing times and affluence. It had been closed for some time before its final "The End" last week.

But during the 30's and 40's, the Lincoln was where you went on a night out if you lived in the Point, especially in the area served by St. Joseph's and Quincy Point Congregational churches-when the latter was at Washington and South Sts. And, if you were a kid, it was where you went every Saturday.

For a long time admission was 15 cents for adults and a dime for children. Then, the price for adults went up to 20 cents and a few people growled at that.

It was at the Lincoln where you first saw:

Boris Karloff roaming the countryside as Frankenstein's monster... Clark Gable searching for Jeanette MacDonald in the rubble of the San Francisco earthquake... Tyrone Power and Don Ameche battling flames to find Alice Faye in the great Chicago fire. (They found one another and then joined Alexander's Ragtime Band)... Don Ameche again, this time inventing the telephone with Henry Fonda's help... Jimmy Cagney, George Raft and Humphrey Bogart busting out of the Bog House... Clark Gable and Charles Laughton having it out on the Bounty... Errol Flynn as a swashbuckling Robin Hood and Captain Blood... Shirley Temple dancing up and down the stairs with Bill Robinson... Mickey Rooney as Andy Hardy and Judy Garland as Polly Benedict... the Marx Brothers... Betty Grable in college with Jack Oakie... Charlie Chan and No. 1 son tracking down the murderer in Chinatown... Carmen Miranda with a fruit bowl on her head, etc. etc.

They were movies families could see together and, at the Lincoln, often did. If the guy and girl were going to do something kids shouldn't see, they didn't see. But adults got the message at the fadeout.

The theater was usually filled-and usually with the same people-people you knew. Out of habit, they sat in the same seats. If you were looking for a friend in the dark of the theater, you knew the exact seat he would be in.

It was movie togetherness.

It took awhile for the films to get to the Lincoln after About 400 billion packages-cans, bottles, cartons and plastic bags, to name a few types-are used yearly in the United States.

they played Boston. But it was worth it. The sound was the best in Quincy and the seats the most comfortable.

Besides that, there were dish night and money nights to make it even more worthwhile.

Dish Night was Tuesday and Wednesday. With the price of admission, each lady attending would each week receive a dish, cup and saucer, platter, etc. until the entire set was complete. And after that was over, a woman could get a blue crystal set the same way, too.

There must have been Sundays when a good many families in the Point sat down to dinner with the same dishes on their table.

Some still have remnants of those china and glass sets, now cherished mementos of simple but happy days gone forever.

Money nights-Thursdays and Saturdays-were a lot of fun. Top prize was a $10 bill. Second, a $5 bill. Then there was a $2 bill and maybe five $1 bills. If you were lucky to win, it was great. Money didn't come too easy in those days and was worth full value.

The bills were in unmarked envelopes down at the stage where each winner got to pick the envelope in the order that their ticket stub number was drawn. The drawing was during the intermission with lights turned up.

The fun came when somebody you knew got the first chance to pick and got one of the $1 bills. Everybody would then give him the razz. Sometimes the person with the last lucky ticket would walk down and get the $10 prize.

The owner of the theater then was Al Beaumier who was later killed in an auto accident in Canada. He was a friendly, generous man, but ran his theater in a firm manner. No rowdiness, no loud talking-no feet on the back of seats in front of you-or out you went. And, it was awhile before you could get back in.

If you came to see a movie at the Lincoln, you saw it and heard it without disturbance.

On Saturdays, prizes for children were awarded to lucky ticket holders in the same manner as on Money Night. Prizes included such things as a baseball bat and ball, a glove, dolls, etc.

One young man won the bat and ball one Saturday and then while watching the rest of the show, dropped the ball. It rolled down to the stage area where someone scooped it.

Timidly, he told Beaumier about it after the show and was given another ball. That ball and that bat were used all summer long by the kids that played ball in a field off Des Moines Rd. Ball and bat were taped, and retaped after the cover was knocked off the ball, and the bat was cracked.

During the Christmas school vacation, Beaumier, who was active in St. Joseph's parish, had a Christmas party at the theater for youngsters of that church.

They were treated to a box of hard candy and an afternoon of The Three Stooges, Popeye, Buster Keaton, Charlie Chase, Edgar Kennedy, Porky Pig, Bugs Bunny, etc., etc.

There wasn't much money around the Point in those days, but thanks to the Lincoln, you really didn't mind. You had top entertainment at the right price-and didn't need a car to get there.

The Lincoln is gone, but like the movies that played there, the fond memories will live on.

As long, at least, as there are late-late movies on TV-and you remember them as the ones you first saw at the old Lincoln.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1907 POSTCARD shows three young ladies enjoying the walk from Houghs Neck to Nut Island along Nut Island Road. This road is on top of the sewerage pipe, which along with the screen house or pumping station, was built in 1901 by the Metropolitan District Commission. The 'Pumpy' as the building was called by the locals, was replaced in 1951 by the present treatment plant, the only thing that survived was the chimney. After 95 years as a sewerage plant site, the MWRA will convert this island to a park and return it to the people of Quincy in 1996.

There's No Place Like Quincy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I too am a Quincy native and even though I've moved next door (to Weymouth), I still love Quincy!

Having read Joe Davidson's letter in The Quincy Sun (April 28), I must admit with sadness that I also have come across the ignorant attitude of people living north of Quincy. It is puzzling and it hurts.

In further investigating and asking lots of "whys,"

I've discovered the strange reason as to why they disliked Quincy and the South Shore mainly because their parents didn't like it. The parents never brought them "south," (and maybe their own parents didn't either), it was so far away like "going to the moon."

Meanwhile, these people I know personally have finally visited and were pleasantly surprised to see that we live here as normal as they do there.

Mr. Davis, counteract attitudes, tell them to come and see what they've been missing. (One can surely avoid the Expressway, so that's no excuse.) In a way I feel sorry for anyone who thinks so narrow-mindedly. It's their loss. Come and see for yourselves before judging "us." There's no need to miss out on this lovely area full of history, etc., and bring your family.

Be adventurous, folks, overcome this negative attitude and visit "the south."

To my mind there's no other place like Quincy.

I love it!

Edith Matthes

P.S. Maybe the Quincy Tourism Association could use this as a new slogan, "Come to Quincy and See What You've Been Missing." (Or has it been done?)

Wal-Mart Would Benefit Unions, City

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing for the families of union sheet metal workers as well as the other trades. Remember, these are dire and tough economic times for everyone. Consider then, that the project called Granite Crossing would be a blessing in the minds of my union brothers, as well as the benefit of Quincy residents. I am in support of the construction of the Granite Crossing Shopping Center.

This entire project will be manned by union labor which pleases me and my fellow journeymen. It has been quite some time since any of my brothers has seen employment.

Highlights of the project include:

- 500 permanent new jobs and 200 construction jobs.
- Atlantic Development has signed an agreement with the Quincy and South Shore Building and Construction Trades Council guaranteeing the construction jobs to the local labor unions.

- Tax revenue. Granite Crossing will pay $610,000 upon completion of the project, a $575,000 per year increase. As of now, existing real estate taxes for the vacant property is $35,000 per year. This indeed would be a shot in the arm economically.

-$1 million in road improvements. This would include correcting existing problems, making the area safe for pedestrians and accommodating new traffic. The road system will work better than it does today.

-Keeping sales in Quincy. Quincy residents currently spend over $100 million dollars annually outside Quincy on products that will be available at Wal-Mart. The only way to stop the flow of retail sales out of Quincy is to provide customers with new stores like Wal-Mart in the city.

-The best location. The site is zoned for retail shopping. It is a major four-way intersection that can accommodate and manage the traffic properly. The size of the project has been reduced to incorporate appropriate buffer areas for the nearby condominiums. Many of the 63,000 people living within two miles of their site pass through the intersection now, creating an ideal of opportunity to shop in conjunction with existing commuting patterns.

I am in full support of this endeavor and hope you weigh the possibilities.

Central Supplement Brings Back Memories

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Quincy Sun supplement April 21 on Central Middle School brought back the time I attended the Evening Industrial School for mechanical drawing from 1909 to 1912. The classes were held in the old Quincy High School on Hancock Street.

The mechanical drawing at the Evening Industrial School was the start of my career of 56 years: mechanical engineering and drafting on Navy merchant ships, including 47 years at the Fore River shipyard and the last 33 as a supervisor.

$500 Raised To Fill Old Slate Quarry

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath requested and was granted by the City Council a supplementary budget of $500 to fill the old slate quarry hole on Apthorpe St. near Wollaston Beach which was reported to be a nuisance to neighboring residents and hazard to their children.

July 7-13,
67 Years Ago

The Mayor told the Council it was his intention to use the quarry as a dump so that residents of Wollaston, Norfolk Downs and Atlantic could use it to dispose of their trash rather than carting it to the city dump on the marshes off Sea St.

However, the mayor's announcement stirred such a controversy among the neighbors that he was forced to call a public hearing on the issue.

"This quarry has been here for 60 years and has never been stagnant," wrote Mr. H. K. Ellis of 36 Warwick St. "Only one child has been lost during that time and he did not belong here."

"The residents of this section of Wollaston would thank the Atlantic Improvement Association to look to their own dump holes and leave us alone."

Meanwhile, Rep. Alfred N. LaBracque conferred with State Atty. Gen. Arthur K. Reading and Public Safety Commissioner Brig. Gen. Alfred W. Foote on the legal procedure necessary to construct fences or guard rail around the quarries in the city.

OIL PERMIT DENIED

The City Council voted 6-3 in favor of a resolution, proposed by Ward 2 Councillor John P. Flavin, that would prohibit issuance of a permit to the Standard Oil Co. for construction of tanks in which to store oil and other flammable fluids in Baker Yacht Basin Quincy Point.

Between 800 and 900 residents of Quincy Point had signed a petition against permitting such oil storage on grounds neighboring streets that were too narrow for oil trucks and the tanks eventually would pollute two nearby bathing beaches.

Dom's Salmon Cakes

Our son Dom was returning one of my dishes and in it he had a salmon cake he wanted me to taste, which he said was a nice change from ordinary fish cakes.

Naturally, it was delicious as he is a great cook. Here is his recipe which serves six, with one for mom.

Dom's Salmon Cakes

- 1 10 ounce can of salmon
- 1 egg
- a tablespoon fresh parsley (minced)
- a dash of tobacco
- 1/8 cup white wine
- a stalk of celery (finely chopped)

1/2 small onion (minced)

juice of a lemon

olive oil for cooking

1 cup seasoned bread crumbs

In a frying pan, heat the olive oil and saute the celery, the onion and add the wine. Remove from heat and add all other ingredients except the lemon. Form in patties and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes. For pan frying, lightly grease the pan then cook until golden brown. Sprinkle lemon on top before serving. Dom said they can also be served with a hollandaise sauce.

U.S. Capitol Traveling Exhibition At Adams Site

The Adams National Historical site will present a traveling exhibition on the United States Capitol July 18 to Aug. 29.

Organized jointly by the American Architectural Foundation (AAF) and the architect of the Capitol, the exhibition traces the architectural evolution of the building.

The exhibit will be located at the Visitor Center of the Adams National Historic Site, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center (President's Place), and will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week.

Reproduction prints, paintings, drawings and photographs will illustrate the Capitol's early construction, its gutting by the British during the War of 1812 and subsequent reconstruction, the extension and domes designed by Thomas U. Walter and 20th century changes made to the structure.

The exhibit focuses on the architectural evolution of the structure of the Capitol and provides a context to view the career and contributions of one of its most important members, John Quincy Adams.

After the exhibit closes at the Adams National Historical Site on August 29, it will continue to travel nationally under the administration of the AAF's exhibition program.

Recreation Department Director Barry Welch

A Career Which Is All Fun And Games

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. What do you see as the recreation department's main function in the city?

A. Well, the main function of our programs is to provide all kinds of recreational opportunities. Most of the programs are associated with the youth, but our mission does include adults, and we do have adult programs. And what we try to do is provide opportunities that include as wide and as varied activities as we can. Not necessarily exclusively the coaching of small groups of small interests, but to get the adults and the youngsters involved in a mainstream of recreational activities be it sports, arts and crafts, or social activities that provide an opportunity for them to use their leisure time creatively, we hope.

Q. You offer a number of programs. What are some of the better-known programs, and which are perhaps lesser-known?

A. Well, we think the best-known programs are probably the ones that are most visible. We still supervise, and will be opening very shortly, some 21 playgrounds throughout the neighborhoods of the city. And those serve thousands of Quincy youngsters in the course of the summer, and they serve as the base of our programs. We're particularly pleased with our Happy Acres Day Camp for handicapped children, which we've won national acclaim for, and I think the people that come in contact with it know how great a service it provides. But it may not be as well-known throughout the community as some of our other programs.

We're pleased with our boating and sailing program. We have 27 miles of waterfront, and we think it's highly appropriate that we teach sailing in Quincy.

But the best-known, and probably the one we've achieved great recognition for is our swimming program. We have that at the Lincoln-Hancock (Community School's) pool. We've taught thousands and thousands of youngsters to swim. And their parents watch that program, because they have to take the youngsters to the swim lessons, so it's extremely visible, and for every youngster we service an adult as well, because they're probably driving their folks up their to the lessons. So everybody knows about that program.

Q. What else can you tell our readers about Happy Acres?

A. Happy Acres was founded in 1963; it was originally a Kennedy Foundation camp. And one of the things we're particularly pleased with is the fact that the camp pre-existed long before Chapter 766 laws, meaning that this community had a desire, and didn't have to be mandated, to run this program. And we still operate with that philosophy that the youngster with a disability has the same rights to recreation as those in our community who may be able-bodied. So we still approach that with a zeal, because we think it's extremely important that we service all participants in our community.

The program runs during July and August, and we ask that the youngsters be at least age 6, and then there are some requirements that we work on with the school system in evaluating youngsters as to whether the camp is an appropriate site for them. They have a wonderful time there, and they do all the recreational things that the so-called "normal population" does from boating and sailing to kickball, wiffleball and arts and crafts. It's just a real delight, and it's a joy to me because it's right outside my door (at 100 Southern Artery).

Q. And Mayor James Sheets is also initiating a new gym program.

A. Yes, that's true. Of course, we already have our long-standing winter program where we run an after-school and Saturday program in every gymnasium in the City of Quincy with the exception of the high schools. The only reason that we're not in the high schools is because they're so extensively used by the school department. The mayor has indicated to me that we're going to be increasing the night use for middle schools and high schools primarily starting in

A MAN FOR ALL (Sports) Seasons—Recreation Director Barry Welch displays some of the sporting and recreation equipment his department uses in running various programs for city residents.

FULL NAME: Barry John Welch

AGE: 47

ADDRESS: Montclair

OCCUPATION: director of the Quincy Recreation Department since 1982; overall, has been with the department full-time since 1969

EDUCATION: graduated from North Quincy High School, 1965; received bachelor of science degree in recreation education (1975) and master of science degree in recreation and leisure studies (1977) from Northeastern University in Boston

FAMILY: married to the former Marilyn Lynch. They have two children: Stacey, 24 and Brendan, 17

September. We'll be doing a 40-week program, one in each ward, to get things started. And I'm extremely pleased that the mayor has found a way to put those programs back. We did have them during most of the '70s and up until 1981, and then cutbacks forced us to stop those evening programs in order to save some of our other programs.

Hopefully they'll be more to come as funding becomes available. We're really looking forward to it, and I think this community recognizes the need to get middle school and high school students off the streets.

Q. Mayor Sheets is known to be very pro-recreation, and I imagine he's always been very supportive to you in general.

A. The mayor has been extremely supportive of our mission. We have constant conversations, and he seeks ways to fund it. I don't envy any mayor's position to balance budgets, and it's extremely difficult. But this mayor has youngsters who grew up in our programs; he has a vision of what the community should be doing and he's worked with us very, very closely in getting that vision into reality. The bond issue that is before the City Council ($2.9 million of which is earmarked for the city's parks and playgrounds) is the largest bond issue in my tenure as director of recreation. It's going to be a real boost to this community.

Q. I'm sure countless numbers of people use the city's recreation programs, and pretty much from when they start walking all the way up to senior citizens.

A. Well, we get them before they start walking, because we have a superb parent-tot swimming program up at the pool, and if you go up to our Family Swim, you'll find infants up there with their mothers and fathers. And all the way up—we know for a fact that we have a 100-year-old person, whose name is Al Benedetti, who enrolls in one of our programs and takes part. The late Bill Ryan, who was the recreation director here and my mentor, used to kid and say "from the basket to the casket," and I think it's an appropriate term.

Q. Summertime must be the busiest time of the year for you. I imagine you depend on a lot of volunteers.

A. The latter part of June prior to school getting out is the busiest time for several reasons: one is that we're getting ready for an extensive summer program with 17 sports camps, 21 playgrounds, boating and sailing. The swimming pool is a mission in and of itself; we teach close to 800 people a week in our swim lessons.

We do use volunteers in our programs, primarily in our day camp and our boating and sailing program. But the bulk of our work is done by part-timers; last year, we had 136 part-time season or seasonal employees who worked in the department.

Q. Have you seen an increase in participation since the recession began preventing people from seeking more expensive entertainment?

A. Yes. We started in 1981 with our summer sports camps which were a low-cost alternative to youngsters going away to residential and day camp. I started in 1981 with two and we now have some 17 offerings, I believe, this year in those camps, and the highest cost is $35. So we've seen huge growth in that area.

The free playground programs, the free tennis lessons, the minimal fee that you have to pay at the boating and sailing area—I've talked to people who have indicated to me that they are unable to go away the way they used to and they find that we're the oasis of the city and that they're able to participate in some of our programs because they're free or of very, very low cost.

Q. Let's talk about you. You trained for this kind of work, and so I imagine you must have been very athletic as a kid.

A. I'm not sure anyone would classify me as athletic (smiles). I did find great delight in participating in sports, at the high school level primarily.

One of the things I've always enjoyed about this job is that folks come to us voluntarily. All of our programs are voluntary; they come here because they want to. Working with people in that environment is extremely fulfilling.

Most folks have a pretty good frame of mind, so that's what I enjoy most about this work. That's what I think kept me in it. Everybody's having fun here, and that's not a bad environment to work in.

Q. You're known to be a big Boston College fan, but you're a Northeastern grad. What's the story there?

A. Subway alumni (smiles). I've always enjoyed college football, and I pre-date the (Doug) Flutie years, so we have to say that, but Boston College always provided, for college football fans, the best football. I watched (former Houston Oilers) Earl Campbell, I watched (former Dallas Cowboy) Tony Dorsett and the likes of that come into Alumni Stadium.

Q. You actually predicted last year's shocking Boston College victory over Notre Dame. Sun Editor Bob Bosworth wanted to get your prediction for the game the two teams will play later this year.

A. (Laughs). We'll have to wait for that prediction. That was a premonition that came to me immediately prior to the game.

Q. In a dream?

A. We're not going to say in a dream (laughs), but it was a premonition. We'll just have to wait and see how the vibes are for this year, and we do have them (Notre Dame) at home. But I'm sure they'll (B.C.) do well.

Ceremony Marks Creation Of Family Commission

Mayor James Sheets held a ceremony at his office last week in recognition of the creation of the Quincy Family Commission.

Sheets originally announced plans for the city ordinance to create such a commission—which was recently passed by the City Council—in February.

The mayor said the members of the commission have not yet been appointed. The commission will have 17 members, including 13 mayoral appointees and four members of the Quincy Family Council, an advisory group that represents a cross-section of families across the city, he said.

Quincy Family Commission is to aid needy Quincy families by providing a database of information on area service organizations including hospitals and other medical centers, schools, rehabilitation centers, food pantries, shelters for the homeless and abused, and other community groups.

Once established, all such information will be available simply by calling the commission, which will be able to call up data at the touch of a button, the mayor said. A commission headquarters has not yet been chosen, he added.

Sheets said the commission will be run at no expense to the city. If the group needs funding for any reason, money will either be taken from the "special activities" account funded by the sale of city department surplus items at the Quincy City Store or else raised from private donations.

Sheila deBettencourt, co-chairperson of the city's Early Childhood Community Task Force and a member of the mayor's Family Commission Task Force, said she was thrilled by the approval of the commission.

"This commission puts Quincy out in front on the urgent need for communities to take back responsibility for their children," she said. "It provides an opportunity for every segment of the community in their efforts to raise their children."

A CEREMONY WAS held in the mayor's office last week in recognition of the creation of the Quincy Family Commission. Mayor James Sheets (seated) ceremonially "signed" the group into law after an ordinance to establish the commission was recently passed by the City Council. Among the city officials and Family Commission Task Force members in attendance were, from left, Carls Steensen, Janet DiTullio, Linda Horner, Alicia Coletti, City Council President Michael Cheney, School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, Sara Yarochuk, John Eaton and Sheila deBettencourt.

CP Of South Shore Planning Annual Auction

Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore announces plans for the fourth Annual Auction to be held at the Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., West Quincy, on Friday, Oct. 21.

Auction Committee Chairman Don Uvanite also announced that WJDA, The Quincy Sun and Quincy Cable will co-sponsor the event. "We are very excited about our three local media outlets providing us with the support that will make this event even more successful than it has been in the past," he said.

The auction was initially held in 1991 and has raised over $8,000 each year since, a combined $25, 679. This will be the first year that the auction will be held at the Quincy Sons of Italy.

Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore is a non-profit organization providing a variety of services to disabled children, adults and their families throughout metropolitan Boston, the South Shore, southeastern Massachusetts, the Cape and the Islands.

The organization runs the Childrens Developmental Disabilities Center, a facility located on Adams St. in Quincy, that provides therapeutic, educational, psychological, social and recreational programs for developmentally disabled children from six months to eight years old.

"Our agency also runs a home care program called Options," noted Executive Director Tom Zukauskas. "This project involves services to individuals of all ages and a variety of problems who are trying to maintain a greater sense of independence and who may be trying to stay in their home or apartment as opposed to a nursing facility or other institutional setting," Zukauskas continued.

In conjunction with the Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Arts Council, Cerebral Palsy also runs an Adult Education-Recreation program.

"The auction is an important fundraiser for us to support these programs," Uvanite said, "and I'm grateful to have the support of WJDA, The Sun, Quincy Cable and so many local individuals serving on the Committee."

Flaherty of Hibernia Savings Bank, Helen Garvey of Rockland Trust, Joanne Gavoni of The Co-operative Bank, John Greene and Custom Transportation, Teresa Malcoss from Merrill Lynch, Georgia Pierce of PR Etc., Sheik Rahman from SAR Engineering and John Reed of Business Solutions.

Other committee members include: Christine Schultz from Boston Financial Data Services, Joe Shaddock of Shaddock Financial Group, Barbara Swartz from Boston Financial Data Services, Scott Boudreau from Shawmut Bank, Bill McCulkin from Quincy Cable, John Nicolson from WJDA, Henry Bosworth of The Quincy Sun, Donna Greene and Shirley Connor of CDDC, Corinne Connelly, Loraine Dunn-Chairperson of Cerebral Palsy's Board of Directors, Karen Gallagher, Frank Puccia, Matt LaBarre of Cerebral Palsy and Ann DiMatio-auction coordinator for Cerebral Palsy.

Anyone interested in assisting with the auction, contributing to the auction or in further information, should contact Cerebral Palsy in Quincy at 479-7443.

Do We Really Need Wal-Mart?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I feel compelled to comment on the Wal-Mart/Granite Crossing Project plan because the land was once owned by my family. Today I live one-half mile northeast of the site, two blocks from Quincy Avenue.

After emigrating from what is now Northern Ireland at the turn of the century, my grandfather bought 30 acres of land on Quincy Avenue and turned it into a dairy farm. His business, the Paul Hamill Milk Co, operated at the site until my family sold the land in 1938.

When I mention this to most Quincy residents, they react with disbelief, to think that a tranquil dairy farm once occupied a stretch of this busy avenue.

The last time this property was sold, it was intended to be part of the Falls project until the 'condo craze' of the 80's abruptly ended and only a portion of the development was built. Now that the 'condo craze' has been replaced by the 'hypermarket craze,' what happens when the market shifts (as it will) and we are left with vacant, warehouse-sized stores?

Quincy Avenue, from the Braintree line to Quincy Square, is already littered with vacant stores, from the two large anchor stores (a department store and a supermarket) at the Quintree Mall to vacancies in both President's Plaza and Pilgrim Plaza. It took tears for the Co-operative Bank to find tenants for its 85 Quincy Avenue property. Another supermarket and third store at the Wal-Mart site seem unnecessary.

Take a walk along Quincy Avenue, as I did recently. Try to cross the street at the Southern Artery intersection-be sure to allow plenty of time for this! Listen to the traffic noise. The volume of traffic and noise there is almost unbelievable now, and it will be much worse with a large retail development at the site. Quincy Avenue and the Southern Artery are not large enough to handle the volume of traffic they handle now. Proposed improvements to this intersection will not help the increased traffic we already have on adjacent residential streets in the Quincy Avenue/Southern Artery area.

Do we really need Wal-Mart? Will it offer products that are not already available at other Quincy businesses? Will it improve our neighborhood and enhance our quality of life?

As a third generation resident of the area, I don't think so.

Urges Council To Approve Wal-Mart

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have been following the events in the city surrounding the Granite Crossing and I hope the project is accepted by the City Council.

I am very impressed with all developer, Donald J. MacKinnon has offered to do for the Falls residents and for the City of Quincy. If anyone can make this work, he can. I have heard him speak and I trust him; he'll do the things he has promised. His offer to The Falls condominium residents is more than generous. They know what they'll be getting so they should accept his offer. If this project does not go through and another developer comes along they may not be so lucky. I think it's a great thing for the City of Quincy and for the residents of The Falls condominiums.

In the end, everyone will come out ahead. The city will have a revitalized Fore River area. The Falls will have landscaping, roadway improvements and a lot of money to use for their condo development. The downtown will have funding to help with the mayor's revitalization plans. The residents will have first class discount shopping right here in town and everyone will get the benefits of the taxes paid to the city.

I hope the City Council will vote positively for this development.

Granite Crossing Shopping Center Will Have Positive Impact

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a Quincy resident, I feel it is important for me to speak out about something that I am strongly in favor of and believe will greatly benefit Quincy. The proposed Granite Crossing Shopping Center will help the city by bringing stores and customers back home, thus having a positive economic impact on Quincy.

Many of us agree with D.J. MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development, who said, "The major competitive problem facing Quincy retailers today is the fact that local residents are making a major share of their retail purchases outside of the city."

I remember once Quincy had a very vibrant downtown retail environment. Hancock Street and Quincy Avenue is where I did most of my shopping for school clothes to birthday and Christmas presents, etc. The only reason we may have shopped elsewhere, is simply because we couldn't find what we were looking for. Today, from Hancock Street on up through Quincy Avenue there is a lack of anchor stores, and there is certainly a need for additional department stores such as WalMart to be built.

From what I understand, this project will bring much needed jobs and tax revenue to Quincy. In addition, it will bring traffic improvements, and when completed, will pay the city over $500,000 in new taxes.

It is for these very important reasons that the proposed Granite Shopping Center must get built. Thank you very much!

Quincy Hospital Receives Blue Ribbon Award

Quincy Hospital was recently awarded a Blue Ribbon for innovative healthcare delivery for its Quincy Heights program from the New England Health Care Assembly (NEHA).

The awards are given annually to health care projects which have a direct impact in addressing health status, social issues and community problems.

The hospital was recognized for its innovative inpatient and outpatient psychiatric treatment program, Quincy Heights Center for Emotional Health. This program was developed in 1990 to meet the mental health needs of Quincy's large elderly population in this region. The program focuses on people 55 and older who are experiencing depression anxiety or stress.

Quincy Heights was one of the first geropsychiatric programs in the state and was responsible for organizing the first depression screening in the country in September, 1990.

In its first year of the inpatient treatment program, the need for elderly mental health services proved to be so great that the program was consistently filled to capacity. Quincy Heights opened a companion partial hospitalization program on 1991, which provides intensive outpatient mental health services to people who have completed inpatient treatment and still need therapy, but do not require inpatient psychiatric treatment.

Due to the success of this companion program, Quincy Heights expanded its partial hospitalization program in 1993 by creating a partnership with the Hollingsworth House Nursing & Retirement Facility in Braintree. This program offers services geared toward the difficulties nursing home residents may experience when entering a retirement community or during their stay. The partial program offers residents support, structure and direction in coping with many social, interpersonal and emotional challenges they face on a daily basis.

Several other collaborative partial hospitalization programs are now being developed between Quincy Hospital and retirement facilities in southeastern Massachusetts.

As a Blue Ribbon winner, the hospital created a display for the NEHA annual meeting held recently at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston and was prominently identified in the NEHA Annual Meeting program book, which was sent to 30,000 healthcare executives

Legion Baseball

Morrisette Takes Two Out Of Three

Morrisette had yet another two-win, one-loss week in American Legion baseball action. They beat Braintree and Weymouth and lost to Canton as their record moved to 8-4 with 10 games left to play.

Dave Reinhart provided the final inning heroics in a 6-5 win over Braintree. With the game tied 5-5 in the seventh, Reinhart's blast left the ball yard over the right center fence at Adams Field and ended the contest.

Braintree jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning when they noticed two singles and a double off starter Mike Kenney. Mike Goggins recorded the two-bagger. A Morrisette run against Braintree ace Mike Irvine in the bottom of the inning cut the lead in half.

In the bottom of the fourth, Morrisette scored four times to take a 5-2 lead. Extra-base hits by Jim Sapienza (double) and Mark Cahill (triple) and a single by Neil Connelly led to the runs. The home squad was also aided by a Braintree wild pitch and three-base error.

Braintree stormed back to tie it in the sixth on a single by Ed Little, triple by Al Simpson, an error and a double steal. With two out in the sixth, Pat Bryan replaced Kenney on the mound. Bryan faced deep water in the seventh as Braintree loaded the bases, but a superb stop by Connelly at first base ended the threat and set up Reinhart's wallop in the bottom of the inning.

Bryan was credited with the win. Irvine took the loss.

Two hits each were recorded by Reinhart, Sapienza and Cahill. Connelly and Kenney both notched one.

In an error-plagued contest, Canton scored 18 runs in the final three innings to crush Morrisette, 18-11.

Morrisette was unable to hold on to an early 6-0 lead. It was their second loss to Canton this season.

The 10 errors committed by the Quincy men negated a solid day at the plate. Highlighting the offense was Reinhart's consecutive home runs in his first two at bats which gave Morrisette a 3-0 lead. He ended the contest with three RBIs and three runs scored. A.J. Carthas went 3 for 4 with a double and an RBI. Sapienza notched two hits, including a triple and an RBI. Andy Joyce had one hit and two RBIs. Dave Duncan and Connelly each recorded singles.

Morrisette bounced back from the loss with a 10-1 win over Weymouth.

They sent 10 men to bat in the first to give starting pitcher Tom Malvesti a comfortable 6-0 cushion.

Malvesti allowed Weymouth their lone run in the bottom half of the first but hung tough the rest of the way as he earned his third W of the season. He scattered seven hits and walked two while striking out 10. Malvesti has recorded 39 K's in 22 innings of work.

Hits by Carthas, Connelly, Joey Biagini and Sapienza and walks by Cahill, Reinhart (intentional) and Joyce led to the six-run first inning. Chris Cotter squeezed home Joyce to record an RBI.

Morrisette scored another run in the fourth when Reinhart singled in Cahill.

The added their final three runs in fifth when, after consecutive walks, a three-base error allowed Malvesti come home on what should have been a routine single.

Morrisette recorded just seven hits, all singles, but they were able to capitalize on several costly errors by Weymouth.

Morrisette travels to Holbrook Friday for a 6 p.m. game and visits West Roxbury Monday for a 8 p.m. contest. They host Wollaston at Adams Field next Wednesday (July 13) at 8:30.

Quincy Girls Under 10 Win Six-On-Six Foxboro Tourney

The Quincy Youth Soccer under 10 girls travel team captured the title at the annual Six-on-Six Foxboro Memorial Day Weekend Tournament.

Quincy qualified for the three-game final set with a tie and two wins in the opening round. In their first game against Foxboro they battled to a 0-0 tie. They went on to beat Plainville 6-2 and Stow 5-0.

During the final round Quincy did not allow a goal. Lightning-quick forwards, tough defensive play and superb goalkeeping by Jill Baker allowed Quincy to shut down Foxboro, Walpole and Mansfield, consecutively.

Quincy scored the only goal they needed in a 1-0 final game win over Mansfield.

Quincy scored 12 goals in the six-game tourney and allowed just two goals against. Scoring for Quincy were Allison Lacey, Lauren Kalil, Melissa Lumaghini, Kellie Conley, Jennifer Djerf and Lauren Sleeth.

Also leading Quincy to victory were Caitlin Herlihy, Jill Baker, Lisa Kelly, Melissa Lumaghini, Katie Markhard and Kathleen Hester.

The girls were coached by Tom Herlihy and his assistant Ron Kalil.

St. John's Baseball

National League Rallies Over American League, 14-7

Five runs in both the fourth and fifth innings broke a tie and led the National League past the American League, 14-7, in the St. John's Farm League All-Star game.

Singles by Liam Powers, Nick Duke and James Paskel helped power the National's five-run surge in the bottom of the fourth. Dan Cosgrove hit what appeared to be a home run blast but he was tagged out on a great play at the plate. The five runs gave the Nationals a 9-4 lead.

The Nationals took a commanding 14-4 lead with five more runs in the bottom of the fifth. Bruise Brother Nick Transiglia's roundtrip blast was the highlight of the inning.

The National League took an early 4-0 lead in the bottom of the first. Bill Cosgrove and A.J. Goodman both hit singles and Brian Rooney belted a two-run double after hurler James Paskel had struck out the side to open the contest.

The American League fought back to tie the game with one run in the second and three in the third.

In the second, Phil Abou-zaki's home run shot scored the American League's first run. Hurler Dan Coughlin mowed down the National League batters to close the inning.

A Justin Ksny double and a Keith Durgin dinger helped the Americans tie the contest, 4-4, in the third.

After the National League took the 14-4 lead, the Americans did their best to come back. In the top of the sixth Ksny hit a single and Abou-zaki clubbed a two-run triple. They sent another run across the plate in the seventh to make the final score 14-7.

Paskel recorded the win for coach Fran Sandomato's National League ball club.

Also getting hits in the game were Craig McKechine and John Paul White of the Nationals.

Connecting with the ball solidly were Tom Callahan, Lynn Valentino and Kelly Powers.

CRANK CALLS

When selecting a car battery, consumers are advised to pay attention to the battery's "cold-cranking amp rating." This is a measure of the battery's starting power. Technically, the cold-cranking amp rating is the amount of current that a battery produces for 30 seconds at 0 degrees F, without dropping below 7.2 volts. To the consumer, the universally accepted cold-cranking amp rating represents a yardstick by which different batteries can be compared. The problem arises when some manufacturers introduce the "cranking-amp rating" (or "warm-cranking amp rating") which measures battery output at 32 degrees F. Because a battery produces more current in warm weather than cold, this latter rating method may confuse urinary consumers with "apples and oranges" comparisons.

HINT: A general rule of thumb, an amp rating at 32 degrees F will average 25 percent higher than one at 0 degrees F.

Junior League

Continental Explodes, 12-7, Elks Edge Burgin, 7-6

Continental Cable remained in the hunt for a Junior League playoff spot with a 12-7 extra-inning win over Kiwanis.

Cable exploded for seven runs in the extra frame to seal the victory. Peter Turowski led off with a booming triple and was singled home by Billy Davis. Davis came home when Pat Bregoli, Ryan Hutchings and Joe Ardagna walked. Justin Hall was beamed to force in another. Two more runs scored after Didier Alther reached on a fielder's choice and Mark Dunn singled. Turowski crushed his second triple of the inning for the final runs.

Kiwanis jumped to an early 2-1 lead when Matt O'Mahoney's base hit knocked home Jeff Peterson and Mike Carloni after both had singled. Other Kiwanis hits were nailed by Carloni (two home runs), Jim Mateau (RBI-double) and O'Mahoney (single).

Also getting hits for Cable were Hutchings (triple), Danny Duggan (triple) and Ardagna (double).

Hall struck out seven for Cable while Kiwanis hurler Carloni notched nine K's.

T.J. Bell's three hits and seven RBIs led South Shore Buick to an 18-11 decision over Quincy Police.

J.T. Stevens and Neal Gavin also helped pace the win with two hits and three RBIs each. Miah Hasson cracked a bases-loaded double and played well behind the plate.

David Centrella, John Fidalgo and John Gavin worked the mound for the winning club. Joe Holleran, Matt Holt and John Gavin backboned the defense.

Rookie hurler Phil McGillicuddy pitched four strong innings to lead the Elks to an exciting 7-6 win over Burgin Plater.

McGillicuddy mowed down seven batters, including the final three he faced to end the contest with the tying run on second. Frank Alibrandi worked the mound for two scoreless innings.

The Elks clung to the win after a six-run third inning gave them a 7-2 lead. Gregory McGinness went 2 for 2 with an RBI while Billy Miller nailed a roundtripper, scored twice and knocked in two. Matt Barrett had a key hit and made several good defensive plays. David Armstrong made three sensational plays in one inning to keep Burgin Plater from scoring.

BP's Brendan Bowes, Joe MacRitchie and Brian McMahon each had two hits. McMahon clubbed a home run. Andrew Mannix suffered the loss in the tightly contested battle.

The eighth annual Lipton Cup Regatta will be held July 23-24 at Squantum Yacht Club.

Registration will be held on Friday, July 22, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

The Lipton Regatta will host 1,000 sailors from Canada to Florida. Classes of sailboats expected to race are N10, Optimist, Laser, International and Club 420, One Design 14, Hustler, Tornado, Thunderbird and Mercury as well as the ocean racing PHRF boats. The New England Open for N10 and Turnabout boats will be adjudicated within the Lipton Cup Regatta.

The Thomas J. Lipton Company sponsors the event. The trophy, originally given to the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association in 1930 by tea magnate, Thomas J. Lipton, was first awarded to Herbert Albright in the Indian Class. The trophy, standing nearly three feet, is once again the object of competition after more than 55 years of inactivity.

Pre-registration forms are available at all of the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs in the South Shore area, or by contacting Don McGilvray at 617-328-5730.

The Regatta will utilize a technologically advanced scoring system for its race management.

PHRF, Low Point and Olympic scoring systems will be used during the races which will take place on four Quincy Bay race courses. Four race committee boats will be equipped with portable computers to monitor race progress and fax machine will transmit fast results. All software is by John Collins.

In addition, fax equipment has also been installed at the yacht club in order to communicate results to newsmakers as it develops. Please RSVP in information is required by fax.

The Thomas J. Lipton Company will be the primary regatta sponsor. Additional sponsors include Sailing Magazine, Caruso Jewelers and Ralph DiMattia Sailmakers.

International League

Samborski Leads Noll Past Mansfield

The International League's Jeurik Samborski did it on the mound and at the plate to give Noll Electrical an 11-8 win over Steve Mansfield, CPA.

Samborski went 4 for 4 with a single, two doubles and a triple while holding the opposition to just five hits. The whirlwind added four stolen bases and 15 K's to his totals for the day.

He was aided by the sticks of Chris Geary (triple) and Brad Brooks (double). Charlie Doberty walked four times and stole five bases. Defensive gems were turned in by Chuck O'Brien, Rob Blaikie and Billy Norris. First baseman O'Brien saved two, maybe three runs, when he picked off a bases-loaded line drive that was destined for deep right field.

Jamie MacIsaac's double and John Leuchte's two singles and four stolen bases were atop the Mansfield, CPA balance sheet. Along with Joe Barkhouse, Tony DiBona and Brad McAuley, they were the team's top defensive players.

The bats of Everlasting Engraving pounded out several huge hits as they bullied their way past Feenan Financial Services, 18-8.

Both Johnny Ly and Billy O'Connell cracked roundtrippers for the winning squad. John Hanifan and Patrick McDonough notched two triples apiece. Two batters were recorded by Matt and Jeff Langille. Matt Langille combined with Paul Infrerra for an outstanding putout at second. Chris Mannix also played well in the field.

Feenan's Mike Struzik nailed two home runs. John Lewis had three base hits. John Phillips (two singles) and Brian Wells (double) also hit the ball well. T.J. Wilson was Feenan's defensive standout.

Jarrod Decelle recorded the win.

Noll Electrical was scheduled to play Hennessy Appliance in first round playoff action slated to begin Tuesday, July 5. Everlasting Engraving will take on Osco Drug Thursday, July 7. Both first round games will be played at Fore River Field.

Sugarbowl Five Mile Run July 21

The Seventh annual Sugarbowl Five-Miler will be held Thursday, July 21 at 6:30 p.m.

The race, hosted by the L Street Running Club of South Boston, starts at the Bayside Expo center, runs along Day Boulevard to the MDC skating rink and ends back at the Expo Center. Last year 200 runners from Quincy took part.

Prizes are awarded to the top three male and female finishers in each division: ages 15 and under, 16-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59, 60-plus, wheelchair, walker, heavyweight (male, 200-pounds-plus; female, 140-plus) and super heavyweight (male, 225-plus).

Interested persons can find entry applications at the James Michael Curley Recreation Center or can register in person on race day from 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. at the Bayside Expo Center. The entry fee is $12. Proceeds benefit the South Boston Collaborative Summer Program, The Liver Foundation, the James Michael Curley Recreation Center and the Ron Burton Training Camp.

The Sugarbowl Five-Miler was listed as one of the "Best Races in New England" by New England Runner magazine.

Last year's race drew over 1,300 runners, and this year's promises to be even bigger.

For more information call John "Mac" McDermott at 331-1761.

Babe Ruth

Ploof Pitches, Bats Morrisette To Win

Ryan Ploof notched three base hits at the plate and gave up just two on the mound as he led Morrisette to a 16-2 win over Local.

Ploof recorded six K's. Local pitcher Eric Wirtz fanned eight in the loss.

Morrisette's Anthony Caprigno (single, home run), Mike Green (two doubles) and Jeff Feiner (double) used the stick well. Also hitting well were Jonathon Haddad and Jason Crossman with two singles each. Dave Keddy and Rich Rose were strong in the field.

Local's top batsmen were Jim Conlon and Steve Maze with a double and a single, respectively. Each starred on the defense as well.

Mike Doyle pitched three-plus innings of spectacular relief for Fire Dept. as they topped the league-leading Elks, 4-3.

The Elks held a 3-2 advantage in the fourth when Doyle stepped on the mound with runners on second and third. Doyle picked off one man at third and struck out the next for the innings second out. Billy Walker made a big play when he threw out a man stealing third for the side's final out. Doyle fanned seven and allowed just one hit over the final three innings.

In the fifth, Fire Dept. scored two runs to give them the 4-3 lead. Key hits in the game for Fire Dept. were recorded by Manny Vasquez (double, single), and Mike McLaughlin (RBI single). Others with hits were Walker (double), Doyle and Bobby Walsh (infield hit).

For the Elks, Eric Wood and Andrew Byrne notched two hits apiece. The Elks had won four consecutive one-run games before dropping this decision.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Dave "Dinger" Reinhart, brawny left-handed slugger for the Morrisette American Legion baseball team, pulled off an amazing feat last week. In three consecutive at-bats he smashed home run shots over the fence at spacious Adams Field - something that perhaps no one has ever done before.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Morrisette scorekeeper Berger Ryan. "And I've talked to others like George Page, who have seen a lot more games than I have, and they've never seen it either."

Reinhart's first poke, a 380-foot seventh-inning shot over the right-center fence, provided the decisive margin in Morrisette's 6-5 win over Braintree. His second roundtripper came in his first at-bat against Canton. It scored two runs and flew an estimated 390 feet.

Reinhart's third shot was his most impressive. It cleared the second fence in center field, landing some 430 feet from home plate. As a point of reference, that ball would have been a bleacher-reacher at Fenway, with its 420-foot alley down the middle of the outfield.

Dave the Dinger, a three-year starter at center field for Morrisette, currently attends the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on a baseball scholarship and is a 1993 graduate of North Quincy High School where he was a USA Today All-American in football.

Patti Zollner McColl of Quincy was selected for induction into the Curry College Athletic Hall of Fame.

Zollner McColl was a tri-captain of the 1987 women's soccer team which finished with a 14-4 record, a number one ranking in New England and a number five ranking nationally. That year she was named to the NCAA Division III All-New England Second Team.

The Hall of Fame induction ceremony will be held Sept. 23 at the Dedham Place Hilton.

Sean Halpin, the 6-foot-1-inch, 225-pound defensive stalwart of last year's North Quincy High School football team, received a full scholarship to play football at the University of New Haven in the fall.

Halpin was a Red Raider captain last season, his second as a starting linebacker. His awards and accomplishment were multitudinous (many, for the kids out there): He led the Red Raiders in tackles during the 1993 season and was a member of both the Old Colony League and Division I all-star teams. His performance against Quincy High on Thanksgiving Day was without equal - he received the Coach Jack Donabue Award as the Thanksgiving Day Game's Most Valuable Player and was given the QHS/NQHS Hall of Fame Outstanding Lineman Award for the havoc he wreaked on Turkey Day. Thanks to Halpin, NQ was able to stuff the potent President attack. Quincy was unable to score until the fourth quarter as North won, 14-7.

The University of New Haven football team competes at the Division II level and will soon upgrade to the I-AA level.

Halpin will study Criminal Justice.

Two young Quincy men were honored for their contributions to the Suffolk University baseball team at the school's annual athletic banquet.

Mark Swirlbalas, a graduate of Catholic Memorial High School, was named the Suffolk University baseball team's Rookie of the Year. The first baseman batted .297.

Former North Quincy High School star Steve Lowd was cited for Outstanding Contribution to the Suffolk University baseball program. He batted .336 while working the mound and playing outfield.

Mark Kellner of Quincy was also a member of the Suffolk ball club. The sophomore first baseman and outfielder batted .283.

Recreation Department Summer Sports And Instructional Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department is sponsoring its 12th annual summer sports camps and instructional workshop program, announces Director Barry Welch.

"These camps have been designed to give Quincy residents a low cost alternative for youngsters who desire specialized instruction which is usually associated with high costing residential camps," Welch said. "The week-long programs are under the direction of highly qualified coaches and staff from the area, and will feature individual instruction with an approximate ratio of 1 to 10."

Several changes have been made in this year's programs, Welch noted.

The basketball camp will now host separate camps for boys and girls. There will also be a new non-contact football camp with staff from both Quincy and North Quincy High School and the Quincy Youth Football League.

Registration for all of the 1994 programs began Wednesday, June 15 and will continue weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Recreation Department Office, 100 Southern Artery. Enrollment is limited and is taken on a first come, first serve basis.

Recreation Programs Underway

Barry Welch, Recreation Director, announces the opening of a variety of Recreation Department sponsored programs for the summer of 1994.

Among the programs are the summer playgrounds, boating and sailing instruction, and instructional and recreational swimming.

The department supervises 21 neighborhood playground which opened last Friday. The playgrounds are open Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. for a seven-week period.

Sports, games, arts and crafts as well as field trips and special events are scheduled. The playground activities are for children ages 6 to 16. Playground leaders will have additional schedule information.

The Quincy Recreation Department William F. Bryan Boating and Sailing Facility is conducting registration for its annual program of rowing, sailing, windsurfing and canoeing instruction between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Lessons are at the facility adjacent to Black's Creek in Merrymount Park. Registration will continue weekdays throughout the summer.

Welch said the programs are open to all Quincy residents on a fee basis. The instructional program will be divided into age and skill classes.

Youths age 8-16 who have passed a qualifying swim test will be offered classes in rowing, sailing, canoeing and windsurfing from beginning to advanced levels. This program will be offered daily, with classes scheduled at various times.

Interested applicants may take the swim tests at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School Pool on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 7 p.m.

Adults may participate in all programs daily from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. On a limited basis, special adult instruction may be arranged during the day for adults who work evenings.

Adult and family sailing is conducted on weekends. Saturday and Sunday hours are 12 noon to 6 p.m. The entrance to the boathouse is the road adjacent to Adams Field that proceeds through Pageant Field to the boathouse parking lot.

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School Pool has re-opened with its instructional swim program, for preregistered participants.

The Lincoln-Hancock pool is also available for recreational swims. The pool is open to Quincy residents who obtain a participation card in the pool entrance on Water St. in South/West Quincy. There are a variety of memberships available for family, youth, adult and senior citizens.

The new schedule is as follows:

Family Swims: Monday through Friday, 6 p.m. to 6:50 p.m.; Monday, Wednesday, Friday, 7 p.m. to 7:50 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 1:50 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. or 2:40 p.m. to 3:20 p.m.

Quincy Native Dick Donovan

Former Baseball Player Scores With 100 Percent Recycled Plastic Lumber

During the 1950's and 1960's former professional baseball player and Quincy native Dick Donovan achieved career success wielding a wooden baseball bat.

Today, Donovan still carries around lumber, but it doesn't come from trees. Instead, the former pitcher for the Boston Braves, Chicago White Sox, Cleveland Indians and Washington Senators totes lumber made from 100 percent recycled plastic.

As the distributor for Earth Care Products of Massachusetts, Donovan markets the environmentally-friendly and virtually indestructible lumber to municipalities and other government offices as well as private industry and local schools and universities.

"I am proud of my work here in Massachusetts," Donovan said. "The recycled, plastic lumber products make a statement that we can take responsibility for the environment without sacrificing quality."

Donovan, who was born and raised in Quincy and attended North Quincy High School, first learned about Earth Care in 1993 from his long-time friend, Harold Gebert, who is the chairman of the board of the Florida-based Earth Care Products of America.

"The idea fascinated me," Donovan, who still has an office in the Dimmock Building on 1147 Hancock St., said. "I guess I was skeptical and didn't believe that such products could exist. But after I saw the actual lumber and the manufacturing process, I wanted to be involved."

Earth Care is the nation's leading manufacturer of recycled plastic lumber that makes its products from 100 percent post-consumer material such as milk cartons, trash bags, medicine vial caps and soda bottles. The company now manufactures its products at either its North Carolina or Tennessee plant, though Earth Care is planning to open at least one other manufacturing facility in the Northeast to accommodate the growing demand for the recycled lumber.

Donovan, a Cohasset resident for more than 30 years, believes Earth Care's commitment to recycling will spur potential customers to seek out the company's products. Recently, he placed recycled benches at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst where there is an Intermediate Processing Facility (IPF) which serves as a recycling model for other college throughout the country. The center is a cooperative effort between the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and other area colleges including Smith, Mount Holyoke, Amherst and Hampshire.

"The environmental benefits of our benches and other products are unmatched by any other product on the market," Donovan asserted. "Using Plastic Lumber can reduce the amount of landfill trash by 20 million pounds per year. The fiscal advantages are also apparent. We save taxpayers about 4.8 million annually in tipping and hauling fees."

To many outsiders, selling recycled plastic lumber may lack the glamour of pitching in the World Series, but Dick Donovan believes just the opposite.

"I made a contribution to baseball, but it's a rewarding feeling to be able to make a living doing something positive for the environment as well," Donovan concluded. "I think representing Earth Care gives me that opportunity and the incentive to succeed."

DICK DONOVAN, former professional baseball player relaxes on a bench made of recycled plastic at a Weymouth playground. The Quincy native distributes products made from 100 percent recycled plastic lumber from his office at 1147 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Donovan says other towns have expressed interest in the products, as well as the Mass. Turnpike Authority which is replacing deteriorating wood on some picnic benches with the plastic lumber.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that worry, like a rocking chair, will give you something to do, but it won't get you anywhere.

SCOTT DEWARE

Psychologists tell us that 80% of the things worried about never happen. It is said a good way to reduce worry is to write down the worst that could happen and see if the thing or things you worry about actually happen. It is claimed that facing the fact in this way can help you reduce worry. Maybe so. But, sadly, some people simply cannot face facts.

Yet, there is a way for everyone to overcome most worrying. Worrying is negative thinking... Replace such thoughts with positive thinking. The best positive thinking the world has ever heard of is the 22nd Psalm... "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me."... Believe it. Keep on believing it... Millions of people have proved it true...

City Officials' Pay Raises Approved

Sheets said he asked Executive Secretary Thomas Koch and Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger to review the salary schedule and come up with a standardized system for paying non-union workers. The new salary scale attempts to set pay categories based on job responsibility, which resulted in some employees getting larger raises than others.

For instance, City Solicitor Stephen McGrath received an 8 percent raise while Planning Director Richard Meade received a 2 percent raise, but both now make $55,000 a year.

The largest raises for full-time employees went to the mayor's top two aides, Koch and Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader, who each received 14 percent raises from $39,565 to $45,000.

Plumbing and Gas Inspectors Ralph Maher and Steven Mattes also received 14 percent raises, bringing their salaries up to $41,000, the same as the wire inspector and the weights and measures inspector earn.

Sheets said the police and fire chiefs received only 3 percent raises because he has "a problem" with municipal employees making more than $70,000.

Animal League Head Seeks Ordinance To Protect Circus, Carnival Animals

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The president of the Quincy Animal League will appear before the City Council to lobby for a law which would prohibit the use of animals in any circus or carnival permitted to appear in Quincy.

John McDuff said Tuesday that routine mistreatment of circus and carnival animals has occurred in communities throughout the state, including Quincy.

McDuff wrote a letter to Mayor James Sheets and the City Council last week after his group unanimously passed a resolution in favor of such an ordinance. In the letter, he says that the training, transportation and use of animals for performance and exhibition constitutes a "cruelty" to the animals that must be stopped.

"While you may view our (the Quincy Animal League's) proposal as denying 'fun' to others, please remember that the animals are not having fun," the letter states.

McDuff also notes in the letter that as society has changed, many practices and behaviors that were once considered commonplace have become unacceptable.

"Smoking near others, wearing fur, denying the vote to women, circus 'freak shows,' sexual harassment and even slavery were once permissible by law or custom," the letter states. "Today they are not. We believe that as animal rights organizations locally and nationally bring this issue more into public focus, the use of circus animals will also go the way of other socially unacceptable practices."

McDuff also states in the letter that circuses and carnivals provide many other types of amusement without using animals, "and in that case we support them totally."

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, chairman of the City Council Ordinance Committee, said he has read McDuff's letter and will have him make a presentation before the council in the fall. Kolson said he has always been under the impression that circus and carnival animals are protected by law from cruel treatment, and would like proof that such treatment actually takes place.

In a phone interview, McDuff said he will be glad to give a general summary to the council about how the animals are mistreated. He added that he hopes to have representatives from other animal rights groups, such as the South Shore Humane Society, New England Anti-Vivisection Society and the Coalition to End Animal Suffering and Exploitation (CEASE) join him when he makes his presentation.

McDuff said carnivals and circuses that appear throughout Massachusetts routinely use animals in acts that are physically draining on them. As an example, McDuff cited one carnival that appeared in Quincy last year that featured "pig races" in which pigs had to run around a track many times during the course of a day in the sweltering summer heat.

"And pigs don't sweat, which makes it even harder on them," he said.

McDuff said the constant transportation of the animals from site to site in cramped trucks and transport cages and other routine practices that people might not think of as cruelty are indeed just that. He added that such small quarters are generally where the animals are kept when they are not performing.

McDuff said he hopes the attempt to create a new ordinance will, at the very least, increase public awareness about the situation. He also expressed confidence that such a law will one day be passed.

"I think it will come," he said. "We won't change people's minds overnight, but I think it will come."

City Council President Michael Cheney said he would be happy to take a look at such an ordinance if Kolson or any other councillor decided to draft it.

$230,000 Approved For Adams Site, First Parish

The U.S. House of Representatives has approved a request by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds for $230,000 to benefit United First Parish Church in Quincy Center and the Adams National Historic Site.

Studds made the announcement yesterday (Wednesday) at the church. The Senate will vote on the funds in the near future.

Half the money will be earmarked for operating expenses at the Adams Site and for the continuation of recently-established visitor service programs. The other $115,000 will go toward technical assistance in rehabilitating the church, which is one of the four locations that comprise the Adams Site.

United First Parish Church is known as "Church of the Presidents" because it contains the crypts of former Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives.

The increase in operational funds for the Adams Site brings its annual budget to more than $1.3 million for FY95, while the money for the church is a new appropriation. The National Park Service cannot directly rehabilitate an active church such as United First Parish, but it is permitted to provide technical assistance in the form of historic surveys and archaeology reports.

The church plans to raise private funds to begin needed structural and exterior repairs, Studds said.

The House of Representatives also recently approved a request from Studds for an additional $150,000 to finish a study of the Boston Harbor Islands.

The study, which began last summer, is being conducted by the Park Service in an attempt to examine ways to expand tourism on the islands and public education about them. As part of the study, the Park Service will also explore the possibility of linking management of the islands with the Adams Site.

Carnival Cancelled To Avoid Competition With Sidewalk Festival

A carnival scheduled for July 20-24 at Faxon Field has been cancelled because of concerns raised by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association that it would hurt its annual Sidewalk Festival to be held July 21-22-23.

City Councillor Michael Cheney, who is also chairman of Quincy's First Night which would have benefitted from the carnival, said Tuesday he would cancel the carnival and seek another date for it later this summer.

Cheney said First

Night, which sponsors Quincy's New Year's Eve non-alcoholic celebration, would have received $7,500 in proceeds from the carnival.

Of this, he said, $500 would have gone to starting an all-girls' soccer team and $2,000 would have gone to help pay for children's amusement rides during the QCBPA Sidewalk Festival.

Cheney, who said he would return the permits for the carnival to the License Board Wednesday said:

"Some business people expressed concerns the carnival would compete directly with the Sidewalk Festival. In the spirit of cooperation I have decided to cancel the appearance of the Fiesta Family Show."

"I certainly do not want to interfere with the downtown merchants' annual Sidewalk Sale. I personally do not feel the carnival would interfere but the business people did and out of concern for them I decided to cancel the carnival."

"I have discussed this with the mayor's office and with the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association."

BUSINESS & REAL ESTATE

Edward Keohane Elected President Of National Selected Morticians

Edward J. Keohane, the second generation owner of Keohane Funeral Service, Quincy, has been elected president of National Selected Morticians (NSM), an 1,10-member international non-profit association of independent, privately-owned funeral service firms.

Based on the changing role of the funeral director in the community, Keohane will adopt a theme of "Strategic Planning for the 90s" when he assumes office in September.

"The effects of 30 years of societal changes in parenting, care-giving and religious affiliation have altered the role of the funeral director," Keohane said. "Dramatic changes in the family as well as the lifestyles of Americans mean the funeral director is involved in far more than just handling the arrangements for the funeral and burial."

With religious affiliation declining, funeral directors are called on to assume roles once the exclusive province of the clergy. "Funeral directors rarely, if ever, were involved in planning the actual service," Keohane said. "Today, it is common."

The changes are resulting in less religious and more secular services, reflecting the attitudes of a growing segment of the population.

"Funeral directors must be far more caring and supportive to fill the needs of survivors. We are being asked about matters ranging from how to plan a service to financial issues," Keohane said.

Keohane joined NSM in 1968 and became a board member in 1992. As president, Keohane will travel nationally and internationally assisting member firms worldwide.

He is also a member and past president of the Massachusetts Funeral Directors Association, a member of the National Funeral Directors Association, a founder of Trust-100 Greater Boston Area, and a member of the International Order of the Golden Rule.

A lifelong Quincy resident, Keohane is also active in various civic and community causes. He serves as board secretary of the Colonial Federal Savings Bank, is a member and past president of the Quincy Rotary Club, and is a director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

He and his wife, the former Joan Hagan, have four children: Kristin Nelson, John, Dennis and Joseph Keohane.

Normand Grenier Named To Advisory Council

The Neighborhood Reinvestment Council Corporation announces that Normand Grenier, executive director of the Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services (NHS), has been appointed to a two-year term as a member of the Neighborhoods network's Advisory Council for the New England District.

Grenier has served as executive director of the Quincy NHS, a Neighborhood organization, since 1985. "We are quite pleased to have access to the talent, experience and expertise that is represented by this Council," said Neighborhood Reinvestment District Director Ken Wade. "We look forward to the Council making a significant contribution to increasing the effectiveness of the New England District's activities."

The Advisory Council

system originated during the early 1980's to strengthen communication between Neighborhood Reinvestment and Neighborhoods organizations. Its membership comprises representatives of the three partnership sectors--residents, business leaders and local government officials--and local executive directors.

"The Quincy NHS has made a real difference in our neighborhood," said Grenier.

William Whelton Honored As Volunteer

William Whelton of Quincy was one of the 125 volunteers recently honored by North Shore Elder Services.

Whelton volunteers in the agency's Money Management Program. Co-sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), Mass Home Care and the Executive Office of Elder Affairs, the program matches volunteers with low income elders who need assistance managing their household finances, balancing checkbooks and paying bills.

As a volunteer, Whelton received an initial nine hours of AARP money management training and attends monthly training meetings. The program currently assists 38 elders on the North Shore.

Quincy-S.S. Board Of Realtors Changes Name To South Shore Association Of Realtors, Inc.

The Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors has changed its name to the South Shore Association of Realtors, Inc., announces Board President Arthur Foley.

The name change is consistent with action taken at a special meeting of the association's membership, at which members overwhelmingly authorized the name change.

Foley said the reason for the proposed name change does not indicate any lack of commitment to the Quincy neighborhoods, but a recognition of the service area of the Board now and as expected to expand in the future.

Foley said the name change has wide-ranging support from sole proprietors to multiple office companies.

The vote of the membership will be forwarded to the National Association of Realtors for approval by the membership policy and board justification committee at the annual convention in November in Anaheim, Calif.

Stephen Dunleavy Named VP For Shawmut Center Opening

Stephen P. Dunleavy of Quincy has been named executive vice president for the Shawmut Center opening, the New Boston Garden Corp. has announced.

The new arena is slated to open in September, 1995 and Dunleavy will be responsible for coordinating the planning and operational activities associated with the "retirement" of the Boston Garden and the "birth" of the Shawmut Center.

Prior to his appointment, Dunleavy was management director and then vice president of the World Trade Center, where he was responsible for operating the facility as well as managing special events and projects and directing all the center's major events.

From 1982-84, Dunleavy was the director of program management for the City of Boston. He also served as the city's director of Public Safety.

From 1973-1977, Dunleavy worked for the Boston Police Department, first as a confidential secretary to the commissioner and then as the assistant to the commissioner.

Prior to working with the Boston Police Department, Dunleavy held several positions at the Boston Herald and the Boston Record American including investigative reporter, feature editor and news editor.

He attended Boston University.

Thomas O'Brien Named To Mutual Funds Team

Thomas O'Brien of Quincy, vice president with the Boston office of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., has been named to the All-American Team of The American Funds Group of mutual funds.

O'Brien was cited for outstanding service to investors in the Boston area and for excellence in financial counseling in mutual fund investments. He has been with Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc. since 1988 and worked in the financial services field for 12 years.

O'Brien graduated from Wesleyan University in Connecticut in 1974, with a B.A. degree in psychology and sociology. He lives with his wife, Belinda, and their children, Christopher and Benjamin.

Michael Chase In Don Bosco Science Program

Michael J. Chase of Quincy was one of 13 juniors of the Science Tech program at Don Bosco Technical High School in Boston who recently made two visits to St. Mark's Grammar School in Dorchester.

Students participated in the program to spend time with eighth grade students.

On the first visit, they were led in introductions and problem solving activities by Tim VanWey of Don Bosco and Eileen Frain and Ellen Coughlin of St. Mark's.

On the second visit, the juniors from Don Bosco led the younger boys and girls in seven different chemistry experiments.

The chemists brought supplies and posters and helped small groups of the eighth graders learn about chemistry.

FAMILY TIES--Phyllis Ahern (left) and Kimberlee Brown hold hands in front of a portrait of Kimberlee and their sister, the late Dawn Brown. Authorities believe that a former-boyfriend of Kimberlee's is the man who murdered Dawn last year.

Dawn Brown's Killer Remains Free A Year Later

Murdered Girl's Family Still Looking For Justice

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Dawn Brown's family only wants justice to be served.

Her killer remains on the loose more than a year after her death, and those who loved her wonder why.

Authorities say such investigations take time. Authorities say the man who gunned her down will eventually be captured and convicted.

But such rhetoric rings hollow when a family member has been murdered.

Dawn, 25, was shot in the forehead by an armed assailant July 10, 1993 outside her family's home at 38 Royal St., Wollaston, in what police believe was a case of mistaken identity. She died the next day at Boston City Hospital.

Her accused killer, John Anthony Diaz of Cape Cod, is still at large. Police think Diaz, a former boyfriend of Dawn's sister Kimberlee, mistakenly killed Dawn in a jealous rage over Kimberlee's impending marriage to another man.

Dawn resembled her sister, and Diaz apparently mistook her for Kimberlee in the dark summer night.

Witnesses to the crime included a male friend of Dawn's and her 12-year-old nephew.

The Brown sisters had come home for Kimberlee's bridal shower, which was held the night of the shooting. Dawn was spending the summer at Kimberlee's apartment in New Jersey.

Dawn, a 1985 graduate of North Quincy High School, had taken evening courses at Quincy College to prepare for a nursing career. At the time of her death, she was scheduled to begin a summer job at Morristown Memorial Hospital in New Jersey. She planned to return home in the fall, enroll in more courses at the college, and eventually begin taking nursing classes at New England Baptist Hospital in Boston.

In a Quincy Sun exclusive, three of Dawn's relatives spoke for the first time about the impact her death had on the family and the disappointment they feel over her killer's continued freedom. They described her as a kind, caring individual who was liked by all and only

Historic Church In Jeopardy

First Parish Needs $5M In Repairs

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Nearing its 170th anniversary, the United First Parish Church on Hancock St., which has not undergone serious reconstruction since the 1960's, needs nearly $5 million in major renovations or risk further damage, according to the church minister.

Rev. Dr. Sheldon Bennett, in a recent interview, outlined what he believes are the most pressing refurbishing measures, including a new slate roof, window panes and copper flashing. He said he estimated the cost of the overhaul "after meeting with professional consultants."

"The last major repair was between 1964 and 1967, when a number of things were done, including having the tower rebuilt and the sanctuary repainted," Bennett said. "That's 30 years ago, and now nearly everything needs repair to keep this looking like the national landmark it is."

The estimated total cost of the refurbishing includes construction, architectural and engineering design fees, project management, capital campaign and miscellaneous project costs. The church, with the help of Cong. Gerry Studds and Sen. Ted Kennedy, is in line to receive $115,000 in federal money to fund technical assistance for the project.

However, the refurbishing would have to be paid largely through contributions and possible matching federal grants. However, no government funds would be accepted if the church ownership and control of the property would be jeopardized, Bennett said.

Ideally, Rev. Bennett would like to create an endowment fund of $1.75 million, which would be utilized to ensure an ongoing program of maintenance and preservation for future generations as

Sheets Family Dog Dies Of Cancer

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets and his family suffered a loss last Saturday with the death of Astro, their nine-year-old schnauzer.

Sheets said the dog was diagnosed with prostate cancer about two months ago and had begun losing weight because he was not eating. With the end inevitable and Astro in obvious pain, the family decided to have him "put to sleep" over the weekend.

The mayor said Astro, who was bought as a puppy for his son Luke--currently 19 years old and entering his sophomore year at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston--was like a member of the family.

"It was very hard on the

whole family, and it was very hard on Luke," said Sheets. "He was a good watchdog."

Sheets said Astro provided protection and security as well as companionship to the family, noting that he plans to buy another schnauzer as soon as possible. The mayor added that Astro was the fifth dog he has lost in his lifetime.

Mariano: Probe Bridge Accident

Rep. Ron Mariano of Quincy has called on the state secretary of transportation to investigate the cause of an accident involving an MBTA bus on the Fore River Bridge July 3.

"It is extremely important to the residents of Quincy and Weymouth that the cause of this potentially serious accident be determined,"

Mariano said in a letter dated July 6 to Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotis.

An MBTA bus was allegedly stopped on the wrong spot on the Fore River Bridge, and the bridge operator supposedly waved him forward as the arm of the bridge barrier swung across the road.

The bus struck the barrier, injuring two of the 12 passengers on board. They were treated for minor injuries at the hospital.

The accident also "shook up" another 10 passengers, Mariano said. "They were very, very fortunate."

Mariano said he believes this was the first accident of its kind on the bridge in the four decades he has lived in Quincy.

"I have lived in Quincy Point for over 40 years and do not ever recall an accident of this type occurring," Mariano wrote. Secretary Kerasiotis is responsible for the privatization of the bridge operators. "If people are to trust a privatized system," Mariano said, "it is up to the secretary to prove that these workers

Quincy Trip To Ireland Will Mix Business, Pleasure

A group of Quincy officials and residents, including Mayor James Sheets, left today (Thursday) for a 10-day trip to Ireland that will mix business with pleasure.

Sheets said at press time that while the trip includes tours of some of the more scenic parts of the country--such as Donegal, Connemara and the Ring of Kerry--there will also be three "formal occasions": meetings with Irish President Mary Robinson, Lord Mayor of Dublin John Gormley, and Eunice Shriver, U.S. ambassador to Ireland and sister of U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Sheets added that he will present each of the dignitaries with a City of Quincy afghan purchased at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center as well as a paperweight bearing Abigail Adams' profile.

The mayor noted that he also plans to promote Quincy tourism on the trip if the opportunity presents itself.

"Obviously I'll keep my eyes and ears open to promote Quincy to tourists from Ireland who plan to visit America in whatever way possible," he said. "We always try to be sensitive not only to tourism opportunities for the city, but economic activities as well."

Sheets said about "160 to 170" Quincy citizens--including his wife Joann--are participating in the trip, which is being handled by Carlson Travel Network/Prime Travel of Marina Bay.

The group will return from Ireland July 23.

Minorities Up, Whites Down

City Population Grows To 87,171

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy's population is increasing due to a moderate surge in minorities, according to the latest city census figures.

The figures, released by City Clerk Joseph Shea, show Quincy has 828 more people in its overall population from a year ago, an increase of about one percent from 86,343 in 1993 to 87,171.

The census also projects two other related trends. First, the number of whites living in Quincy has decreased by 115, from 74,177 in 1993 to 74,062 this year. Second, the number of minorities has increased by 943, from 12,166 last year to 13,109 this year, a 7.7% jump.

"I think it's pretty clear that, although Quincy's population has remained relatively the same over the past 25 to 30 years, Asian Americans are moving into the city as Caucasian families move out," Shea said. "Overall, our population isn't growing, it's shifting toward more minorities."

Overall, minorities now comprise 15 percent of Quincy's population. By far, Asians remain the largest minority group in Quincy with 11,118. That figure represents an increase of 652 or 6.2 percent in one year.

Blacks are the second most populous minority with 1,235 or 1.42 percent of the total population; and Hispanics are third with 756 or .87 percent of the population.

Bank Robbery Suspect Sought

Quincy Police are searching for a man who robbed Quincy Savings Bank at 461 Washington St. around 11 a.m. Monday. The man, who claimed to have a weapon, escaped with about $1,000. He is described as white, in his late 20s or early 30s, 5 feet 8 inches tall and about 180 pounds with blond hair cut military-style. He wore beige

Ward 4 (South/West Quincy) remains the most populated ward with 14,609 residents, up 150 from 14,441 last year. Ward 1 remains the least populated ward with 14,401 residents, up 121 from 14,280 in 1993.

Ward 6 experienced the biggest increase in total population with 156 new residents, from 14,350 to 14,506.

Shea said the census figures are important since they help officials project school enrollments and apply for federal grants which require accurate demographic data.

Over the last 30 years, Quincy's population has hovered around the 87,000 mark with a few fluctuations. The population peaked in 1975 with 91,487 and bottomed-out in the mid 1980s with 83,000.

In 1964, Quincy had 87,409 residents, virtually the same number as today.

Shea said he doubts Quincy's population will reach the 90,000 mark again.

"I think it's unrealistic because we're all built out. To do that (reach 90,000 again), people would have to have much bigger families and we'd need a lot more condos which I doubt because we have very little vacant land," Shea said.

Preventative Car Care is Sound Medicine

The old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" applies well to car care.

Do you want to reduce the risk of expensive car repair bills? Do you want your car to last seven or eight years, or even 100,000 miles?

You can increase gas mileage by 6% and extend vehicle life by 50% or more by maintaining your car well state technicians at SPARKS Computerized Car Care in Quincy.

Leonard Lescarbeau, a specialist in electrical and fuel problems technician for 31 years, and John Teixeira, a specialist in drivability problems and general repair for 20 years, know that regularly scheduled maintenance is the key to vehicle dependability and longevity.

When asked, "What should be checked? What services should be performed? How often?"

Lenny and John recommend this list of the most common service areas and maintenance intervals:

Oil change is still the most important service. Oil and filter changes should be done every 3,000 miles or 3 months, whichever comes first, especially on turbocharged vehicles. During oil service, tire pressure should be checked, grease fittings lubricated and fluids such as transmission fluid and coolant topped off.

The cooling system should be serviced at least every 24,000 miles or 24 months, whichever comes first. Flush and refill the entire cooling system. Check the belts, the hoses, the radiator pressure cap, the thermostat, and the cooling fan assembly.

Your vehicle is a necessary investment costing thousands of dollars. Take Lenny and John's advice: A little preventative maintenance will protect your vehicle investment.

Tympanette Micro-Canal Hearing Instrument Now Available

Our office is happy to announce that we are now fitting a completely In-The-Canal hearing instrument. This remarkable new hearing aid is not only more discreet and comfortable to wear, it may also provide important hearing benefits because of its deep placement in the ear canal.

The Tympanette is the smallest hearing aid ever manufactured by Starkey Laboratories, the world's leading manufacturer of custom hearing instruments. Its extremely small size will be very popular, so call now for your hearing assessment and consultation.

Call today to schedule your appointment.

New: The Tympanette micro-canal hearing aid, a breakthrough in hearing aid design, fits deep in the ear canal and is barely noticeable.

DO'S AND DON'TS OF ARTHRITIS

When a disease like arthritis stakes out a claim on your body, it can feel like it has taken over your whole life. That's when it is important to know there are things you can do to keep control. One of the most important measures is to work out a daily exercise program with your doctor's help and follow it. Don't let regular activities substitute for the recommended exercises. Equally important, be sure to rest from physical activity every ten to twenty minutes. Be gentle with yourself, in ways such as easing carefully in and out of chairs, using mechanical aids to open jars, and sitting whenever possible while working. Lie as flat as you can in bed at night, without pillows to prop up head or legs.

P.S. If ankles or toes are sore, use a board or the bed frame to form a tent with the covers over the feet.

Arthritis patients can often improve the quality of their lives by working out a comprehensive management strategy with their physicians—and rigorously adhering to it. For more information on this or on any aspect of heart disease, call the doctors—myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our office is located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Menino Should Visit Quincy

Mayor Tom Menino is looking for ideas on how to transform Boston's Plain Jane City Hall Plaza into a public beauty.

We have an idea, Your Honor.

Hop on the Red Line and come on out to Quincy. And take a look.

Take a good look at McIntyre Mall and Constitution Common at City Hall which combine to make one of the most beautiful spots in any city. Open space, grass, shrubs, flowers, benches and the "Walk of Names."

Boston's City Hall Plaza, by contrast, consists of 11 acres of monotonous concrete with all the appeal and charm of a parking lot.

Menino is inviting architects, designers, open space activists and experts, school children—anyone and everyone—to submit ideas over the next six months for a major facelift of the plaza.

But he could take a short cut by coming out to Quincy for a look and while here, chat with Mayor Jim Sheets.

The McIntyre Mall came into being during Mayor Walter Hannon's administration. Can you believe there were a few people downtown pressuring him back then to blacktop the area for an off-street parking lot! Fortunately, he didn't listen to them.

Now Sheets is making Constitution Common the crown jewel of his Cleaner, Greener Quincy program and attractively blending it in with McIntyre Mall.

Menino could get some pretty good ideas here on how to beautify his 11-acre brickyard. It would be well worth the $1.70 round trip on the T.

THE CITY COUNCIL will soon be losing one of its right arms. Rosemary Nolan, administrative assistant, will become administrative secretary to DPW Commissioner David Colton sometime in August. Rosemary will succeed Delma Hall who is retiring after 24 years service with the city. Rosemary, has 18 1/2 years with the city and has held the City Council post since April, 1990. No word yet on who will replace her in that job.

The City Council's other right arm, Jeanne Reardon, will continue as clerk of committees.

Lincoln-Hancock School Awards 10 Scholarships

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School recently awarded 10 scholarships to former alumni who are now high school graduates going on to college.

The scholarships were awarded in conjunction with the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center. Funds for the scholarships are raised annually from contributions from the schools' families, staff members and students.

Scholarship winners included: Justin Ackerman, Fanny Cheng, Erin Creedon, Michael Elder, Deanna Griffin, Steven Khaw, Thomas Malvesti, Michael Mullaney, Kevin O'Brien and Anthony Sansevero.

THE BACKGROUND WILL look familiar if you tune in WBZ-TV's News 4 at 6 p.m. Thursday, July 21. Liz Walker plans to be here to anchor the news program from Quincy's annual Sidewalk Festival.

WALKER

Quincy has been selected as one of the locales around the state for WBZ News 4's "Celebrating Massachusetts" during July. Walker or Jack Williams will anchor from a different locale throughout the month.

GOOD NEWS: Fr. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church, who has been ill the past several months, is out of the hospital and convalescing away from the church rectory. Hopefully he's on the way to full recovery.

FR. MCCARTHY

A COUPLE OF political fundraisers are on tap for tonight (Thursday).

A reception for Senator Michael Morrissey will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club, Glendale Rd. Donor tickets are $50 and patron, $100.

(Morrissey's annual harbor cruise will take place Friday, July 22 with boarding at 8 p.m. at Marina Bay. Tickets can be obtained by calling 328-5124.)

Quincy Building Inspector Matt Mulvey, candidate for Norfolk County Commissioner, has a "Gathering" tonight at 8 p.m. at the Nights of Columbus Hall, Chauncey St., Weymouth. Tickets are $15.

MULVEY

BRAINTREE'S Bernard Walsh, who is challenging Mike Morrissey for the state senate seat, has opened Quincy headquarters at 1504 Hancock St. downtown.

A HAPPY BULLETIN from former WJDA news editor Herb Fontaine: he and his wife, Barbara, are grandparents again, this time twice in seven minutes.

Their son, Steve, and daughter-in-law, the former Maria Goldberg, are parents for the first time—twins—born July 8 at Denver, Col. Hospital.

Maxwell Harrison, 5 pounds, 15 ounces, arrived first, followed by Alexandra, 5 pounds, 11 ounces, seven minutes later.

Steve is a Senior Industrial Hygienist for the Colorado Department of Health and Maria is Nutritional Services Manager at St. Joseph's Hospital in Denver.

This makes five grandchildren for Herb and Barbara. Congratulations!

Peter Krasinski Guest Artist At Bethany Concert

Granite Crossing Will Greatly Benefit City

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a resident of The Falls in Quincy, I feel it is urgent that I speak out in favor of the Granite Crossing Shopping Center.

I strongly believe that Granite Crossing will greatly benefit the City of Quincy by bringing jobs, stores and customers back home. I am local to this area and would much prefer Granite Crossing which will be a high quality shopping center—by far the best use for this property.

Many of The Falls residents feel that Atlantic

Development has been very sensitive to our concerns. Their commitment to invest $600,000 in a mitigation fund for use by Falls residents will enable us to enhance the property and further increase its value. The landscaping plans and artists' renderings we saw last night depicting the additional buffering and landscaping that will be provided by Atlantic Development convinced me that the proposed Granite Crossing Shopping Center should be approved.

Falls Resident

QCA Urges Council To Reject Wal-Mart

[A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication].
Members of the City Council:

We want to record our opposition and concern to the Wal-Mart development in The Falls area.

One of the biggest obstacles to reviving downtown Quincy is the negative comment that "this area will never be the shopping area of the past." This attitude is a turn-off to potential businesses, both large and small, that might plan to enter the area. We should be encouraging them to come to Quincy Center.

The city plans to offer two hours of free parking to downtown shoppers. Why would anyone take advantage of this when you will be able to park all day for nothing at the new Granite Crossing mall? This is now one of the attractions at the South Shore Plaza, and it will increase when they expand.

This new mall will drain business from the downtown shopping area, thus putting existing business out of business as some have already indicated will happen. It's inconceivable to think that the loss of $11 million in business will keep the existing retail stores open over three years. The only business that will survive will be the service-type operations for the office workers.

We need less service-oriented business and more retail stores. Office workers can only shop on their lunch hour. Quincy has a population of over 85,000 and all we want is the stores to satisfy our everyday needs. We're not asking for huge stores, just the shops to satisfy our needs. We have enough money in our pockets to make Quincy Center thrive if we have all the retail stores.

Our citizens and existing businesses are looking to the city for serious concern for their well-being. We all are concerned over the business practices that follows this company through the papers. After it drains off the business, Quincy Center will soon be a ghost town because nobody is going to pay attention to signs in the new mall to shop in Quincy Center when they can stay there for nothing and satisfy their needs.

This in turn will lead to office building construction which is what the citizens were willing to go to the ballot box to prevent. This mall will also drain retail areas of Wollaston and North Quincy, huge development has already caused the closing of business in Quincy.

It's a known fact that small businesses employ more permanent jobs than big business. This means more to the stability of an area than a few short-term jobs. All we're asking is that the city have concern for its residents and reject this mall and any other such malls in the city and concentrate on bringing small shops to Quincy Center.

All the window dressing, such as shrubbery and traffic control, won't cover the loss of millions of actual dollars to Quincy Center. Once the commitment is made there is no turning back, and only you will have to answer for it.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Bus Service Resumes After 127-Day Strike

Passenger service resumed on the Quincy Division of the Eastern Mass Street Railway Co. following a 127-day strike after the driver agreed to accept a company offer of a 15-cent an hour raise retroactive to Jan. 1.

At the same time, David Brackman of the State Department of Public Utilities announced approval of a fare increase for Eastern Mass averaging 50 per cent.

Company officials said the approval probably would mean raising the general fare from 10 cents to 15 cents, 20-cent fares to 25 cents and increasing the cost of tokens from 8 2/3 cents to 12 1/2 cents.

It was estimated that the strike, which started March 10 on all 11 divisions in the system, had cost the company $20.8 million in lost sales and $4.5 million in lost passengers revenues and the strikers $2.4 million in lost wages.

NEW RANKER CONTRACT

The Bethlehem Steel Co. announced the award of a $7 million contract to the Fore River Shipyard for the construction of another 29,000-ton supertanker, bringing to $200 million the total value of vessels under contract to the yard.

The Quincy Shipbuilding Committee launched a drive to have one of the Navy's proposed 60,000-ton Forrestal-class aircraft carriers constructed at the Quincy shipyard. The first of the big flatops was being built at Newport News, Va.

RECORD HEAT

The temperature hit 98 degrees in Quincy, breaking the record of 95 for the date set on July 14, 1873 and the three-day heat wave brought water pressure in the city to a record low level.

Water pressure at Quincy City Hospital was the lowest in 29 years and Dr. Joseph P. Leone, the director, said he was preparing to ask the Fire Department to permit the hospital to hook into a nearby hydrant.

MEMBERS OF THE North Quincy Alumni Theatre who will star in Jack Sharkey's comedy "Meanwhile, Back on the Couch..." The play will be presented July 22-23, 28-30 and Aug. 4-6 at North Quincy High School.

NQ Alumni Theatre Comedy Begins July 22

The North Quincy Alumni Theatre (NQAT) will present Jack Sharkey's comedy "Meanwhile, Back on the Couch..." for three consecutive weekends beginning July 22.

The play, directed by Frank Moffett, will be held July 22-23, 28-30 and Aug. 4-6 at 8 p.m. in the Black Box Theatre at North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock St. Free parking is available in front of the school.

"Meanwhile, Back on the Couch..." is the tale of a financially pressed psychiatrist whose cast studies are mistaken for a pot-boiler novel. The cast includes Phyllis Ritner as Gaby, Merrick Ketcham as Roy, Alyce Featheres as Charlotte, Jim Phelan as Victor, Roger Alter as Parker, Craig Miller as Albert, Marion Cramer as Dorothea and Kerry Kilgely as Jingle.

The NQAT, in its eighth season, is continuing its tradition of using proceeds from the show to benefit the Gregory P. Toland Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Tickets are $7 for general admission, $6 for students and senior citizens and may be purchased in advance at Purdy's Ice Cream Parlor, 68a Billings Rd., North Quincy or reserved by calling 984-8998.

Tickets may also be purchased at the door beginning at 7:15 p.m. each performance night.

Civil War Exhibit At Historical Society

A special exhibit, "Grand Army of the Republic: How We Viewed The Civil War," will open Monday, July 18, at the Quincy Historical Society Museum, Adams Academy Building, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Centered around the Civil War collection bequeathed to the Society in the 1930s by the last members of Quincy's Grand Army of the Republic post, the exhibit focuses on what people have thought and felt about the war and the men who fought in it.

Perspectives include the war experience itself, how the veterans viewed themselves and the war in late years and how subsequent generations viewed them. The exhibit features a variety of Civil War artifacts and armaments. In parallel to the current interest in World War II veterans, it examines the G.A.R.'s as the prototype of the American veterans' experience.

The exhibit is scheduled to run through Sept. 30. The museum is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. It is closed on holidays. Admission is free for Society members. A $1 donation is requested from non-members.

Storytelling At Crane Library July 19

Storyteller Debbie O'Carroll will make her first Quincy appearance at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Square on Tuesday, July 19, at 7 p.m.

Her appearance is the second in the eighth annual Storytellers Series, a six-week series of programs funded by the Quincy Arts Council and the Friends of the Library. These programs are offered to families with children age five and older.

O'Carroll's performance entitled, "Tall Tales from a Small World," includes magic, movement and dance. On their journey to other lands, the audience will meet a magical, tap dancing donkey from Ireland and a plucky Mexican hero. They will help create a special Japanese haiku poem and learn a word or two of "Ga," a Ghanaian language.

O'Carroll has toured as an actress and storyteller for the past 15 years with such groups as City Stage and the Opera Company of Boston.

The third annual Wollaston Summer Band Concert featuring the South Shore Conservatory Summer Wind Ensemble will be held Friday, July 22 at 7 p.m. at Safford Park on Beale St., opposite the Wollaston School.

Conductor Stephen Rice will lead the 65-member wind, brass and percussion orchestra which will perform a musical variety.

The concert is free. Those attending are invited to bring a blanket or folding chair. Refreshments will be available at the park.

The concert is sponsored by the Wollaston Business Association.

Adult Exercise Class At Ward 4 Center

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Association is sponsoring an adult exercise class in the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave. (Amelia Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center), South Quincy.

The class is held Tuesdays from 7 to 8 p.m. Cost is $3 per class. No pre-registration is required.

The class is led by Debbie Vacca, certified aerobic instructor. The focus is on low-impact aerobics with some body-sculpting exercises. Participants wear sneakers and bring an exercise mat or towel.

Even though Ron Barber could get a mortgage, the closing costs were simply more than he could afford. There had to be another way. He found it at Fleet. We found a mortgage he could afford with a low down payment. And today, Ron and his family are living in a home they can call their own. That's the kind of thinking that's at the heart of our INCITY program for people and communities in need. Downtown Quincy Will Survive Coming Of Wal-Mart

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a Quincy resident I am very much concerned about the city's struggling economic life. In the past, I have been outspokenly critical of a number of strategies developed by Quincy 2000 officials and equally critical of projects endorsed by Quincy 2000. Most notably, my opposition to a Super Shaw's Supermarket for the North Quincy-Wollaston area at the site of old Boston Gear.

Recently I attended a political function at which I met Charles F. D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000. We chatted about my philosophical differences with Quincy 2000 but we also spoke of my support for the proposed Wal-Mart store off Quincy Avenue next to The Falls condominium complex.

My decision to support Wal-Mart is based on the merits of the proposal upon the Quincy economy, on the merits of Quincy shoppers being able to boost consumer spending inside the city rather than in nearby communities such as Braintree.

Opponents of Wal-Mart say it doesn't belong in a residential area but I am hard-pressed to understand how a site that was zoned for years as a junkyard is now being touted as some idyllic community. When I think of the area surrounding The Falls or the proposed Wal-Mart, I don't exactly think rustic life or pastoral scenes. The Falls ain't exactly Walton's Mountain, is it?

I also have a chuckle reading about President's Plaza and the manager of Woolworth's Quincy Center store fighting Wal-Mart. As D'Aprix stated, the opposition to Wal-Mart "is a movement led by big business opposing big business." City Councilor Mike Cheney thinks big business greed is trying to cloud the picture. According to Cheney, "It's corporate greed that is driving it now...Bradlee's is the major tenant in President's Plaza."

Is the opposition group, "We're Against the Wal," being used by a few businesses afraid of Wal-Mart competition? Sylvia Mignon, leader of "We're Against the Wal," says no. "We had a mutual interest...I don't feel like I'm being used by anyone," she said.

I feel slightly uncomfortable supporting a project also supported by Quincy 2000. This is a first for me but all it really shows is that I am not a knee-jerk opponent of Quincy 2000. I am able to separate my differences with that public-private organization when I think something shows benefit for the community at large. A Wal-Mart store will put people to work during construction and following its opening. We're talking 200 construction jobs for union workers. We're talking 500 positions for store employees. We're talking about an idle piece of land that City Hall collects pennies on being replaced by a development that will pay the city a cool half-million dollars in tax revenue.

Yes, if I lived in The Falls complex, I probably would have concerns about Wal-Mart being my next-door neighbor, but doesn't it seem that some of the opposition has less to do with the merits of the project as it focuses on Wal-Mart using children from Third World nations, paying these kids a nickel an hour while holding a gun to their collective heads? Isn't it time to decide this project without that kind of cheap shot? A true debate must be made on facts, not allegations.

Quincy 2000 implies if Wal-Mart is denied the Quincy Point site, it will simply move down the road to the Quintree Mall site in East Braintree. I think that is a bluff because Quintree Mall is a killing ground for many businesses.

Quincy 2000 doesn't believe Wal-Mart will destroy Downtown Quincy and I agree. Woolworth's as the anchor store for a business district is just unheard of, isn't it? When was the last time you ever saw a five-and-dime being a nucleus for a downtown retail district?

Downtown Quincy will survive as it has. It is mainly in competition with itself. Hair salon against hair salon. Video store against video store. Restaurant against restaurant. Quincy Center isn't competing against South Shore Plaza. It isn't even competing against President's Plaza and it won't compete against Wal-Mart. That is the simple truth whether folks want to hear it or not.

Personally, I think President's Plaza will be far more impacted by Wal-Mart. With the closing of Ames down the street in Braintree, Bradlee's sits pretty and that will change when it must stand up to the Wal-Mart challenge.

America is free competition. If businesses can't compete, they close shop. That's the way it has always worked. Quincy Center had its day as Shopperstown USA just as the Dudley Square retail station that I grew up with had its day. Things change. We must accept the change and grow with it or we will be coughing up the dust of those willing to change and adjust to different times. As a child, I loved shopping at the local First National Store at the corner. I knew everyone there from manager on down by their first name. Now, the Super supermarkets are cornering the market. Wal-Mart represents the same kind of change. Companies get bigger and bigger. How many small five-and-dimes did Woolworth's do in when they entered the retail picture? The same is true of most big name stores today.

Hopefully, there will always be those smaller stores lining Quincy Center or Wollaston Center or Norfolk Downs. Hopefully, organizations like Quincy 2000 can offer them a lifeline to survive but don't kid yourself: yesterday is gone, never to return.

If Wal-Mart comes, it will not destroy the Quincy economy and it will not come until the most detailed research and studies are completed. City Hall has promised that. Grossman's is gone and Wal-Mart is now at the door. If we shut the door in its face and Wal-Mart goes away, what have we won?

I say, if all the studies add up to more benefits for all of us as Quincy residents, shoppers and taxpayers, we open the door to needed economic growth.

Norfolk County Receives Award For Centralization Program

The Norfolk County Commissioners announce that the County of Norfolk has been awarded a 1994 National Association of Counties (NACo)

Achievement Award for its program entitled, "Centralization of County-wide Purchasing Pilot Program."

The program allows all 28 municipalities to take advantage of centralized purchasing through blanket contracts that have been bid, evaluated and awarded based on quality and lowest bid price, resulting in greater savings on items such as supplies.

The Board of Norfolk County Commissioners is comprised of William O'Donnell, chairman of Norwood, John Gillis of Quincy and Bruce Olsen of Stoughton, all of whom have expressed an interest in regionalization of services.

OPEN AND SHUT CASES

The onset of summer presents car owners with a good time to check the thermostats of their car engines' cooling systems. This component is designed to open or close at designated temperatures.

When coolant temperatures fall below the 170 to 197 degrees F range, the thermostat remains closed to inhibit the flow of coolant through the engine, thereby allowing the engine to warm up. Above this temperature range, the thermostat opens to enable the engine to rid itself of unwanted heat. If a thermostat is stuck in the open position, engine warm-up time increases and engine life decreases. If a thermostat is (partially) stuck closed, the engine will run hot or overheat. This latter possibility is made all the more likely by hot summer weather.

HINT: The approach of summer is also a good time to replace or renew your car's cooling system antifreeze/coolant.

If you have questions about your car's cooling system, don't hesitate to ask when you come into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. For all your car's repairs, we have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best service technicians available in the area. We know how important your car is to you and that it represents a sizable investment. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550)... "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Joanna Bevilacqua Receives John Caporale Scholarship Award

Joanna Bevilacqua of Quincy is a recipient of the seventh annual John A. Caporale, Sr. Memorial Scholarship Award, announces Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall.

Miss Bevilacqua who received a $500 scholarship, will attend Salve Regina University in Rhode Island where she will pursue a bachelor's degree in nursing. She plans to continue her education beyond that and receive a master's degree.

Three other Norfolk County residents received similar scholarships, Marshall announced. Over 150 people attended the Caporale Scholarship Award scholarship ceremony hosted by the Norfolk County Honorary Deputy Sheriffs Association at the Raynham/Taunton Greyhound Park as part of the association's annual "Night At The Track."

The scholarship award is in memory of the late John "Cappy" Caporale of Quincy, an original founding father of the Honorary Deputy Sheriffs Association and its treasurer from 1975 to 1987. Graduating high school seniors intending to enroll in a post-high school educational program who are children of either employees of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, active Deputy Sheriff's or members of the Norfolk County Deputy Sheriff's Association are eligible.

Since its inauguration in 1988, there have been 26 recipients of the $500 award. In addition to the scholarship, they are given official plaques and are enlisted as Honorary Deputy Sheriffs.

Miss Bevilacqua was commended for her academic excellence in Allied Health while at Quincy High School. She is now certified in both first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation. In addition to her academic background, she has been playing basketball since the third grade and has participated in varsity level soccer and basketball at Quincy High School.

Paul O'Donnell Graduates From Franklin & Marshall

Paul J. O'Donnell recently received a bachelor of arts degree from Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa.

O'Donnell, a 1989 graduate of Boston Latin High School, served as president of his class at Franklin & Marshall during his junior year and as treasurer for Student Congress in 1994.

He is the son of Dianne O'Donnell of Boston and Paul O'Donnell of Quincy.

MINISTER SHELDON BENNETT points out water damage to the domed ceiling of the United First Parish Church to Sen. Michael Morrissey and Cong. Gerry Studds during a recent visit to the historic church.

CEILING IN A hallway of the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center shows damage caused by a leaky roof, one of several renovations the church needs.

well as the continuation of a church directed visitor program.

During a recent tour, Bennett pointed to the most important updates the church needs: a new slate roof, windows and gutters since they are the original materials when the edifice was built 166 years ago.

"The windows are the original windows, and the frames are weathering badly and need to be refurbished," Bennett said. "The gutter doesn't work. There are holes in it, it sags and overflows down the side of the building and causes severe damage."

"On the roof, the copper flashing is failing, and to keep with the historical context, it needs to be replaced. Also, the down spouts have holes in them, which also causes problems when a storm hits."

There are a lot of little things along with the big problems, Bennett noted. The masonry is eroding, the nails that hold the slate down are corroding more and more, he added.

In addition to the above problems, Bennett said, the carpeting must be done over, the cushions in the pews need replacing. Moreover, the aging electrical and heating systems must be renovated because they are beginning to break down.

"The front doors, too, are very old and in need of major repair," Bennett said. "The hinges are rusting out, and to restore the doors in a historically sensitive way is an expensive proposition."

One look at the ceiling inside the church, which is constructed of plaster, spots where rain has ruined the ceiling are clearly visible.

"The ceiling is the most magnificent feature of the whole church," Bennett said gesturing to the domed ceiling cut with classic Greek lines. "You can see where the water has done damage to the ceiling, which needs to be fixed before it gets any worse."

Bennett said he also wants to make the church handicapped accessible. That would require the reconstruction of one of the entrances, likely the side entrance, which currently has stairs leading into the church.

Also, an elevator may be implemented to help those with problems walking to go the second floor or to the basement, Bennett said. "That would force us to change the bathrooms around, which also need to be renovated to become accessible to the handicapped."

For other donations, Bennett said the congregation will look to foundations, corporations and historical organizations like the American Legion and the Daughters of the American Revolution, which may have interest in historical preservation. Appeals to members of those groups will also be made, along with individuals in the community.

"I'm sure the people of Quincy will support the preservation at some level," Bennett said.

MANY YEARS OF harsh weather have deteriorated the wood on this window pane at the United First Parish Church. The last major repair project to the 166-year-old edifice occurred between 1964 and 1967.

The church, referred by many as "The Church of the Presidents," has a proud past. It was built in 1828 of Quincy granite decided by President John Adams at a cost of $30,488.56, about $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate. It was dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, holding Pew 1.

Today, the church is an architectural masterpiece and a registered national historical landmark. It is also the burial site of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives, who were important in the founding of this country.

Those worried that the church may have to close for an extended period of time to allow the construction to commence need not worry, Bennett said. "Lots of work can be done without closing the church. We will have to close to fix the ceiling, obviously, though it wouldn't be for an extended period of time."

One of the main reasons to refurbish the church, Bennett mentioned, is to preserve the structure's history for future generations.

"We have an obligation to the general public to keep this church looking the way it did 166 years ago," Bennett said. "The only way we can do that is by preserving the church and keeping its appearance beautiful for future generations to enjoy."

U.S. Senate Committee Approves $230,000 For Quincy Historic Sites

The U.S. Senate Appropriations Committee has approved $230,000 in grants for Quincy historic sites.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, in making the announcement last week, said the grants include a $115,000 budget increase for the Adams National Historic Site and an additional $115,000 to assist with the preservation of United First Parish Church in Quincy Center which contains the tombs of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives.

"Quincy has made great strides in recent years in preserving this aspect of our heritage and expanding tourism," said Kennedy. "These funds will sustain this momentum and provide additional services at the new Visitors Center, the trolley shuttle system, and tours of the Presidential crypt at United First Parish Church."

"I'm also very pleased that the Committee approved funds for the Park Service to assist with the restoration of the church. These funds are a vote of confidence in the community's strong commitment to the project."

Kennedy said the funds for the church, also known as "Church of the Presidents," will provide technical expertise and assistance to ensure that the restoration preserves the historic integrity of the church. A private fundraising effort is underway to cover the costs of reconstruction. The church, which was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1970, is in need of a new roof and better access for the disabled, the senator said.

The funds for the Adams Site and the church were approved by the House of Representatives June 23 at the request of U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds. The full Senate is expected to take up the bill later this month.

Transportation Secretary Pena, Studds To Visit Quincy Shipyard Monday

At the invitation of Cong. Gerry Studds, Transportation Secretary Federico Pena will visit the Quincy shipyard next week to learn first-hand the progress of the Quincy Shipyard Revitalization Project.

On Monday, Pena and Studds will attend a special meeting of the "host committee" formed by the city's economic development corporation, Quincy 2000, to market the shipyard. The committee will review efforts to obtain private investors, who have been attracted by President Clinton's commitment to Studds of $230 million in federal loan guarantees to modernize the yard and for ship construction.

"In December, when the President pledged to make the loan guarantee available, he said he would direct Secretary Pena to oversee the Revitalization Project," Studds said. "Now, some seven months later, I wanted him to see for himself what we've done, and what we still need to do, and he has graciously accepted by invitation."

Studds noted that when he announced the Revitalization Project in December, the head of the Maritime Administration, Vice Admiral Albert Herzberger, accompanied him. He said it is now appropriate that Secretary Pena see the yard.

Studds said Pena will tour the shipyard, including stopping at the vessel Southern Cross, which is berthed there. The 483-foot Ready Reserve Force ship serves as a training vessel for cadets at the Massachusetts Military Academy in Buzzards Bay to learn how to transport cargo in times of national crisis.

Studds will also discuss with Pena his legislative efforts to revitalize the shipbuilding and ship operating industries nationally.

Legion Baseball

Quincy Falls Under 7-Run Barrage

By KERRY BYRNE

The youngsters of the Quincy American Legion baseball team fell victim to the same problem that has plagued the club's elder members for much of the season - the big inning.

Fielding an inexperienced lineup, Quincy (3-11-1) hung tough through five innings before seven Holbrook (6-7-1) runs in the sixth gave the visitors a 12-4 win Monday night at Adams Field.

"We haven't had one big inning all year," said Quincy manager Ed Spring. "We scored five runs in the seventh when we came back to beat West Roxbury earlier in the season, but other than that we've been hurt by it."

With his team trailing, 5-4, Quincy relief pitcher Steve Roberts easily retired the first two batters he faced in the sixth before an error allowed Holbrook's Matt McGaughy to reach base and begin the decisive two-out, seven-run blitz.

Quincy looked strong early as they jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Mike Caporale singled to open the inning but was thrown out at second when Brian Oliver reached on a fielder's choice bunt. Brendan Ridge's rope down the left field line was good for two bases. He and Oliver came home when Holbrook shortstop Wes Bethune misplayed John Duffy's choppy bouncer up the middle. Steve Koch's 375-foot shot to deep center had extra-base potential save for a racing, over-the-shoulder, inning-ending grab by McGaughy.

Two miscues allowed Holbrook to cut the lead in half in the second. They took a 3-2 lead in the fourth courtesy of a walk and two doubles, but Quincy's Andy Kenney knocked home Duffy to tie the game in the bottom of the inning.

Holbrook took the lead for good in the fifth with two runs. The home squad made it a 5-4 game when Duffy again benefitted from a Bethune error (Duffy would reach base three times due to errors). This time it forced in Ridge, who reached on a double, his second of the game. The catcher notched three two-baggers in the contest, the third was a seventh-inning golf shot he nailed with the ball just inches off the plate.

"Ridge has been playing very well lately, it seems like all he does is hit doubles," said Spring.

With their disappointing season now two-thirds over, Spring and Quincy coaches Wayne Chambers, Mark Chambers and Nick Dragone felt it was time to give the young players a look.

"We figured we'd give the kids an opportunity. We're kind of looking towards next year but we still want our 18-year-olds to have a good finish. We have three players (Ridge, Steve Miller, George Wirtz) going off to college next year," said Spring.

Rookie Scott Pyer, in his first Legion start, was tough on the mound early for Quincy. He caught looking the first batter he faced and allowed only one hit through the first three innings, while adding two more K's to his total. His arm tiring, Pyer left the game in the fifth with the score knotted, 3-3.

"Except for the one inning I was pleased with the play of our younger players. I thought Pyer did a nice job. We made some nice plays but we botched others," said Spring.

Ridge's three doubles made him the game's most potent batsman. First baseman Kevin Nichol notched two singles. Caporale, Kenney and Pyer recorded Quincy's three other base hits.

Quincy's top defensive play was turned in by Koch, Duffy and Nichol when they combined for a 6-4-3 double play in the first inning. Several other DP attempts fell just short.

Quincy hosts games on three consecutive evenings beginning with Milton tonight (Thursday) at 8:30. Randolph follows, also with an 8:30 start. Saturday's game against West Roxbury will be played at 8 p.m.

DAN MURPHY PROUDLY shows off the 48-inch, 37-1/2-pound striped bass he caught off George's Island in Boston Harbor. It was the record catch of the season so far.

Quincy Man Lands 48-Inch, 37-1/2-Pound Striped Bass In Harbor

You've heard about the one that got away. This one didn't.

Dan Murphy of Merrymount Rd., Merrymount, recently caught a 48-inch, 37-1/2-pound striped bass off George's Island in Boston Harbor.

It was the biggest catch of the season to date, according to records at the Fore River Bait and Tackle Shop in Quincy Point.

Murphy, a supervisor at the Boston Post Office and a local fishing guide, was assisted in landing his prize by Captain Ike Kravetz, assistant Quincy Harbormaster.

It took 20 minutes to get the catch into Kravetz's boat.

Landing striped bass is nothing new for Murphy. Last year he reportedly caught over 1,000 but let them go. Each was under 36-inches and by fishing laws had to be freed.

St. John's Travel Teams Win Two Games

The St. John's baseball travel team captured consecutive wins over North River League opponents Halifax and Norwell.

St. John's edged Halifax, 3-2.

Tim Pezzulo spun magic on the mound. He held the opposition to six hits and two runs while striking out six.

Shortstop Dave Centrella stole home in the third to tie the contest. Third baseman Ryan McMahon (3 for 3) drove in the game-winning run with a double in the fifth inning. Catcher Jim Conostas held the fort at the plate by fending off three runners trying to score.

McMahon pitched brilliantly in the 8-4 win over Norwell. He fanned eight batters and walked just two.

The pitching ace again provided the game-winning hit with an RBI in the fourth. Centrella and Brad DiMartino both went 3 for 3 and score two runs.

The defense was anchored by Mike Hogan at first base while center fielder Chris Worley provided the fireworks - his spectacular catch saved two runs from scoring.

St. John's was scheduled to play Pembroke Wednesday, July 13, at 6 p.m.

Morrisette Wins Two, Eyes Playoff Spot

Morrisette improved its record to 10-4-1 and stayed in the playoff hunt with two wins and a tie this week in American Legion play.

Mike Kenney hurled Morrisette to an 8-1 win over crosstown rival Quincy. The 16-year-old held Quincy to four hits and one unearned run as he picked up his third win of the season without a loss. Kenney fanned four and walked three.

Quincy scored their only run in the top of the first. George Wirtz walked, stole second, and came home on an error.

Morrisette took the lead with two in the bottom of the inning. Neil Connelly singled and scored on a Dave Reinhart triple. Jim Sapienza's single knocked in Reinhart.

Morrisette struck for two more in the third. A Sapienza walk, along with a wild pitch, an error and a Joe Biagini single brought in the runs.

In the fifth A.J. Carthas and Sapienza each singled and came home on Tom Malvesti's three-bagger. Biagini's sacrifice fly brought home Malvesti. Morrisette closed out the scoring with a run in the sixth.

Sapienza went 3 for 3 with a double, walk, two RBIs, two runs scored and a stolen base.

Wirtz and Brendan Ridge each recorded doubles for Quincy. Mark Karlson and Steve Koch both had base hits. Timmy Byrne was the starting pitcher and Dan Burke worked in relief.

In their second contest of the week, Morrisette held a 9-6 lead going into the sixth but three Randolph runs knotted the game, 9-9. The game was called due to darkness.

Dan Duncan (one and one-third innings), Jeff Russell (four innings) and Pat Bryan (two-thirds innings) worked the mound for Morrisette. Russell was credited with the tie.

Morrisette opened strong with three runs in the top of the first. Mark Cahill got the ball rolling with a single and a stolen base. Reinhart's single brought him in. Back-to-back doubles by Carthas and Connelly knocked in the other two runs.

Two Others Honored 6 Inducted Into QHS Basketball Hall of Fame

By KERRY BYRNE

The Quincy Sons of Italy was the site as six new members were inducted into the Quincy High School basketball Hall of Fame. Also honored at the dinner were Janice Amoroso and Norma Finnegan.

Harold Kapsis, Russell Maver, John McKinnon, Al Taglieri, Stanley Berman and Robert Furfari were the 1994 inductees.

Kapsis' (Class of 1935) induction was a posthumous honor. "A gentleman's gentleman" was how Guido "Buddy" Pettinelli referred to the former star of two Quincy High Tech Tourney teams. Kapsis joined classmates Vic Digravio and Edward Dunn in the Hall of Fame. Another former teammate in the Hall is Howard Martin, class of 1934.

"Harold went to Westchester College in Pennsylvania after graduating from Quincy High," said Pettinelli. "But his father died of a heart attack and, like the type of man Harold was, he came home to support his family. That was the way things were done in his day."

Kapsis' wife Kathleen accepted the award.

Pettinelli also introduced Maver (1940). Red played on the 1939 Tech Tourney club and was team captain the following year, leading his team to the Southeastern Tourney. Like many of his generation Maver joined the Army after graduation. He was wounded at Luzon in the Philippines during World War II.

Former Quincy High

School coach and Hall member Joe Amoroso introduced the third inductee, McKinnon (1945).

"John possesses the most important criteria for getting into the Hall - he played against Buddy," joked Amoroso.

McKinnon played hoop for only two years at Quincy. In his sophomore year, 1943, America was in the midst of the war and the Presidents did not field a team. In 1944 he emerged as a hard-nosed player. In his senior year he was a top rebounder and defensive specialist. He helped carry the Presidents to a 16-1 record and an appearance in the Tech Tourney that season. McKinnon was widely regarded as the best defender in the league and was on the All-School Shore team. After school he served as a member of the United States Navy.

Former Quincy High coach and Quincy Athletic Director Martin Finnegan introduced the final three inductees.

Taglieri (1952), now a lawyer and businessman in North Carolina, was unable to attend the ceremony "due to personal family circumstances." Finnegan read a letter from the inductee expressing his thanks for the honor. Pettinelli spoke to Taglieri earlier and restated his gratitude with being inducted into the Hall. Taglieri was a league all-star and went on to become an All-New England player while at Dean College.

The fifth inductee, Berman (1952), epitomized teamwork, according to Finnegan.

"What sticks out in my mind about the '52 team is teamwork and they way they represented Quincy High," he said.

Said Berman: "I came up with a common thread about my basketball career...that was coaching. The coaches I had were truly concerned about players and this spilled over into other parts of my life. It helped make me a good businessman - made me a people type of boss."

The youngest honoree of the evening was Furfari (1967).

Said Finnegan: "In all the years I've coached at Quincy no one has ever, without question, been a better rebounder than Bob. He was 6'1" and skinny but a tremendous rebounder. A true all-around team player. No one has ever been more deserving of this honor than Bob Furfari."

In the tall, lanky Furfari Finnegan saw a problem that has plagued Quincy High basketball for years. "It has always amazed me how Quincy boys never grow over 6'1" until after high school," he quipped.

Furfari had several tremendous performances during his senior season, a year in which he averaged 16 points per game. Against Everett he went 16 of 17 from the line and grabbed 22 boards. In outings versus Somerville and Medford he cleaned the glass 24 and 26 times, respectively.

"If it were not for my teammates I wouldn't be here today," said the emotional Furfari. And, he joked, "I'll never forgive coach Finnegan for a couple of the things he did, like making us run all those stairs at Quincy High - with size 12 feet it's not that easy - and for getting coach (Bud) Mosher from the football team to beat on us."

The women, both wives of former Quincy High basketball coaches ("basketball widows," if you will), were honored for the many years of sacrifice and commitment they made for the young men who played basketball at Quincy High.

Janice Amoroso, wife of former President head coach (1972-1983) Joe, was credited by her son Paul for the "love and support she gave to my father's players. She would go to all the games, often getting completely lost in small towns throughout the state. She also became a pro at consoling a disappointed coach in the middle of the night."

Mrs. Amoroso reminisced about meeting her future husband "at, where else, a Celtics game." She also recalled the years of following buses to games and making uniforms for the players.

"On behalf of my family I graciously accept this award and say thank you to everyone involved," she said.

Norma Finnegan was also introduced by her son, former Quincy High basketball star and coach, Mitch.

"Some mothers teach their daughters how to sew or cook, my mother taught my sisters how to keep shot charts and track rebounds," said Mitch. He also pointed to his mother's inspiration as the reason why he was able to finish playing a senior year in which he suffered from illness and injury.

"After all these years it's not the wins or losses I remember but the sight of young boys becoming men, pursuing a common goal," said Mrs. Finnegan. "It's not what I have contributed to Quincy High basketball but what Quincy High has contributed to our lives."

Recent Quincy High graduate Mike Bartlett, captain of the 1994 hoop team, was the recipient of a scholarship donated by the 1962 team. Bartlett will attend Westfield State College in the fall. The 1962 team, known as the Firehouse Five, was inducted as a unit into the Hall of Fame. Robert Chew, William Donovan, with four runs in the bottom of the first session due to five walks and one hit.

Frank Driscoll, Robert P. Mina and William Nolan give the scholarship every year to a deserving Quincy High senior.

The home team took a 5-3 lead with another run in the second.

Morrisette tied the game with two runs in the third. Three players walked while Reinhart singled and Biagini sacrificed. A wild pitch also helped Morrisette. They took the lead with one run each in the fourth and fifth innings. Two runs in the sixth gave Morrisette the 9-6 lead.

Two walks and two hits allowed Randolph to make the comeback. Morrisette walked nine Randolph batters in the game.

Reinhart continued to rip the cover off the ball. He went 4 for 4, scored three runs and drove in two. Connolly also had two RBIs on a single, a double and a walk. Others with big games included Carthas (single, double, walk, RBI, two runs), Biagini (two sacrifice RBIs), Cahill (two hits, stolen base) and Russell (base hit). With 39 runs in their last four games, Morrisette has had no problem lighting up the scoreboard, but bases on balls have plagued the pitching staff.

Morrisette closed the week with a 3-2 win over West Roxbury.

Malvesti upped his record to 4-1 with a 13 strikeout, complete-game outing. He allowed just three hits and both runs were unearned. His sixth-inning, two-run double was the game-winner.

Malvesti and WR hurler Jeff Bingham carried shutouts into the sixth inning. Each team managed just two hits until that point.

With two outs in the sixth Morrisette pieced together four hits. Carthas, Sapienza and Biagini singled to bring home one run and set up Malvesti's double.

West Roxbury also scored their two runs in the sixth.

Morrisette threatened again in the seventh as they loaded the bases with nobody out. Bingham fanned the next two batters and got the third out on an infield fly. Bingham recorded 11 strikeouts.

Carthas and Malvesti notched two hits each. Sapienza and Biagini both had one hit.

Morrisette's game against Holbrook last Friday was rained out.

Morrisette travels to Braintree Saturday night for a 7:30 contest. They play at Milton Monday at 6 p.m. and host Canton at Adams Field Tuesday night at 8:30.

International League

Everlasting Engraving In World Series

Everlasting Engraving entered the International League World Series after wins over Osco Drug and Noll Electrical.

John Leonard backhoned the 8-4 win over Osco with a 10 strikeout performance.

Paul Inferrera nailed a two-run single to drive in the game-winning run. Also leading the offense for Everlasting were Pat McDonough with two singles and a double, Billy O'Connell with a double and triple, and Chris Mannix and John Hanfin with two singles each.

Chris Burden, John McCue, Jarrod Decelle and Matt and Jeff Langille were the defensive stalwarts.

Osco's Joe Vando had two base hits and Mike Martin clubbed a double. John Harter and Patrick Dunner were the top players in the field.

Decelle (seven K's) was the winning pitcher in EE's 10-7 win over Noll Electrical.

Johnny Ly's two-run single in the fourth proved to be the game-winner. McDonough, Leonard, O'Connell, Mannix and Matt Langille each recorded two singles.

Burden, McCue,

Inferrera and Chris Leonard were the defensive stars for Everlasting. A Decelle to O'Connell double play ended the contest.

John Parastades and Charlie Doherty were Noll's top performers. Chris McNaught notched two RBIs with a single in the third inning.

ATSS Beats IHOP

ATSS overcame an early 7-1 deficit to beat IHOP, 11-7, in a Triple A double-elimination playoff game.

Steve Reddy was the winning pitcher. He struck out 10 and allowed just five hits.

Seven runs in the bottom of the third gave ATSS the lead for good. John Mercurio's grand slam was the highlight of the inning. Other hits were recorded by Reddy, Adam MacMillan and Adam Smith. Consecutive walks by Dean Zoia and Ryan Stoeckel preceded Mercurio's blast.

Zoia also homered. MacMillan notched three hits in the contest, including a double. Other two-baggers were clubbed by Reddy and Steve Joyce.

Babe Ruth

Walker, Walsh Lead Fire Past Police

Timely hitting by Billy Walker and strong relief pitching by Bobby Walsh helped Fire Dept. snuff out Quincy Police, 6-5, in Babe Ruth League ball.

Walker (three RBIs) drove in the game-winning run in the fifth. He went 3 for 4 at the plate and played well behind it. Walsh retired the only six Police batters he faced to stifle any comeback bid.

Fire Dept. jumped to a 4-0 lead after two innings. The big hit was Walker's two-out, two-run shot in the first.

Police fought back to tie the contest with four runs in the third. Pat Dolbear's double drove in two of the four runs.

Fire Dept. took the lead for good with single runs in both the fourth and fifth innings, which set up Walsh's save effort.

Hitting stars for Fire Dept. were Mike Doyle, who recorded two hits and reached base three times, and James McDonagh and Mike McLaughlin who notched one hit each. Manny Vasquez and Jose Diaz made key plays in the field to help Fire Dept. to their third win in a row.

Mike Eddy had another outstanding day as his Bryan Post club tarnished Golden Print, 10-5, in extra innings.

Eddy was perfect at the plate with two hits, three walks and three RBIs. He was flawless behind the plate in the game's first seven innings, which included a couple of game-saving plays. Eddy capped the performance with a save in relief of winning pitcher Mark Kelly.

BP jumped to an early 5-1 lead behind RBI hits from Eddy and Shawn Manning, but Golden Print rallied to tie the game 5-5 on key hits by John Sullivan and Sean Donovan.

Bryan Post broke the contest open with five runs in the eighth. Clutch RBI hits were notched by Kevin Cellucci, Steve Wiltshire, Kelly and Eddy. Matt Graham's hustle on the base paths led to the game-winning run.

Brian "Kocket" Rosko" Ross blew past 13 batters as Local 1139 booted Sons of Italy, 6-3.

Local's Mike Russo paced the offense with a 3 for 3 effort that included two doubles and a single. Mike Reidy turned in the game's defensive gem with a spectacular shoestring catch in the fifth that ended the inning and prevented a run from scoring. If he reached, the robbed batsman would have represented the tying run.

Ross's record stands at 8-1.

The game's top longball was clubbed by SOI's Jim Deboer - a ground-rule double which reached Hancock St. from the plate at Merrymount Field. Eric Goodrich, Ted Veclicio and Sean Manning combined for an inning ending double play in the fifth. Second baseman Veclicio also robbed Local's Jeff Russo of a hit with a diving catch in the fourth.

Using a 17-hit attack, the league-leading Elks slit Houghs Neck, 13-1.

Chris Bregoli opened the barrage with a single and steals of second and third. He scored when Jackie Daly ripped a single.

The game was put out of reach in third when the Elks scored eight runs. Tim Wood reached third on an three-base error and Scott Statti singled him in. Rusty Corner and Matt McLoughlin reached base on errors which set up Andrew Byrne's two-run double.

Eric Wood followed with an RBI single. Bregoli then tripled down the left field line for two more runs.

Ted McGillicuddy knocked in two Elks runs with a double in the fourth. Statti was responsible for their final two runs as he notched RBI base hits in both the fifth and seventh innings. Statti was the game's top batsman - he finished the contest with four hits and three RBIs.

Byrne picked up the win in five innings of work. Eric Wood earned the save with two innings of flawless pitching.

Houghs Neck was paced by the stick of Mark Glynn. He clubbed two hits, including an RBI double.

Junior League

Close Games Highlight Junior League Playoffs

In was a week of last inning heroics in the Junior League playoffs.

In a battle between the league heavyweights, Lions sped around Rotary, 4-3, with two runs in the final inning. The tough loss knocked Rotary, a preseason favorite to win the Junior League title, out of the tournament.

The same two clubs met in the regular season finale in a game that decided the regular season championship. Lions won 3-2 behind Brian Deputula's no-hitter.

Trailing 3-2 in the sixth and final inning, Lions' Patrick Jaehing hustled out a single to start the rally. With one out Dan Dorsey laid down a beautiful bunt single. Josh Smith fouled off a couple of tough pitches before hitting a two-strike single to right field to load the bases. Mike Keddy hit a sacrifice fly to bring home Chris Doherty with the tying run and Dorsey came around with the winning run on an errant throw.

Lions' pitcher Andrew overcame a control problem and some early defensive lapses to strike out 10 and earn the win. He also nailed a first-inning, two-run double.

Other Lions' stars included Brian Deputula, who recorded a single and played a strong game behind the plate. Keddy belted two hits to go with his key sacrifice. Tommy Buckley snuffed out a potential run with a heads-up play at the hot corner.

Rotary was led by the big stick and big arm of Kiva Tupe. He slammed and RBI double and pitched an excellent ball game. Shortstop Adam Goodrich, catcher Frankie Currier and right fielder Patrick Duffy played top-notch ball defensively. Currier, Duff and David Benn each hit singles.

Defending league champion Continental Cablevision scored two runs with two outs of the bottom of sixth to edge the Elks, 5-4, in first round playoff action.

With a 4-3 lead the Elks were poised to take the victory. But Cable's Mark Dunn walked and Chris Wilson cracked a single to left field. Facing two strikes, Craig Royce slapped a base hit into right field to load the bases. Dan Duggan stroked a 1-1 pitch to bring home Dunn with the tying run. Wilson scored the game-winner on a wild pitch with Pat Bregoli at the plate.

Cable's Ryan Hutchings and the Elks' Ryan Piccinin squared off in the pitcher's duel.

Cable struck first when Hutchings and Joe Ardagna both singled with one out. Didier Alther doubled them home for a 2-0 lead. Wilson led off the second with an infield hit. He then stole second and third and came home on Duggan's squeeze bunt.

The Elks trailed 3-1 in the sixth before Piccinin opened the inning with a walk. With two outs, Mike Feiner walked and Matt Barrett singled in a run. The Elks took the lead with two more runs when consecutive walks were issued to Frank Alibrandi, Phil McGillicuddy and Sean Lynch.

Hutchings hurled a two-hitter and fanned seven. He had a no-hitter through three innings. Billy Davis made Cable's top defensive play in the third when he snared a line drive and turned it into a double play.

Piccinin fanned 10 for the Elks in a complete game effort. Billy O'Toole recorded their first hit when he touched Hutchings for a double in the fourth.

In the opening round of the playoffs, Lions slammed the door on South Shore Buick, 12-0.

Fireballer Brian Deputula was a dominant force. He smoked 12 batters while surrendering only two hits. At the plate he single-handedly outhit the opposition with three strokes of his own, including a long triple.

Lions' Danny Dorsey clocked the biggest hit of the game when he lined a two-out, two-strike shot into the gap and turned it into a three-run roundtripper. During his next at-bat he clubbed a longball over the center fielder's head for a double.

Ryan Kreuger went 4 for 4. Chris Doherty, Dan O'Toole and Andrew Currie had two hits each and Brandon Sleeth smashed a three-bagger down the left field line. Left fielder Mark Maher turned in the top defensive play with a running catch that prevented Buick from taking an early lead.

SSB hurler pitched well before succumbing to the 95-degree heat. On the defense, Miab Hasson caught a superb game. Neil Gavin made a stellar shoestring catch and Dan Cabral kept the game scoreless with an unassisted double play on a screaming liner to third base which had three-run potential.

In the league's final regular season game's, Andrew Currie's 10 K's led Lions to a 3-2 win over the Elks.

Danny O'Toole's last-inning homer gave the regular season champs a 2-1 win over Kiwanis.

Didier Alther fanned 10 in a two-hit, complete-game effort to lead Cable past Colonial Federal, 12-1. The game clinched a playoff spot for Cable.

Four was the magic number for Cable's top batsman, Mike Welch. He went 4 for 4, scored four runs, and notched four RBIs.

Pat Bregoli scored three runs. Ryan Hutchings knocked in three. Also recording RBIs were Joe Ardagna (two) and Matt Moriarty (one).

Four players took the mound for Cable as the beat the Elks, 13-5, in their regular season finale. The win gave them a record of 13-9.

Ardagna's longball over the right field fence gave Cable a 1-0 lead. He went 4 for 4 and scored three times. Also nailing the ball was Billy Davis (two-run triple). Hutchings and Alther each had two RBIs.

Elk Ryan Piccinin recorded two RBIs and Billy O'Toole had two base hits.

The Junior League playoffs take place nightly at 6:00 at McCoy Field across from Veteran's Stadium.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Dr. Samuel Johnson's injunction "Keep your friendships in repair" should be applied to books as well as to persons.

Books are friends at all times. If we treat them well, we can enjoy their companionship when human friends have passed beyond our reach or have grown out of us. In every phase of life they are loyal friends, and, if they show signs of wear, that only proves how much we have cared for them. They repay us by linking youth with middle age and refreshing us in our later years as they inspired us in our earlier years. Unlike friends who never answer letters, our books always speak when we open them.

Edwin M. Green, 82

Worked As Cook, Security Guard; Decorated World War II Veteran

A funeral service for Edwin M. Green, 82, of Quincy, was held July 7 in the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St.

Mr. Green died July 4 in Quincy Hospital after a long illness.

He was a cook at Sherry's in Quincy and the Cock and Kettle restaurant in Scituate for many years.

A security guard at South Shore National Bank for 20 years, he retired in 1992.

A decorated Army veteran of World War II, he served as a technical sergeant with the 324th Engineers Battalion in Algiers, Tunisia, Sicily, Normandy and the Rhineland. Mr. Green received the Distinguished Unit Badge with two oakleaf clusters, the Eastern Theater Campaign Ribbon and the European Africa Medal.

Born in Boston, he was educated in Quincy where he was a lifelong resident.

Mr. Green was a member of the Quincy Masonic Lodge.

He is survived by his wife, Beatrice A. (Hollis) Green; a son and daughter, Edwin M. Green Jr. of Natick and Marsha LeHane of Florida; 13 brothers and sisters, and three grandchildren. He was the husband of the late Blanche Bianca (DePhillips) Green.

Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

William J. Brissenden, 56

Salesman For Car Dealership; Suffered From Multiple Sclerosis

A funeral Mass for William J. Brissenden, 56, of Quincy, was celebrated July 7 in Most Blessed Sacrament Church.

Mr. Brissenden died July 3 in Carney Hospital, Dorchester, after a 17-year battle with progressive degenerative multiple sclerosis.

A salesman for Miles Chrysler City car dealership in Allston, he was skilled in auto mechanics, carpentry and plumbing. He had worked in sales in a variety of fields before becoming a car salesman.

He had strong Roman Catholic faith and watched the Mass each day on Boston Catholic Television. Every year on his birthday, a priest would come to his home to celebrate Mass.

An avid sailor, he once owned a 27-foot Soling racer that he sailed in Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor. When he became ill, he got a smaller boat that he could handle. While in a wheelchair, he made builders' half models of sailboats for friends who helped him during his illness.

He learned to paint with oils by watching artist Bill Alexander on Channel 2 television since he became bedridden.

Mr. Brissenden was born in Woburn where he played high school football and earned the Boy Scout Ad Altai De Medal and the Eagle Scout Award. He moved to Quincy 20 years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy L. (Litchfield) Brissenden; two sons and two daughters, David Brissenden, James Brissenden and Valerie Gaw, all of Stoneham, and Michelle Brissenden of Sandown, N.H.; his mother, Rose (Reddy) Brissenden of Woburn; two sisters, Mary R. Bruce of Carlisle and Margaret Mulcahey of Los Angeles; an aunt, Grace Riley of Reading; his wife's mother, Dorothy Litchfield-Spanos of Norwell; two grandchildren and several cousins. He was the son of the late James F. Brissenden.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St.

Donations may be made to the Multiple Sclerosis Society, 400 Totten Pond Rd., Waltham, or Boston Catholic Television Center, 55 Chapel St., Newton, MA 02158.

Grace E. Botto, 80

Former Government Employee; Worked As Waitress For 30 Years

A funeral Mass for Grace E. Botto, 80, of Quincy, was celebrated July 8 in St. Joseph's Church.

Mrs. Botto died July 4 in Quincy Hospital.

A government employee at South Weymouth Naval Air Station and a volunteer with the Quincy Hospital Auxiliary, she worked for the Massa Lab in Hingham and was a waitress at the former Worrick Mansion for 30 years.

She was a member of Hingham Sons of Italy and the Senior Citizens Club at 1000 Southern Artery. Born in Greenfield, Mrs. Botto lived in Hull before moving to Quincy 22 years ago.

Wife of the late Aldo A. Botto, she is survived by a son and a daughter, Gerald Sharkey of Quincy and Elaine Nardo of Nantasket; three grandchildren, a great-grandchild, and many cousins.

Burial was in Holy Family Cemetery, Rockland.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St.

Joe Hajjar Not Singing The Blues Promoter Calls Blues Festival Success Despite Financial Loss

Despite a lower-than-anticipated turnout, the sponsor of the second annual City of Presidents Blues Festival at Veterans Memorial Stadium last Saturday said he's happy with how the show went.

In other words, Joe Hajjar is not singing the blues.

Hajjar, 44, owner and proprietor of The Yardrock Blues Club in Quincy Point, estimated that just under 2,000 people attended the festival. But although turnout was relatively light—Hajjar guessed that he would have needed between 2,500 and 3,000 people to break even on the show, which he said cost between $20,000 and $25,000—called the event a "major-league success."

"It was a major gain for the city, my club and my reputation in terms of publicity," said Hajjar. "Despite any financial loss to me, we set a precedent."

Final numbers were not available at press time, but Hajjar, who was the sole sponsor for the event—other than for minor expenses such as city permits and a police detail, which Hajjar said cost around $4,000 and were funded by Mayor James Sheets' office—estimated that he lost between $3,500 and $5,000 on the festival.

Still, he remained upbeat about the show itself, saying that it was extremely well-organized.

"I'm very proud of how it went," he said. "It went very, very smoothly, and we did it on a shoestring budget. There wasn't a single complaint all day long about anyone getting out of hand. All day long, we got nothing but compliments, compliments, compliments."

Hajjar said such events are important for the city because they will help foster tourism and cultural diversity, two elements that are essential to Quincy's future.

He added that he was pleased with the fact that Gov. William Weld, a fan of The James Montgomery Band, attended the festival. The band was one of 10 acts that performed during the eight-hour event.

"He (Weld) really got into it," said Hajjar. "He came right in and he wasn't intimidated at all by the stadium full of people."

Hajjar said other officials who attended the event were state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Mayor James Sheets, Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

Hajjar said he thought three factors kept down attendance at the show: weather, since skies were dark and cloudy in Quincy for a good part of the day and other nearby towns were pelted with rain; lack of preparation time, and the fact that the show was held on a Saturday.

He added that he hopes next year's third annual festival, which he plans to discuss with Sheets' office in the near future, can be held on a Sunday. That way, he thinks, more people will be able to attend.

The first annual City of Presidents Blues Festival at the stadium was actually held last year but in 1992. Hajjar said that show attracted numbers only slightly higher than this year's, despite the fact that there was more preparation time and it was held on a Sunday.

However, he added that the show two years ago would have had a larger attendance had it not coincided with the city's 200th birthday celebration (Quincy split from Braintree and became an independent town in 1792) and the arrival of the Tall Ships in Boston.

"The Tall Ships definitely had an impact," he said. "People were everywhere that day."

Hajjar said the 1992 show would probably have made a profit if the city had decided to charge $10 a ticket—the same price as this year's show—rather than selling them for $5 apiece in conjunction with the bicentennial celebration.

Wally Amos, 'Cookie Mogul,' To Appear Monday At Infinity Books

In the mid-70s, Wally Amos raised chocolate chip cookies to new heights and his name became a household word.

A decade later, he had lost almost everything, including the right to use his own name or likeness on any other products, especially cookies.

Undaunted, he has since launched a new product line, committed himself to community service and written a book that outlines what he did to help himself weather his financial and personal storm.

Wally Amos will speak

WALLY AMOS

at Infinity Books, 1514 Hancock St., Quincy Center, Monday, July 18, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. He will be signing copies of his new book, Man With No Name. This will be his only Boston-area appearance other than on television and radio.

Subtitled "Turn Lemons Into Lemonade," Man With No Name details the values that buoyed Amos' spirits and kept him focused as he directed his talents and energies into new ventures while he was also involved in a lawsuit.

Amos is a past recipient of the President's Award for Entrepreneurial Excellence.

For more information, call 479-9941.

Laura Janowitch Receives Reading Award

Laura Janowitch of Quincy, a grade five student at the Brimmer and May School, Chestnut Hill, is the recipient of that school's reading award.

The award is given to a

To Determine Wal-Mart Impact Firm Hired To Appraise Falls Condominiums

The firm of Byrne McKinney and Associates Inc. has been selected to a real estate appraisals report regarding the condominiums located at The Falls complex in Quincy Point.

The announcement was made Tuesday by City Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro.

The councillors said a request for proposals was published two weeks ago and five firms responded. A selection committee of various city officials, including Cheney, made the final selection.

The councillors said the purpose of the appraisal is to determine what effects, if any, there will be on the real estate values at The Falls if a proposed Wal-Mart store is constructed nearby.

A previous report produced by the Hunneman Company Corp. said there would be no adverse affect on property values to the adjacent condos. However, some residents felt the report was biased because it was paid for by Atlantic Development Corp.--the developer of the proposed project--and asked for a new report by an independent firm.

The Byrne McKinney report will be paid for through the use of Community Development Block Grant monies, the councillors said. The report is due to be completed by mid-August.

Cheney and DeCristofaro said they will set up a meeting with Falls residents following the report's completion to give them an opportunity to ask the real estate appraisal firm questions about the report.

Tympanette Micro-Canal Hearing Instrument Now Available

Our office is happy to announce that we are now fitting a completely In-The-Canal hearing instrument. This remarkable new hearing aid is not only more discreet and comfortable to wear, it may also provide important hearing benefits because of its deep placement in the ear canal.

The Tympanette is the smallest hearing aid ever manufactured by Starkey Laboratories, the world's leading manufacturer of custom hearing instruments. Its extremely small size will be very popular, so call now for your hearing assessment and consultation.

Call today to schedule your appointment.

Deep: The Tympanette micro-canal hearing aid, a breakthrough in hearing aid design, fits deep in the ear canal and is barely noticeable.

Bond Package Seen Likely To Pass Council

Mayor James Sheets' bond package of nearly $11 million appeared assured of easy passage at a special City Council meeting last night (Wednesday).

City Council President Michael Cheney said before The Sun went to press Tuesday that he felt the bond has been discussed thoroughly and therefore would receive the council's support.

"All the pertinent questions were addressed in the past, so I would expect it to pass the council," he said.

The City Council Finance Committee voted 5-0-1 in favor of the package last month, with Councillor Timothy Cahill voting present. Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro did not attend the meeting, and Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and Councillor Joseph LaRaia had to leave early.

The $10,860,000 bond package includes $5.2 million for the city's schools--including $4.8 million for major construction at the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy and the soon to be reopened Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston--and $2.9 million to refurbish all of the city's parks and playgrounds.

The rest of the money is earmarked for improvements to Wollaston Center, repairs to Houghs Neck seawalls, and other city projects.

Despite favorable reaction from other councillors,

Death Benefit Legislation Provides Security, Says Morrissey

Governor William Weld has signed a bill which will provide a $100,000 death benefit to the survivors of a police officer, fire fighter or corrections officer killed in the line of duty, announces State Sen. Michael Morrissey.

Morrissey, a primary sponsor of the measure, said the passage of the legislation demonstrates that, "we recognize that these public servants put their lives on the line and face danger everyday. Although we can not bring back those who have given their lives to protect us, the passage of this bill will provide them with a sense of security as they will know that their families will be taken care of in the event of a tragic accident."

"Twenty-seven fire fighters have been killed in the line of duty since 1976, while the escalating violence on our streets puts police officers and corrections officers in an increasingly dangerous situation," Morrissey said. "These men and women have given the final measure of devotion for our safety and well being and this is the least we can do for them. The recent death of Boston Fire Fighter Lt. Stephen Minehan only serves to highlight the danger faced by our public safety officials and points out the critical importance and need for this legislation."

Weld, in signing the bill at a State House ceremony, said, "law enforcement officers who have sacrificed their lives have paid the highest price for our safety. We support the $100,000 death benefit not because it comes close to reclaiming a family's loss, but because it is the right thing to do."

The public safety employee line-of-duty death benefit will apply to any line-of-duty death occurring on or after Sept. 1, 1993.

HEARTY ALTERNATIVE TO SURGERY AND DRUGS

When the country's largest provider of health insurance for individuals starts paying for a new approach to heart therapy, it is worth a closer look. Dubbed "reversal therapy," the approach is actually not so much new as it is a recognition of things health professionals have been recommending for years. It combines diet, meditation, exercise, and support groups to reverse the effects of coronary-artery disease. In documented clinical trials spanning 16 years, more than 80 percent of patients experienced significant health improvements after one year of making the prescribed lifestyle changes. Reversal therapy is no the answer for every heart patient, but it definitely holds promise for many.

P.S. Reversal therapy usually costs about one-tenth that of more traditional approaches to heart health.

We can all reduce our risk of heart attack by making simple, yet significant, changes in our lifestyles. Simply adding a brisk half hour walk three times a week can make a difference—as can, of course, quitting smoking today. If you'd like more information, feel free to call either of the doctors—myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Our office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

He Likes It

He's Acting Mayor Michael Cheney again this week—and loving it.

Cheney, as City Council president, is the city's chief executive while Mayor James Sheets is on a 10-day trip to Ireland.

Sheets, his wife, Joann, and a group of nearly 170 Quincy residents, left last Wednesday and are schedule to return Saturday.

While over there, Sheets hopes to mix a little business with pleasure by promoting Quincy tourism.

And, over here, meanwhile, Cheney sounds like he is having a ball.

"I'm really enjoying it," he says. "It gives you the chance to see things from a different perspective and a chance to interact with department heads at a different level than a councillor. A councillor is one of nine, the mayor is one of one. The mayor has to make on-the-spot decisions."

Cheney says he has a good relationship with Sheets.

"He feels comfortable going out of town and leaving me in charge. We don't agree 100 per cent on everything but we see most things the same way."

Cheney figures he has had the opportunity to be acting mayor for a total month or so since January while Sheets has been out of town.

This includes trips to Washington and the invitation to attend the Special Mayors Conference in Israel in March.

As fate would have it, there always seems to be something newsworthy for Cheney as acting mayor. He has called the executive shots during a major snowstorm and cranked up defenses for a threatened storm that would have caused heavy flooding if it had hit.

This week, it's Wollaston Beach and the gangs of teen-agers gathering there. Curfew or police patrols was the question. Cheney opted for state police patrols.

And today (Thursday), he gets to cut the ribbon at the opening of the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival after a near scheduling collision with a carnival.

"I'm getting a lot of experience," he says.

Would he consider it on-the-job training?

"Yes, you could say that."

CHENEY

Does that mean he's going to run for mayor?

"Not right now, but I would be interested somewhere down the road."

Would he run against Sheets?

"No, we get along very well. He's doing a good job. I would never run against him. It would be when the seat is open."

AND IS CHENEY beginning to build a war chest for when the mayor's seat does open?

An intriguing fundraiser coming up for him should have City Hall observers wondering.

A Texas-style barbecue is set for Thursday, July 28, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the 12 Sea St. home of his parents, Tom and Barbara Cheney. Tickets are $100.

An accompanying letter that went out with the invitations notes that the barbecue "will serve as a fundraiser to help support Michael's future candidacy for public office."

Not "re-election to the City Council." But "future candidacy for public office."

That should get 'em guessing.

COUNCILLOR TIM CAHILL, another with his eye on the mayor's office, will host a Pool Party fund-raiser Wednesday, July 27, from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Shooters Club Cafe, 1591 Hancock St. in the Quincy Fair Mall.

Tickets, $15 per person and $25 per couple, can be obtained at the door or by calling 328-6699. They include unlimited pool and pizza.

A RETIREMENT COOKOUT party for Delma Hale, administrative secretary to DPW Commissioner David Colton, will be held Saturday at his home from 4 to 9 p.m.

Delma is closing out 24 years of service with the city. For more information on the cook, call Kathy McAlduff at 376-1904.

Cheney Appoints Summer Entertainment Committee

City Council President and Acting Mayor Michael Cheney appointed a committee Tuesday to study the feasibility of providing family entertainment in the city's ballparks during the summer.

Cheney said the committee is made up of representatives from the Park and Recreation Department, the Park and Recreation Board, Mark Leighton and Rick Iacobucci of First Night-Quincy, and Bill Morrill of Creative Affairs.

Cheney said the committee will look at the possibility of scheduling at least one event per neighborhood beginning next summer. He added that he hopes to sponsor such events through private funds.

Cheney said that like First Night, the events will be non-alcoholic family evenings and will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. He also noted that he has asked the committee to submit a report of their findings by September.

New Committee To Propose Naval Center Use

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority recently honored four Quincy residents for their long-term service to the MWRA Sewerage Division.

They are: Albert Emery, honored for 45 years of service; Joan MacKenzie, 30 years and John Greene and George Morano, 25 years apiece.

Emery began in 1949 as a steam/fireman and worked his way through the ranks of the Pumping Station to become a diesel power plant operator.

MacKenzie, an administrative clerk, began in 1964 as a senior stenographer and for 30 years has directed the administrative group at the Nut Island Treatment Plant.

Greene began in 1969 with the Public Welfare Department. In 1971 he was appointed a permanent laborer at the Deer Island Treatment Plant and in 1978 was promoted to skilled laborer at the Columbus Parks Headquarters.

Morano started in 1969 with the Metropolitan District Commission Old Colony Parks Division. In 1971, he was appointed skilled laborer at the Columbus Parks Headquarters. A year later, he was appointed sewerage treatment plant attendant at Nut Island and in 1976 was promoted to assistant sewage treatment plant operator.

The MWRA Human Resources Department began its Employee Recognition Program in 1988 to honor employees for their long-term service. In all, 18 employees were recently honored.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920 POSTCARD shows a bustling Quincy Square much different than it appears today. The Hancock House in the center of the picture served as a hotel for almost 100 years. It was a favorite stopping spot for Daniel Webster on his many trips up from his home in Marshfield to Boston.

The trolley emerging from behind City Hall is on Depot Street which ran down to Quincy station of the Old Colony Railroad. Today much of this scene is open space and includes the newly landscaped 'Walk of Names.'

Curfews Are The Wrong Answer

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recent calls by some Quincy city officials to institute a curfew along Wollaston Boulevard just hasn't made sense. I don't care what they're doing in Lynn or Somerville or further away kn Orlando or Dallas, curfews are the wrong answer and in the short-term, won't even make people feel good. The problem isn't really age-wise as much as it is action-wise.

Funny that prior to the merger of several state police agencies, the need for curfews was never mentioned. When the MDC-owned Wollaston Beach was patrolled by the Metropolitan Police, rowdiness at the beach was never a major issue. However, when the Mets were replaced by state troopers, it was quite evident that the powers-that-be at the Massachusetts State Police Headquarters pulled back their police presence at MDC beaches including Wollaston Beach.

As someone who regularly walks the beach for exercise, I rarely see state troopers or police cruisers patrolling the beach. I always saw a visible police presence prior to the police agencies merger. City Councillor Mike Cheney has announced plans by the state police to again provide foot patrols along the beach. When the state police do that, I am sure the need for any curfews will disappear. Curfews, afterall, should always be considered last resorts for emergencies only.

Blaming young people alone for the problem is unnecessary. We need to deal with all troublemakers along the beach, no matter what their age, but singling out young people as second-class citizens is the wrong answer.

Hopefully, the Massachusetts State Police will now renew the commitment to Wollaston Boulevard that had previously been upheld by the old Metropolitan Police Department.

Granite Crossing Shopping Center Good For City

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am in favor of building the Granite Crossing Shopping Center because I think it will be good for Quincy and we need the economic boost it will bring.

I think every Quincy resident should know the benefits the City of Quincy will receive if this project goes through and think of what we will be passing up if we let it get away.

Every Quincy resident should know that the city will get over $550,000 in taxes every year, $1 million dollars worth of traffic improvements, 200 union construction jobs and more than 500 permanent jobs when the stores are built. If the opponents of this project prevail, the City of Quincy will get nothing and one of our neighbors will probably get it all.

O'Brien Towers Tenants Grateful To Quincy Elks

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We would be extremely grateful if you would allow us to express our gratitude, through your newspaper, to a very fine group of people who were very gracious to us.

The Quincy Elks Lodge donated a huge Bingo Board to us here at the O'Brien Towers in Germantown, and in doing so, has enhanced our Bingo Games to a very high point and satisfaction.

We are so thrilled at our acquisition that we would like to sing their praises to everyone, in appreciation. Thank you again, all you Quincy Elks members, thank you.

Industrial Union Organized By Fore River Workers

Some 300 workers from the Fore River Shipyard, meeting in the Elks Hall, organized the first industrial-type union the history of the shipyard and received a charter from John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America.

60 Years Ago

Local officers elected to serve until the national convention in September were Jeremiah Mitchell, president; Lionel Whitten, vice president; James Hardie, recording secretary; William Westland, financial secretary; James A. Sinclair, treasurer.

Meanwhile, John P. Frey, head of the rival American Federal of Labor's Metal Trades Department, charged that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. was violating the law by interfering with the workers' right to organize through the maintenance of a company union.

Frey labelled "ridiculous" a charge by the company union, the Employees' Representative Body, that AFL is trying to lure government ship contract away from private shipyards and give them to Navy yards. Frey spoke to about 100 workers in Bradford Hall.

Henry L. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the Navy and a cousin of the President, visited the Quincy yard to inspect six naval vessels now under construction and said Former Rep. Edward J. Sandberg announced Fore River will be given favorable consideration when bids on new Navy contracts are opened Aug. 15.

DRIVE VS. DIRTY MOVIES

Roman Catholic churches in Quincy launched a drive against immorality in motion pictures and Mayor Charles A. Ross lauded the move as one that will "undoubtedly result in the elimination of much that has been objectionable in the past."

The Rev. Victor V. Sawyer of the Wollaston Methodist Church, speaking for the Quincy Ministers Association, said he doubted if the Protestant churches will join the movement as a body but that several ministers probably will ask their parishioners not to attend the movies.

CARPENTERS STRIKE

Carpenters working on the Fore River Bridge were on strike claiming that some of them were receiving only 60 cents an hour instead of the promised $1.20 from the contractor, V. Barletta.

Barletta was reported to have told a delegation of workers that, when a carpenter goes to work for him, he is required to do the same amount of work as any other carpenter, no matter what he is paid.

City Clerk Joe Shea

From Young Democrat To City Ombudsman

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. You began your career in Quincy as executive secretary to former Mayor Walter Hannon. How did that come about?

A. Well, back in the late '60s, I joined the Young Democrats in Quincy and became very active politically, and wanted to study the political process, and in fact started going to Quincy College and took political science as a major. I worked in various campaigns, and I worked in 1971 as Walter Hannon's campaign manager and that evolved into an offer to become his executive secretary. I came into office with him and served there until the day he left in 1976, and that was the beginning of it all.

Q. What was most interesting about that position?

A. I think the everyday workings with the city department heads and all of the people in Quincy with their various problems became the biggest part of the job. It was most stimulating to be able to help people solve some of their problems from as little as barking dogs to very major problems like water main breaks and others.

Q. After that, you served in the private sector for a number of years.

A. I did; I didn't always make my living as a public employee. I like to kid people and say I've been "15 years in, and 15 years out," so to speak: I worked in the private sector mostly for 15 years. I worked for Manufacturers Life for almost 10 years, selling life insurance; mainly I sold pension products. It's a great company; Manufacturers Life is one of the largest insurance companies in the world.

Q. How did you enjoy working in the private sector as compared to the public sector?

A. Working in the private sector, to me, was exciting because I didn't know what to expect. But I found that whether it's public or private, you meet the same kinds of people, the same great people. And I've always maintained my insurance licenses, although I'm pretty much inactive now in the insurance business. But it gave me more of an appreciation when I returned to public employment of what people have to go through when they're on the outside.

Q. In 1989, you ran against Tom Fabrizio for the Ward 4 city councillor's seat. What made you decide to return to the public sector?

A. Since I left the mayor's office in 1976, I had remained active working on various elections. During that time, I didn't know that it would be my life's vocation, but I always knew that I enjoyed it and somewhat missed it. So after Jim Sheets left as Ward 4 councillor in 1989 after 16 years to become mayor, I decided at the age of 44 that it was the right time to get back in and that would afford me the opportunity to work back at City Hall but be a part-time employee as a councillor. But I lost that race with Tom Fabrizio by 118 votes.

Q. And that didn't affect your relationship with Tom?

A. No, we often joke about it, and when Tom comes into my office he says, "but for 118 votes, maybe I'd be the city clerk" (laughs). Tom and I get along fine, and he's doing a good job. I think Tom has a really good feel for the city, and particularly Ward 4.

Q. How were you first drawn to the clerk's office?

A. I had known and been friendly with (former City Clerk) John Gillis (whom Shea replaced) prior to 1971, and he was kind of my mentor. John has taught me a lot, and I guess secretly until 1991 it was always my ambition to take John's place. I thought that had passed me by, but I was excited in 1991 when John asked me to become assistant city clerk.

Q. Tom Burke was John's assistant clerk for many years prior to 1991. What was it like replacing him?

A. I talk about replacing a legend, in that I took John's place, but actually I replaced two legends because for 18 or 19 months I succeeded Tom as assistant. Tom and I are also very close, and very friendly. And when Tom decided to

JOSEPH SHEA, who has served as Quincy's city clerk since November 1992, says it was always his ambition to succeed former City Clerk John Gillis. "Nothing, short of the pride I have about my family, beats being city clerk," he says. (Quincy Sun photo by Robert Bosworth)

FULL NAME: Joseph Patrick Shea

ADDRESS: lifelong resident of Quincy

OCCUPATION: city clerk for the City of Quincy since November 1992; served as assistant city clerk from March 1991 until becoming clerk. Previously served as executive secretary to former Mayor Walter Hannon, November 1971 to January 1976. Worked in the private sector for the MBTA and The Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. in Boston from February 1976 until taking over as assistant city clerk.

EDUCATION: graduate (and class president) of Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, 1963; received associate's degree in science from Quincy College, 1967; received bachelor of science degree in government from Suffolk University in Boston, 1972; took further graduate courses in public administration at Suffolk.

FAMILY: married to the former Josephine Brillo. They have one daughter, Katherine, 5. Shea also has two children from a previous marriage: Amy Zero, 23 and Joseph, 21, both of Quincy.

leave he just up and left and said "I hope you take my place" and out the door he went. I call on John and Tom all the time for various questions and background information.

Q. When you replaced John Gillis as city clerk in 1992, did he leave you with any special advice?

A. John left me a lot of advice, but the two things I think he always reiterates mainly are: first, to treat people the way you want to be treated, which is something I always try to do, and second, to just do the job for all of the people and not show any favoritism. So those are the two things I think of every day.

Q. Let's talk about some of your duties as city clerk. For one thing, you serve as chairman of the Quincy License Board.

A. That's a function that only the city clerk in Quincy has, and it's kind of an added responsibility. There has been a city License Board since 1920, and all of the records are housed in this office. The License Board takes up most of Tuesday, and some other days, because it seems to be getting more complex.

But the real statutory duties of the Quincy city clerk are, first, to serve as the chief election officer; that is, he prepares the ballots and runs all of the elections. He is also the recording officer of the city, in that I have to keep all of the vital records. Everything has to be filed in my office, and then the information is disseminated from here. I'm also the registrar of vital statistics, in that we keep all of the birth, death, and marriage records in my office. And as the public records officer, I am responsible for keeping all of the historical records of the city and all of those vital statistics. The last, traditional duty of the city clerk is to serve as clerk of the City Council. He is responsible for making up the agenda, and clerking the meetings, and then the dissemination of all the information afterwards.

In general, the city clerk is like an ombudsman for the city because probably 70 or 80 percent of the people who come into City Hall pass through the clerk's office. It's pretty all-encompassing.

Q. You said recently in The Quincy Sun you think "Motor-Voter" registration will help increase voter participation.

A. "Motor-Voter," which went into effect July 1, is the first part of a many-faceted program that will be put into effect in the waning days of '94 and into 1995, getting ready for the federal election in 1996. But the first facet is postcard registration. This has been talked about for 20 years, but now it's here; it is law here in the Commonwealth. And every clerk or election commissioner is charged with the responsibility of reaching out to the community and supplying these registration forms.

Traditionally, the only way one could register would be to come to City Hall or go to a special registration session. Now, if your husband or wife is working or your children are away at school, you can come into City Hall and obtain these postcards and take them to them and they can register at home and then mail them back to us.

I do think this will show an appreciable gain in voters; many people were saying, "Well, I never could get down to register at City Hall" or "I couldn't get to the special session." Now, there should be no excuses, and if you call us, we'll help you one. We're also going to make them available at the public library and some of the other public buildings.

Q. The city's balloting system was updated in 1987, but it's still not as up-to-date as those in some communities. What are the chances of updating Quincy's system again?

A. In 1987, we went to the punch-card system; prior to that, for 100 years the City of Quincy was on paper ballots. The punch-card system is more efficient than the paper ballots, but it's not the latest state-of-the-art. Now that we're in the computer age, we have what we call "accu-vote;" it's a voting system where people will be able to know who had won the election by as quickly as five minutes after the polls close.

At this time, we're going to stay with the punch-card method. I've discussed it with the City Council and the mayor and they're very interested in this new technology, but, quite frankly, to do a city of our size, it would cost in the vicinity of $300,000 to $350,000. We just don't see it happening right now.

Q. You've had an interesting career, and you're probably the only person in Quincy's history to serve as both executive secretary and city clerk.

A. Actually, I guess I am, although I've never bothered to research it.

Q. What's the most fulfilling part of your job?

A. I think the thing that I find the most satisfying is working with our excellent staff, and trying to resolve any myriad of problems that end up in the city clerk's office. This is a service-giving office, and one thing that we insist on here is giving excellent service to all of the citizens who come into this office. What we try to do is help them, and get their problems solved, in the quickest and most satisfactory manner, and as efficiently as we can. I get the most satisfaction out of seeing that it's done right.

Q. You're obviously proud of the work you do, but you've also said you're very proud that you became an Eagle Scout. Which are you more proud of?

A. (Laughs). Being city clerk gives me the most pride, short of my family. But I am proud to be an Eagle Scout; I met many people in the Scouting program 30 years ago here in Quincy who now are lifelong friends of mine. But nothing, again, short of the pride I have about my family, beats being city clerk.

*Roberto Irizarry
La Casa Alegre market*

No property, no loan. It was an equation Roberto Irizarry had heard time and again. And without a loan, the business to which he had dedicated himself over the past 5 years would be history. So instead of focusing our attention solely on his assets, we looked at the way he ran his neighborhood market instead. Though his rented space is relatively small, the market is extremely well organized and stocked. His hard work is clearly evident. And with only his efforts as collateral, we provided the money he needed to continue. That's the kind of thinking that's at the heart of our INCITY program for people and communities in need. At $8 billion, it's the most comprehensive lending commitment ever made by any financial institution in the country. If you'd like to participate in the Fleet INCITY program, call 1-800-CALL-FLEET (1-800-225-5353). It could make a real difference.

Accent On Good Buys, Good Entertainment

Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival Opens Today

The 24th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, featuring good buys and family entertainment, opens today (Thursday) for a three-day run through Saturday.

The event, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, will be held on Hancock Street which will be closed off to vehicular traffic between Granite and School Streets.

As in the past, shoppers will be able to stroll down Hancock Street looking over merchandise on the sidewalk in front of participating stores.

"The accent as usual will be on good entertainment for the entire family and good buys for shoppers," said Joanne Falco of Great Cuts, chairman of the QCBPA Promotions Committee.

Entertainment and other activities are scheduled for 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and Friday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Opening ceremonies with Acting Mayor Michael Cheney will begin today at 10 a.m.

Around 60 canopied booths will dot Hancock Street, giving it a festival appearance for the three days. More than 40 QCBPA member stores and businesses will participate along with other organizations.

Two stages will be set up on Hancock Street where entertainers and musical units will perform. Stage A will be at Hancock and Granite Streets and Stage B at Hancock and School Streets.

New features this year will include a Fashion Show featuring fashions from T.J. Maxx and Caryl's Corner, storyteller George Capaccio, Alexander Court Jester, a performance by the Blues Diner Dance Band, and more.

Another new attraction will be a live broadcast of the event by WBZ-TV Channel 4's Liz Walker today (Thursday). WJDA Radio (1300 AM) and Continental Cablevision will also broadcast live from the festival today, Friday and Saturday.

Other three-day events will include a Norfolk County Drug Sniffing Dog Demonstration (1 p.m. each day), Crime Prevention Booth, Quincy Hospital and Quincy Visiting Nurse Association Blood Pressure Testing, Pepsi Challenge, children's rides, and pony rides.

A Discovery Puppets Walk-about will be featured today only, while the Marlboro Van will appear at the festival on Saturday.

Scheduled events:

Fashion Show Friday At Sidewalk Festival

A fashion show featuring merchandise from T.J. Maxx and Caryn's Corner will be held Friday during the annual Quincy Center Business and Professional Association Sidewalk Festival.

The presentation is scheduled for 6 p.m. on Hancock Street. Admission is free.

Entitled "Summer and Beyond," the show will feature Boston's Barbizon Models under the direction of Claire Diller. Another attraction will highlight senior citizens from Beechwood Community Life Center in active sports-wear ensembles.

A disc jockey from R 'n' R Entertainment of Boston will provide entertainment.

Commentary will be provided by T.J. Maxx Consumer Promotions Coordinator Karen Horrigan. The event is being coordinated by John Trifone, manager of T.J. Maxx on the Parkway in Quincy.

Entry blanks will be available July 17-22 for a gift certificate drawing being offered in conjunction with the event. Winners will be announced the night of the show.

Legion Baseball

Morrisette Takes Two, Drops One

The Morrisette Legion baseball team beat Wollaston and Braintree this week but fell to nemesis Milton.

It was their third loss of the season to Milton (14-4), the club atop the Zone 6 standings. Morrisette (11-5-1) is in fourth place, one half game behind Braintree and Weymouth. The top three teams will qualify for the sectional playoffs. Morrisette is automatically in the state finals as they host them at Adams Field starting Aug. 5.

Milton won, 10-7, at Milton.

Morrisette scored one in the first and one in the third to take a 2-1 lead. The home team answered with three in the bottom of third and five in the fourth to take a 9-2 lead.

Longball maestro Dave Reinhart hit a three-run homer in the fifth and Tom Malvesti hit a two-run shot in the sixth to cut the lead to 9-7. Milton closed out the scoring with a run in the bottom of the sixth.

Mike Kenney picked up his first loss of the season against four wins. Jeff Russell and A.J. Carthas pitched in relief.

Reinhart went 3 for 4 with a single and a triple to go with his roundtripper. He drove in four. Brian Hayes reached three times with a double and two walks. He scored each time and stole one base. Carthas had an RBI single and Joey Biagini notched a base hit.

Morrisette opened the week with an 11-3 win over crosstown rival Wollaston.

Morrisette recorded 11 hits in the contest. They did most of their damage in the second when they sent 12 men to the plate and scored eight runs. Both Reinhart and Dan Duncan had two hits and two RBIs in the second inning alone. Reinhart clubbed a single and a double while Duncan nailed a double and a triple. Jim Sapienza and Malvesti both had RBI singles. Two more scored due to a throwing error.

Morrisette scored the other three runs in the third on an RBI single by Reinhart, a sacrifice fly by Biagini and an error.

Reinhart went 3 for 3 with three RBIs. Duncan was 2 for 4 with two RBIs. Malvesti was 2 for 2 with one RBI. Sapienza, Neil Connelly, Andy Joyce and Mark Cahill had one hit each.

Dan Reynolds drove in two Wollaston runs with a single. Adam DeBoer and Matt McGowan both recorded hits.

Kenney earned his fourth win of the season. He allowed three hits and K'd four in four innings of work. He gave up two runs, only one was earned. Hayes took the mound for two innings in his first appearance pitching in Legion ball. He allowed just two hits and one unearned run while striking out two.

Sean Dolbear pitched the final inning and accomplished a rare feat - he struck out four batters. His second victim reached when the third strike got past the catcher. Dolbear followed with two more K's.

Wollaston used all 18 players on the roster. Morrisette fielded 15 different men.

On Saturday Morrisette took a 6-1 win over Braintree behind the outstanding pitching performance of Pat Bryan.

Bryan allowed just three hits as Morrisette handed second place Braintree their fifth loss of the season.

Morrisette took a 1-0 lead in the second when Biagini doubled and scored when a pick-off attempt went astray. With the score tied 1-1 in the fifth, Morrisette put the contest away with four runs. Connelly and Reinhart walked. They were knocked in on base hits by Carthas and Sapienza. A single by Biagini scored Carthas and sent Sapienza to third. Sapienza then stole home.

Reinhart's double and a subsequent error brought in Morrisette's final run in the seventh. Both Carthas and Biagini recorded two hits. Reinhart, Sapienza and Malvesti had one apiece.

Bryan improved his record to 3-2.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School football star Sean Halpin, seated with his parents, signs a letter of intent to play football at Division II powerhouse University of New Haven. Looking on are NQHHS Assistant Principal Eileen Feeney and head football coach/Den of Students Ken McPhee.

Everlasting Wins International Title

John Leonard struck out 10 and hit two singles as Everlasting Engraving chiseled out a 9-3 win over Noll Electrical in the International League championship game.

Leonard was aided by his club's outstanding defensive work. Johnny McCue, Jarrod Decelle, Chris Burden, Johnny Ly, Paul Inferrera and Chris (Jughead) Leonard all made heads-up plays in the field.

Third baseman Chris Mannix halted a Noll rally in the third with a Wade Boggs-like scoop and throw to first to end the inning. Noll had struck for two runs in that session to tie the game at 2-2. With men on first and second in the final inning, John Hanifin made an impressive over-the-shoulder grab to end the contest.

Hanifin and Patrick McDonagh each clubbed a single and a double for the winning squad. Billy O'Connell and Matt Langille both notched two-baggers. Jeff Langille recorded what proved to be the game-winning RBI in Everlasting's three-run fourth. They added an insurance run in the fifth and three more in the sixth.

Noll Electrical was charged by the sticks of Brad Brooks (single, double) and Chris Geary (double). Hurter Jeurik Samborski fanned eight batters. His batterymate, John Parastatides, was solid behind the plate.

Also playing strong defensive ball were Chris McNaught and Charles Doherty.

The champions ended the season with a record of 16-3. Noll finished at 14-5.

Legion All-Star Game Sunday At Adams Field

Seven baseball players from Quincy will take part in the second annual American Legion All-Star game between Zone 6 (East) and Zone 10 Sunday at Adams Field at 7 p.m.

The eight-inning contest will feature the top 18-year-old players from the 10-team Zone 6 and the 14-team Zone 10.

The Quincy players are Jon Gangi and Terry Manning of Wollaston; Dave Reinhart and Dan Duncan of Morrisette; and Mark Karlson, Brian Oliver and Tim Byrne of Quincy.

The Zone 6 club will be led by Quincy manager Ed Spring and Canton's Tom Healy. East Bridgewater coach Tom Frizzell will lead the Zone 10 squad.

Last year's contest was won by Zone 6 with late-game rally that followed a pitcher's duel between Holbrook's Jim Mann (Toronto Blue Jays signee) and Norwell's Andy Byron (Providence College).

Rounding out the Zone 6 team will be Greg Goggins, Ed Little, and Mike Irving (Braintree); Shawn Murphy (Canton); Wes Bethune and Matt McGaughey (Holbrook); Joe Clancy and Dave Bridges (Milton); Mark Barthel and Scott Mulvaney (Randolph); Dave Bingham and John Hauck (West Roxbury); Tim Daley, Joe Paolucci and Chris Johnson (Weymouth).

The Zone 10 club is comprised of players from Bridgewater, Brockton-135, Duxbury, East Bridgewater, Hingham, Kingston, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Sandwich, Whitman, Abington and Falmouth. The Brockton Spartans are without a representative.

The $2 admission charge (children free) will be donated to the Scleroderma Federation Inc., a non-profit organization dedicated to conquering this debilitating form of arthritis.

STEADY PRESSURE TO STOP

Those who drive cars equipped with antilock brakes (ABS) should resist the urge to pump their brakes when they try to bring their cars to an emergency stop on a slick patch of road. Pumping the brakes is the correct course of action to take when driving a car without ABS, because this helps keep the wheels from locking. On cars that do come equipped with ABS, sensors notify an on-board computer when a brake is about to lock. The computer then releases and reapplies hydraulic pressure to the brake in such a manner that it does not lock. In essence, then, ABS "pumps" the brakes for the driver. For it to work effectively, the driver must maintain steady pressure on the brake pedal.

HINT: While ABS helps avert skidding during a stop, traction control helps avert skidding during acceleration.

The safety of our customers is very important to us here at Leo & Walt's Sunoco and we want them to be informed. Whether your present vehicle needs to have its brake system checked or some other repair work done, plan to spend some time with one of our experienced technicians. Our friendly, professional staff will gladly answer all your questions here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Quincy Track Club Wins 42 Gold Medals

The Quincy Track Club won 42 gold medals, set four Memorial Field Records and 21 other meet records as they topped Needham, 802-702, in the five-team All-Star Invitational Track & Field Meet at Memorial Field in Needham on July 12.

Athletes aged seven to 14 competed in four different age brackets. Quincy's 13-14 division dominated Needham to capture the championship between the two rival youth track powers. Needham, which took 36 gold medals, proved strongest in the sprints and relays while Quincy was master of the field events. Third place Lowell took many of the distance events. Also competing in the meet were Lexington and Norwell.

"Our overall depth and balance was the key factor," said Quincy director Geoff Hennessy, who managed to score in every event but one, and our jumpers and throwers took a big share of the gold medals."

Quincy Track Club runners who won but did not set records included: Flanagan, 400; Jay Grazioso, 400; Julie Keane, 400; Watson, 200; Finn, 400; Jimmy Wan, 800; Kerry Ginty, 1500; James Pace, high jump; Corey Piazza, shotput; Billy Croke, discus; Stephanie Fiandaca, discus; Lisa DellaCroce, discus; Jimbo Callahan, shotput; Chi Chung, discus; Wierzbowski, high jump. Also capturing a first place finish was the 13-14-year-old boys' 4x100 relay team of Watson, Finn, Chung and Egan.

Needham traveled to Quincy on Tuesday, July 19 for a grudge match between the clubs at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The QTC will compete in the Needham Youth Classic July 29 and 30 at Memorial Park. The event features over 800 athletes from eight states. It is the largest open youth meet in the Northeast.

Babe Ruth

Manning Leads BP Past Houghs Neck

Bryan Post pitcher Shawn Manning had a great day on the mound and at the plate as his club strangled Houghs Neck, 9-2.

Manning scattered four hits while recording four RBIs himself on two hits, including a long double. He was aided by the stick of Mark Kelly. Kelly cracked four hits and had four RBIs. Kevin Cellucci had a three-hit game for the winners.

Also contributing to the attack were Brian Gates, Matt Graham and Billy Graney.

Graney played well in center field and made several superb catches. Mike Eddy was excellent behind the plate and Matt Norton, Steve Whitshire, Pat Cummings and Mike Shaw all played well.

The Elks, who finished in last place last season, clinched a division title and at least a tie for best overall record with two wins this week.

A 6-2 win over Granite City Electric was the clincher.

Chris Bregoli pitched five strong innings to get the win. He allowed one run on three hits. Jack Daley picked up the save with two innings of no-hit work. He fanned two.

Jake Drohan pitched well for Granite City but was victimized by three costly errors which led to three unearned runs. He went the distance and gave up only three hits.

Bregoli was aided by the flawless defense of Scott Staiti and Steve Clarke. The Elks infield turned a 4-6-3 double play.

Rusty Corner's impressive seven-strikeout, complete-game effort led the Elks to a 7-3 win over Local.

Corner led the game off with a double. Matt McLoughlin's single set up Andrew Byrne's two-run base hit.

A run in the second and two more in the third gave Local a 3-2 lead, but the Elks fought back with two runs in the sixth. Eric Wood singled and Clarke reached on an error before Bregoli ripped a double to left-center to drive in the two.

They put the game out of reach with three in the seventh. John Mahoney walked and McLoughlin, Byrne and Wood all followed with RBI singles.

Corner allowed just four hits and one run over the final three innings.

Earlier in the week, Anthony Caprigno's three-hit effort led Morrisette to a 7-2 win over the Elks.

He was aided by Rich Rose's triple and Mike Green's two singles. Rose, Ryan Ploof, Greg Peck and Jason Crossman led the defense.

Elks' pitcher Matt McLoughlin struck out six. Morrisette also recorded wins over Sons of Italy and Quincy Police.

Caprigno was again the winning pitcher in his club's 11-1 win over SOI.

The offense was paced by Jeff Feiner's triple and single, Dave Keddy's triple, and Rose's two singles. Green, Mike Centrella and Jon Haddad were the top defensive players.

Ploof struck out eight in the 10-4 win over Police.

Hitting the ball well for Morrisette were Centrella (double, single) and Keddy (double). Chris Duffy, Tim Doyle, Jamie Grossi, Chris Cummings and Pat Kenney were superb in support of Ploof.

Fire Dept. collected 12 hits as they hosed down Sons of Italy, 10-4. It was their fifth consecutive win.

Seven different players had hits for Fire. Jose Diaz led the outburst. He went 3 for 3 with three RBIs. Kevin Regan had a perfect day with two hits and a walk. Chris Robinson notched three RBIs with a bases-loaded single.

Manny Vasquez pitched a complete game for Fire Dept.

Fire also meted out a 4-1 win over Barry's Deli.

The game was a showcase for southpaw hurlers Mike Doyle of Fire Dept. and Jeff Meade of Barry's Deli. Fifteen strikeouts by Doyle led him to the win.

Barry's jumped to a 1-0 lead in the first and Meade held Fire scoreless until the fifth. With two outs in that inning Fire began to light up the scoreboard. James McDonagh walked and was doubled in by Mike McLoughlin. Robinson then singled in McLoughlin for the winning run.

McDonagh's bases-loaded double in the sixth added two insurance runs. Vasquez, Doyle and Bob Walsh were the men on base.

Ryan Herlihy got the win with a six-hit performance as Tirrell Services beat the Elks, 11-8.

Tirrell benefitted from 10 walks issued by Elks pitching. Seven of those runners ended up scoring.

Chris Erler and Jimmy Hassen scored three times each for Tirrell. Herlihy cracked a double and notched two RBIs.

Andrew Byrne nailed three hits for the losing club. Kevin Shaw hit a double and had an RBI.

Junior League

Burgin Tops Cable

Burgin Platner scored two runs in the bottom of the last inning to post a dramatic 9-8 win over Continental Cable in Junior League playoff action.

BP's winning rally started when Brendan Bowes reached on an error. Sean Adams cracked a base hit and Todd White singled in Bowes for the tying run. Ryan McMahon was walked intentionally and Ian MacRitchie drew a walk to bring home the game-winner.

Cable jumped to an early 3-0 lead in the first inning. Pat Bregoli, Chris Wilson and Ryan Hutchings all singled to load the bases. Runs came home when Joe Ardagna walked, Didier Alther singled and Mark Dunn walked.

Burgin Platner reliever White came in to stem the tide.

BP tied it with three runs in the second as Andy Mannix singled, White walked, and McMahon and Jesse Winter singled.

Cable regained the lead with four runs in the fourth. Bregoli and Wilson singled and Ardagna knocked in one with the fourth. Cable's Bregoli had his third hit of the day and then scored after Wilson and Ardagna loaded the bases and Alther walked.

Cable was eliminated from the playoffs when they lost, 7-2, to the Elks in a rematch of Cable's first playoff win.

The game featured two of the league's top young hurlers in Elks ace Ryan Piccinin and Cable fireballer Ryan Hutchings.

The two duelled for five innings before a four-run inning by the Elks broke open a 3-2 contest.

The Elks took a 3-0 lead in the first. Billy O'Toole banded in two runs and then scored on a Dave Riley groundout.

Cable fought back to within one in the third when they notched their only runs of the contest.

Billy Davis opened with a single and was knocked in by Hutchings' double. A single by Ardagna sent Hutchings home. These three inning hits were the only three Cable would get off of Piccinin.

double. An Alther single plated two more players.

Bowes and Adams had RBI singles for Burgin in Billy Miller's double plated Frank Alibrandi and Mike Feiner in the Elks' four run sixth inning. Singles by Sean Lynch and Piccinin knocked in the final two runs.

Piccinin struck out eight batters. Hutchings recorded five Ks and allowed seven hits.

The Elks also took an exciting 8-7 win over South Shore Buick in a see-saw battle. David Riley recorded the win.

The Elks were trailing 4-2 in the third when five runs gave them a 7-4 lead. RBIs were belted by Matt Barrett and Phil McGillicuddy before a long triple by Piccinin cleared the base paths. The Elks added the winning run in the fourth.

Trailing 8-4 in the sixth and final inning, SSB mounted a furious comeback. Key hits came off the sticks of Brian Deschler, Paul Lentini, Matt Holt and T.J. Bell. With the tying run on second base Riley fanned the final batter.

Riley struck out six SSB batters.

South Shore Buick sent four men across the plate in the second inning to take a 4-1 lead. Key hits in the outburst were provided by Jeff Stevens and Lentini.

The Elks top batsmen were Barrett and Piccinin with three hits apiece, McGillicuddy with two, and Billy O'Toole, Greg McGinnas and Riley with one each.

PREVENT BREAKDOWNS THIS SUMMER

Many travelers will learn too late that hot weather is placing a high demand on their vehicles. Don't let fair weather hulk you into a false sense of security.

periodic tune-ups. Follow the manufacturer's schedule to prevent problems like rough idling, stalling, diminished power, and hesitation.

The technicians at SPARKS Computerized Car Care in Quincy offer the following tips to prevent breakdowns this summer. Leonard Escarbons, a specialist in electrical and fuel problems for 31 years, and John Teixeira, a specialist in drivability problems and general repair for 20 years, recommend:

Lessen wear & tear with oil and filter changes as per your owner's manual. Clean lubricants make your vehicle run more smoothly, which extends its life. Change the oil and filter more often, if you plan a long trip, carry extra weight, or make many short trips.

Avoid overheating by checking the level and concentration of coolant. A 50/50 mix of antifreeze and water is recommended. Remove radiator cap after the vehicle cools. Check belts, hoses, clamps, thermostat and flush and fill the system every 24 months.

Improve stopping power with periodic brake checks. Problems such as squeaking, grabbing, squeaking and longer stopping distances signal a need for an immediate brake inspection.

Beat the heat with an annual air conditioning inspection. The thermostat, condenser hoses, from line, and snags play integral roles in your air conditioner's performance.

Both Lenzy and John agree that vehicle life can be extended by 50% or more, when maintenance is performed regularly. Use the manufacturer's recommended service schedule and rely on a professional auto technician.

Improve performance by replacing the air, fuel and PVC filters as well as

James P. Donovan, 70 Former Quincy Water Supt.; Owned Scrap Company

A funeral Mass for James P. Donovan, 70, of Scituate, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Donovan died July 14 at home.

He was the former superintendent of the Quincy Waterworks Department.

Born in Quincy, he attended parochial schools in Quincy and graduated from Boston College High School in 1941.

A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, he served as a lieutenant in the Army for four years.

He was a veteran of World War II.

After the war, he served with the occupation forces in Japan. Because of his engineering background, he was assigned to rebuild waterworks systems there.

For four years, he worked for the city of Quincy following his appointment as department superintendent in 1950.

From 1954 to 1970, he was head of the industrial real estate division of the Grossman Company, Braintree.

He became owner and operator of the Materials Recycling Company, a scrap iron business, in Brockton, in 1970. He retired in 1988.

He was a former member of the Hatherly Country Club in Scituate and the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

A long-time Scituate summer resident, he moved to Scituate as a year-round resident in 1991. Previous to this, he had lived in Quincy for many years.

Mr. Donovan is survived by a son, James P. Donovan III of Scituate; a daughter, Edith C. Tibbetts of Scituate; a brother, Joseph L. Donovan of Quincy; four sisters, Elizabeth J. Pare and Leona D. Magnarelli, both of Hingham, Marguerite A. Donovan of Quincy and West Yarmouth, and C. Maureen Duane of Quincy; and four grandchildren. His father, the late James P. Donovan, was a former commissioner of public works for Quincy.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Each of us is blessed with a unique personality. Some outgoing and imaginative. Others cautious and shrewd. But it is a rare personality that is well-liked by all his companions in his social and business life. "You can't please everyone," trails that appeal to some people are irritating to others. We all may benefit, however, from winning other's respect, good will and, hopefully, friendship...

A well-developed personality depends first of all on the ability to be oneself. You may be a bit on the solemn side or you may be an extrovert and "backslapper." Start from what you are. Don't try to be something you are not. Take a great and real interest in other people. Be sparing in your criticism. Try to find out everyone you come in contact with something novel and unusual just what it is that gives this situation its appeal. In other words, touch life at many points. Be generous and understanding. Granted, this may seem like trite and obvious advice, but it is the kind of thing that develops rich, charming, overwhelming personalities...

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

It was a perfect night for baseball.

"Whaddya say, number FOUR!" came the cry from the Holbrook dugout urging on Scott Young as he stood at the plate with men on first and second.

"I say I'm gonna strikeout," yelled one little boy who was cheering for the Quincy Legion team.

"I say I'm gonna triple play," said another, smaller, boy. A third remained silent, at least for the time being.

Quincy shortstop Steve Koch's mouth was a perpetual motion machine. His cat calls - "Come one, ONE-THREE" - punctuated the night air while dust flew from Brendan Ridge's catcher's mitt with each thud of the ball and then disappeared into the cool New England night.

It was the perfect night for baseball and Steven Coletti and Erik and Alex Smith - the three little boys - knew it. They cheered wholeheartedly for the Quincy players, most of whom are only 17 or 18 themselves. But more than that, they were the little boys' heroes on this particular evening.

"How many outs do they get? Three outs, right? Quincy's gonna be up forever, they're sooooo good!" said Erik, a six-year-old, as the home team came to bat for the first time. His enthusiasm was based not in fact but in his pure delight at watching the big boys play ball. Who doesn't remember being a little kid and watching the older kids, maybe your big brother's team, play baseball or football while you anxiously waited for your turn at the big time, the time when you'd get to play in front of your neighbors, your friends and your family?

As you read this, millionaires argue with other millionaires about playing a young boys' game, but here in Quincy there was a perfect night for baseball.

Certain members of the American media were invaded by a parasite during the World Cup. This gnawing, flesh-eating bug stripped away their sense of professional acumen and left them exposed as whining sports prima donnas - the journalistic equivalent of Deion Sanders dousing Tim McCarver with water because the announcer said a few not-so-positive things about the two-sport star.

"We don't want to cover the World Cup! It's booooring!" they said. Boo-Hoo.

You know the people I'm talking about - those reporters and talk show hosts who felt their opinion of the World Cup was more important than that of the, oh, I don't know, 2 billion or so people around the planet who actually enjoyed it.

Instead of covering a sporting event of global significance with the same flair they devote to mid-season, regional coverage of a .500 baseball team (how exciting!), they chose to rail against the Cup as if it wasn't worth their time. Instead of immersing themselves in the World Cup, they chose to let a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity pass them by with nothing to show but a trail of negativity.

Imagine Grantland Rice after Notre Dame beat Army in 1924 - "Outlined against a blue-gray October sky, the Four Horsemen rode again, but I'm a Yankees fan and I can't wait 'til this stupid football season is over. Boy this stinks," or how about Ernie Pyle during World War II - "Captain Henry Waskow fought and died bravely in the mountains of Italy. But the conditions here are miserable, I can't believe they sent me here. I wish I were back in the States in my own bed."

For these people to mock and belittle the World Cup, an event on which rides the fate of entire nations, was beyond arrogant. So they didn't like it. Big deal. They decided not to like the World Cup before it even started. Instead of making it an event worth their while they chose to make it an unnecessary burden for themselves and for us. They are the lesser for it.

...Thanks for listening. I feel much better.

South Shore Suns Win Bay State Games Bronze Medal

The South Shore Suns girls basketball team, featuring Elizabeth Ceurvals and Dominique Good from Quincy, captured a bronze medal in the Bay State Games Sunday.

The Suns beat Metro, 52-30, in the bronze medal game played at Boston College's Conte Forum.

Ceurvals and Good both turned in tremendous performances in the final contest. Teammates Liz Brustin, Meghan Aucoin, Lindsey Brown, Meghan Daly and Hillary Cross were also outstanding. Julie Murray, Erin Noyes and Lauren Fuller proved to be superb role players. The Suns lost their first three medal games, but their dominant performance in the final game allowed them to win the bronze.

"This is a proud moment in South Shore girls basketball and one that will be continued as the years progress," said team sponsor Arthur Good of the Quincy Bay Girls Athletic Club. "They are a hard working bunch with a lot of charisma."

The girls, all of whom are eighth graders, outdueled a field of 64 regional teams in order to earn a spot in the Bay State Games Final Four. The first game in the medal round was played at U Mass Boston. The following three were played at Boston College.

Wollaston Resident Establishes Scholarship For S.S. Conservatory

Brian Donaher of Wollaston recently named Holbrook resident Stephen Williams as the recipient of the first annual Patrick J. Donaher Scholarship. The scholarship is awarded to a Boston College High School student who is accepted into South Shore Conservatory's Summer Wind Ensemble (SWE), a summer day camp for young musicians.

"We are pleased to offer this scholarship for the first time this year," said Donaher, who set up the scholarship in honor of his father, a music lover and supporter of the arts. In creating the scholarship, Donaher said he hopes to "give a boost" to the B.C. High Music Program, a program he feels is not as extensive as it could be.

Williams, a junior at B.C. High, is new to the program and joins the other brass, wind and percussion SWE students for the first time this summer. He was awarded the music scholarship at B.C. High's Undergraduate Awards Night. The award pays half of Williams' tuition in the summer program.

Brian Donaher's sons, Patrick and Luke, have both been involved in the SWE program, offered at intermediate and advanced levels, in the past. Luke and Williams are presently attending SWE at the advanced level.

The Summer Wind Concert Ensemble Series begins Friday with a 7 p.m. performance at Safford Park in Wollaston. Other concert dates are Thursday, July 28, at 7 p.m. at The Company Theatre in Norwell and Tuesday, Aug. 2, at 7 p.m. at the Holy Family Church in Duxbury. The final concert is Thursday, Aug. 4, at First Intermediate School in Weymouth.

193 Compete In Hershey Track Meet

The Quincy Recreation Department sponsored an area competition as the first step in the Hershey National Track & Field Youth Program.

One hundred ninety-three boys and girls participated. Recreation Director Barry Welch praised the participants for one of the largest turnouts ever.

The winners of the local meet have their times and distances compared to those of winners from 39 other local meets in Massachusetts. The top eight qualifiers will compete in the state championships in Braintree.

The winners of the state championship are compared to winners from meets held in six other Northeast states and the top qualifiers receive an all-expense paid trip to the National Championships in Hershey, Pa. in August.

Local meet winners from the Quincy competition have advanced to the nationals nine out of the last 10 years.

The event is held in three age categories for boys and girls. The 1994 local winners are:

Optimism Expressed As Pena Visits Shipyard

Hogan added that though two issues had not yet been resolved, negotiators for Regency and the state hope for an Aug. 1 completion date.

Formal meetings between the two sides will resume next week, Hogan said, after some of the negotiators return from vacation.

Since touring the 110-year old site in March, Regency has since proposed the building of cruise ships at the shipyard.

Following a tour of the freighter Southern Cross, Pena commended the effort of Studts, who has played an important part in the revitalization process of the U.S. shipbuilding industry.

"Led by Rep. Studts' Maritime Security legislation, he's gotten the bill through the House, and may get it passed through the Ways and Means Committee by next week," Pena said.

Pena said the United States would face the possibility of all goods being transported by foreign flag vessels if the shipbuilding industry is not revitalized. This could lead to domestic security danger, Pena added.

"The bill (Studds introduced) calls for $1 billion over 10 years, which would pay for the upkeep of the vessels and keep the fleet alive in the U.S.," Pena said.

The shipyard received an additional vote of confidence from the Weld administration, which was represented by Gloria Lawson, the State Economic Affairs Secretary.

"This is a terribly important issue on a national, state and local level," Lawson said. "It's also a powerful sign of how interested Washington is about revitalizing the shipbuilding industry in America."

Lawson said the shipyard situation is one of Gov. Weld's most important economic development. She said the governor will put the federal loan guarantees to the best use possible, which includes streamlining the permit process.

The shipyard was one of the most productive in the world during World War II, with more than 30,000 people employed at Fore River.

Since then, however, the shipyard has hit on hard times. Most of the buildings and equipment have been out of service since General Dynamics closed the facility eight years ago.

Last Sunday, an agreement among the shipbuilding nations of the world, including the United States, was reached which may affect the revival of the Quincy shipyard.

Negotiators agreed to halt subsidies to shipbuilding firms in their countries. Designed to promote international trade, this agreement would go into effect Jan. 1, 1996, meaning the fate of the Fore River shipyard must be determined before then.

the whole thing because he thinks he's saving money, but it's at the possible expense of people's lives," he said. "This accident (July 3) could have killed God knows how many people."

DeCristofaro added that he previously wrote to Weld to voice his concerns when the bridge was first privatized, but he never received a response.

Mariano expressed concerns similar to DeCristofaro's in his letter to Kerassiotis dated July 6. Mariano wrote he is confident that Kerassiotis will conduct "a fair and impartial investigation" to determine if the July 3 accident was the fault of the bridge operator, the bus driver, or a combination of the two.

Initial findings of an investigation by the Weymouth Police Department indicate that the accident may have been caused by human error on the part of the bridge operator.

of the beach near the Quantum Yacht Club where young people regularly play loud music and cause other commotions, according to Cheney.

He added that he spoke extensively with Sheets about the matter before the mayor's trip to Ireland, saying he believes Sheets will approve of the foot patrol solution.

Cheney said he has also spoken to Gov. William Weld's office, state. Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Michael Bellotti, Rep. Stephen Tobin's office, Ward 5 Councilor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councilor Bruce Ayers and all agreed that foot patrols are the best way to handle the situation.

"Everyone was in concurrence," he said.

Cheney said O'Toole also suggested that the Quincy Police Department utilize its mountain bicycles in addition to its special operations unit and the State Police foot patrols at the beach.

however, the bond may not be supported by Cahill. At press time, he said he hoped to introduce cuts to individual bond issues in the package if possible, adding that he would be inclined to vote for certain projects in the bond package and against others.

Cahill said if forced to vote for the package as a whole, he would vote against it. He said the amounts for the Beechwood School and the parks are too high, while some of the smaller projects such as the Wollaston Center improvements should not necessarily have to be bonded.

"It's just too much at once," he said. "There should be a more reasonable approach to it. I feel like we're putting ourselves in the hole we just got out of."

Sheets' FY95 budget calls for no new taxes, something that has not happened since the early 1980s, and Cahill said that will not soon be possible again if the city continues to bond for such large amounts.

Sheets, who was in Ireland this week and unavailable for comment, has said now is a good time to bond because interest rates are low and the city's bond indebtedness has dropped considerably since he first became mayor in 1990.

T.J. Maxx Moving To Grossman's Site

T.J. Maxx is planning to move from its location on the Parkway to a shopping complex currently under construction at the Grossman's building on Granite St., according to the project manager.

utive director of Quincy 2000, said it was a "victory" the city was able to keep a major retailer downtown.

City Council President and Acting Mayor Michael Cheney said the city plans to begin marketing the space that will soon be vacated at 126 Parkway to potential tenants.

As the anchor store of the Granite Street shopping center, T.J. Maxx will occupy half the space of the center. It has also signed a long-term lease with Grossman Co., Waller said.

Two other franchisees, Boston Chicken and Papa Gino's, have signed leases to rent space in the shopping center area.

Waller said another tenant will likely rent an 8,500-square foot space very soon, though she would not disclose the identity of the prospective tenant.

Construction to convert the property where Gross-man's once was begun July 1 and is expected to be finished by October at a price tag of $3.6 million, Waller said.

The plan to reconstruct the property was announced in January following the closing of Grossman Inc.'s building supply store on the Granite Street site.

There will be numerous renovations completed on the shopping complex, including a new facade made of ground-faced block, a translucent canopy running the length of the building and two decorative turrets with pyramid tops in front of the T.J. Maxx and the Burgin Parkway.

Landscaping, sidewalks, new lighting and benches are also in the works for the new shopping center.

Quincy architect John Sheskey is designing the project, while Mary Smith Associates of Quincy will do the landscaping, Waller said.

Heat, Humidity 'Cool Off' Business At Festival

The 24th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival was a somewhat disappointing follow-up to last year's event, with oppressive heat and humidity a key factor in keeping attendance down.

Most businesses welcomed customers in spurts, but did not experience the consistent three-day success they have had in the past.

That was the general consensus of local merchants surveyed by The Quincy Sun. The event was sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Maralin Manning, first-year QCBPA executive director said: "As I understand it, it was a bit slower than last year, with the heat being a prime reason."

Caryn Smith, QCBPA president and owner of Caryn's Corner: "We didn't do as well as last year, but considering the heat we did very well. In the seven years I've done this, I'd say this was the hottest. But Saturday was better than a normal day for the Sidewalk Festival, and that was probably because the weather broke."

Donald Russell, Woolworth's: "It was not as good as last year. As a matter of fact, it was way off, but we'll blame it on the heat. It was just absolutely too hot."

Cathy Ploof, Everlasting Engraving: "I'd say Friday was the better day, but Thursday and Saturday were slower. I think the weather had a lot to do with it; it was just so hot! But I'd do it again."

Claims He Did Not Defy Executive Order Building Inspector Says He Did Not Deserve Suspension

By ROBERT BOSWORTH and MICHAEL WHALEN

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, who was ordered suspended by Acting Mayor Michael Cheney for one day last Friday, insists he has done nothing to warrant the suspension.

The suspension was rescinded by Mayor James Sheets after the mayor returned to Quincy Monday following a 10-day trip to Ireland. Cheney, as City Council president, serves as acting mayor when Sheets is out of the city.

Sheets said as far as he is concerned, there was no suspension.

"I did not reinstate Matt Mulvey," said Sheets. "The acting mayor cannot make any decisions relative to personnel. So technically, legally, it never occurred."

Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 43, Section 26 gives the acting mayor of a city the powers of the mayor "only in matters not admitting of delay," meaning emergency situations. Sheets said Cheney therefore has no authority to suspend Mulvey or any other city employee, or to make any decisions regarding administrative policy changes.

The mayor added, however, that although Cheney overstepped his bounds as acting mayor, he did not do so intentionally. Sheets said he is not upset with Cheney because the latter took the action he felt necessary as acting mayor.

"I'm convinced Michael was not trying to change policy," he said.

Mulvey, however, was angered by Cheney's action.

"It was totally uncalled for," Mulvey told The Sun Tuesday morning in reacting to the letter he received from Cheney late Friday afternoon at his home. The letter was hand-delivered by a Quincy police officer.

"How can he (Cheney) suspend someone without a hearing? He (Cheney) has to learn that in government certain procedures have to be followed," he said.

According to Mulvey, the suspension centered around a complaint from a building department employee who contacted Personnel Director Kathy Yaeger that Mulvey had opened mail addressed to someone in the department. Mulvey denied the accusation, saying the letter in question was an envelope addressed only to the Quincy Building Department. He claimed the envelope contained an engineering report relative to construction work at the Quincy Rehabilitation and Nursing Center on McGrath Highway.

Mulvey said he opened the envelope last Wednesday.

Sheets said he had received a similar, previous complaint regarding Mulvey and building department employees' mail. That had prompted him to issue an executive order to Mulvey advising him to "cease and desist from opening other employees' mail."

The suspension letter signed by Cheney stated Mulvey had "failed to comply" with Sheets' order when he opened the envelope in question last Wednesday.

"You failed to comply

Opponents Outline Concerns Wal-Mart Proposal Heads To Planning Board For Discussion

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

An organized group of opponents to the proposed Wal-Mart retail development in Quincy Point has outlined its concerns to the Quincy Planning Board which began addressing the proposal Wednesday night.

The group, self-named "The Quincy We're Against The Wal Committee," wrote a letter to Planning Board members July 22 raising what it calls a "number of serious issues" concerning the $20 million Granite Crossing retail development proposed near the Falls Condominiums at Quincy Ave. and Southern Aveny.

The author of the letter and a leader of the group, Sylvia Mignon, asked the Planning Board to consider the issues prior to taking action on the application made by the developer, Donald J. MacKinnon.

"As a matter of public policy, this project must be reviewed by the Quincy Planning Board and City Council to determine that all of the following conditions are met," the letter stated.

Specifically, the opponents want the Planning Board and City Council to determine whether:

"The specific site is an appropriate location for such use or structure;

"The use as developed will not adversely affect the neighborhood;

"There will be no nuisance or serious hazard to vehicles or pedestrians; and

"Adequate and appropriate facilities will be provided for the proper operations of the proposed use.

Cedrone To Assume Housing Post Today

Former School Committee candidate Christine Cedrone will officially become a member of the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners today (Thursday).

Cedrone will be sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea at 4 p.m. at City Hall. The announcement was made at press time by Vinny Scarnici, who managed Cedrone's School Committee campaign.

Scarnici said Cedrone is looking forward to assuming her responsibilities on the board.

"She's definitely excited," he said. "Absolutely."

Cedrone could not be reached for comment.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE

Cedrone, a Republican, was chosen in May by Gov. William Weld to fill the expired term of Rosemary Wahlberg, a Democrat, on the board. The term is for five years. Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said as a commissioner, Cedrone will receive a stipend from a percentage of family housing rents. Although the amount changes from month to month, Comer said the total generally averages about $4,000 a year.

Wahlberg had served 15 years--three five-year terms--on the board. She was first appointed by Gov. Francis Sargent, a Republican, in 1974. She was appointed again in 1984 and 1989 by Gov. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat.

Cedrone, a 23-year-old office manager and a resident of South Walnut Street, is seen in political circles as a coming Republican star. Cedrone and Sean Barry locked up in an historic election battle for a School Committee seat last fall when a recount showed the pair deadlocked with 5,734 votes each.

At a joint convention of the City Council and School Committee, Barry won the seat on a 9-4 vote.

DET Career Fair Aug. 2

The Department of Employment and Training (DET), 50 Ross Way, Quincy, will hold a career fair entitled "Choice or Chance" Tuesday, Aug. 2 from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

The event, which will be held in association with Quincy Public Schools, will provide information and insight as to employment trends and high skill/high wage employment opportunities for those making the transition from school to work.

For more information, call the DET at 471-2750.

City To Receive $4M For Beach Improvements

The city will receive $4 million for improvements to Wollaston Beach, Mayor James Sheets announced Tuesday.

The improvements are part of a $30 million bond issue approved by the Massachusetts House of Representatives Monday to upgrade Boston area beaches. Senate approval was expected to follow quickly, possibly by late Tuesday.

Sheets said he was "thrilled" when he heard about the funding.

"I think Wollaston Beach is one of the most untapped, underused resources for families in this city," he said. "I'd like to make it more user-friendly."

Sheets said the $4 million will come to the city through the Metropolitan District Commission, which owns the beach. He noted that he planned to meet with Gov.

William Weld and Boston Mayor Thomas Menino to discuss the matter Tuesday afternoon at Carson Beach in South Boston.

The mayor added that a Wollaston Beach Day with water demonstrations by State Police, volleyball, music and refreshments will be held Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Improvement plans for the beach include building shaded rest areas by the sea wall, relocating bathrooms to the beach side of Quincy Shore Drive, resanding with a fine beach sand, and landscaping.

According to Paul Kennedy, Quincy's representative to a Boston-area commission on beach improvement, beach restoration could begin this summer and be finished by next year if the Senate approves the package.

Kennedy added that the Boston Harbor Association is hoping the money will also pay for a sand-sanitizing machine to clean and strain beach sand periodically. It is hoped the beach will become a more popular recreation spot, and part of the plan includes providing shuttle services from the Wollaston MBTA Station to the beach, he added.

Officials are calling the state effort to improve harbor beaches "Back to the Beaches." Plans to restore Boston-area beaches began more than two years ago with the appointment of a joint commission that included Boston area officials, residents and state environmental leaders. Kennedy said Sheets worked closely with the commission to develop the Wollaston Beach plan.

The $30 million project will restore beaches from Quincy to Winthrop, including harbor island beaches.

License Board Meeting Aug. 2

The License Board will hold a special meeting Tuesday, Aug. 2, at 10 a.m. in City Hall.

Deadline To Join Canadian Mayors' Conference Today

Local businesses interested in participating in a conference of mayors in Canada Aug. 24-26 must contact the office of Mayor James Sheets by today (Thursday).

Sheets has been invited to attend the conference, which will include mayors from southeastern Massachusetts and the Canadian Maritime Provinces.

Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader said the purpose of the conference is threefold: to increase tourism and trade between the two regions, to learn more about the programs and methods that Atlantic Canada officials have used to revitalize downtown areas, and to collaborate on efforts to increase commercial and industrial development.

"Canadian officials and business representatives are very interested in meeting their American counterparts to explore mutual opportunities to increase business and trade," she said.

Sheets has been requested to forward to the Canadian government the names of any local businesses interested in taking part in the conference. Participating business people will be required to pay their own way but special plane and hotel rates have been arranged, Mader said.

Last fall, a similar conference of southeastern Massachusetts and Canadian mayors and business officials was sponsored locally by Bridgewater State College.

Ayers, MBTA To Meet With N.Q. Business Owners Aug. 2

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers and MBTA representatives will meet with North Quincy business owners Tuesday, Aug. 2 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at Tullio's Restaurant, Hancock St., North Quincy.

Ayers said topics for discussion will include the Old Colony Railroad project, MBTA plans for construction of the Hancock St. overpass, and the replacement of the Billings Rd. pedestrian overpass above the Old Colony Railroad tracks.

"I believe it is important to work with the business owners during any construction phases throughout the city and to keep them informed as the construction progresses so they can make the necessary adjustments for their businesses to remain lucrative," said Ayers.

For more information, call Ayers at 472-9877 or Robert Egan, project manager at the MBTA Regional Construction Office at 722-5910.

TUBERCULOSIS: IT'S BACK

In this era of wonder drugs and genetic engineering, it is easy to forget that not all of the health monsters from the past have been banished. Tuberculosis (TB) is a case in point. As the leading cause of death in America during the 1800's, TB was called "consumption" because it seemed to consume people, wasting them away. Then, around the turn of the century, the organism that causes the highly contagious disease was identified, leading to the development of anti-TB drugs. American cases of TB dropped to a low of 22,255 in 1984. Now, however, TB is back on the rise in the U.S., due partly to the spread of the HIV virus, an increase in foreign carriers, and gaps in the health care delivery system.

P.S. Identifying people at high risk for TB and being alert to early symptoms are keys to stopping the disease.

Tuberculosis, largely a disease of the underclass, is spreading in areas of this country where people have extremely limited access to health care. If you have further questions about this, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We specialize in the treatment of heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Office hours are by appointment, and our comfortable office is located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C in Quincy. The Mayor's Salary

If former Mayor Frank McCauley had his way, Mayor James Sheets' salary wouldn't be going up to $62,500 in January.

It would be going higher.

"The mayor of Quincy deserves a salary of $75,000," says McCauley. "Quincy is a big city. In addition to his regular mayoral duties—which are many—he also oversees the operation of Quincy Hospital and Quincy College."

When McCauley entered the mayor's office in 1982, the salary was $25,000. By the time he completed his fourth term and left in 1989, it was up to $55,000.

Progress has been made with the mayor's salary, McCauley thinks, and sees the new salary of $62,500 as another step in the right direction.

"But really," says McCauley, "the mayor should get $75,000."

The fact that several department heads will still be making more than the mayor would seem to be a good argument for the $75,000.

And how would McCauley assess Sheets' job performance to date?

"I think he's doing an excellent job. The city has financial stability. No tax increase this year. He's doing very well."

So well, McCauley thinks, that anyone with mayoral aspirations should exercise some political patience and caution and not rush into challenging Sheets.

Better for them, McCauley thinks, to wait until Sheets decides to call it a career and step down.

McCauley thinks Sheets, now in his third term, looks like a definite four-term mayor. Maybe more.

"I really think he's unbeatable," says McCauley.

WE ALL HAVE our favorite people. One of mine was Muriel Lyon Woelfel who died last Saturday at age 83.

Muriel was the first typesetter at The Sun and was a great one. You've heard of the fastest gun in the West. Well, she was the fastest typesetter in the East.

In our first year, Muriel used to typeset the entire paper by herself. Fast and clean. She would run off a three-yard galley of type, proudly hand it to you and say, "There isn't one typo." And there wasn't.

She caught spelling errors on the part of a reporter—or editor. And let them know it. "See that it doesn't happen again," she would admonish them—and laugh. They loved her.

McCAULEY

She was one of the most dedicated and loyal employees any company could wish for. Many a day she came to work not feeling well—knowing there was no other typesetter and the paper had to get out.

She would have crawled into work rather than have The Sun not make a deadline.

They don't come along like Muriel very often. The Sun was fortunate to have her 16 1/2 years before she retired in 1985.

But besides being the best typesetter in town, she was a best friend.

She will be missed but never forgotten.

OUR NOMINATION FOR "Best Sport of the Week" goes to Donald (D.J.) MacKinnon, developer of the Granite Crossing Shopping Center where Wal-Mart wants to locate.

Friday afternoon at the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, MacKinnon volunteered as the target at a dunking tank, inviting opponents and others attending the festival to "Dunk The Developer".

He got dunked five times, once by Bernie (Fireball) Reisberg, owner of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop who threw one perfect strike and 9 balls.

MacKinnon even had flyers distributed at The Falls condos where there is opposition to Wal-Mart, inviting them to come on down and dunk him. None of them apparently seized the opportunity.

Moon Island Commission Members To Be Named

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that members of a new bi-city commission of Boston and Quincy officials related to the use of Moon Island should be named by the end of this week.

QCA To Hold Annual Dinner

The Quincy Civic Association will hold its 27th annual dinner Wednesday, July 27, at 7 p.m. at the Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy.

The QCA's "Citizen of The Year" will be announced during dinner. The award, a Revere Bowl, will be presented by Arthur Chandler, president.

Mayor James Sheets and members of the city council are among the invited guests.

Boston Mayor Thomas Menino met with City Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers on the matter last Friday. Cheney was serving in his capacity as acting mayor because Sheets was in Ireland last week.

Quincy and Boston have clashed over the use of Moon Island since last fall. The island is owned by Boston but falls within Quincy city limits in Squantum. Quincy officials have opposed Boston's planned expansion of a police gun range on the island and its transportation of explosives to the island through Quincy neighborhoods. Plans to form a similar commission last December fell through, but Sheets said he looks forward to the formation of the new commission. He said he still hopes Moon Island and nearby Long Island can be tied in with National Park Service plans to link Quincy sites with the Boston Harbor Islands.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1914 picture postcard of teenagers "hanging out" between the yacht clubs on Wollaston Beach. This view shows the first Squantum Yacht Club building on this site which was built in 1904. The youngsters are playing in the mouth of Sachem's Creek which at this time was an open waterway meandering from the Montclair post bog through Wollaston to the beach. The space between the yacht clubs had been the location of Stuart's boatyard for many years before and after Quincy Shore Drive was built. This grand Victorian style yacht club building was badly damaged in a fire in 1930, but it was rebuilt with expanded second floor facilities including stateroom lockers along both sides and double tiered porches in the back. Later, though, the rear section had to be removed after serious damage from ice in the freeze-over of Quincy Bay in 1961. Finally, a disastrous fire in 1976 completely burned the clubhouse to the top of its pilings. The present, more contemporary style building was built in 1978 by students of the North Bennet Street school in Boston. Sachem's Creek now flows through two miles of underground pipe to a culvert at this site which, eighty years later, is still a popular hangout for teenagers.

Boston Edison Buys Squantum Naval Station

The General Services Administration in Washington announced that it had accepted a bid of $851,000 from the Boston Edison Co. for the 631 acres of land that constituted the deactivated Squantum Naval Air Station property.

William A. O'Connell, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, hailed the acceptance of Boston Edison's bid as "a great event for the city of Quincy."

"It is a great event to have a company of this stature here and the Chamber of Commerce extends a cordial welcome and offers its services in any future plans they may have for the development of the area," he said.

But J.V. MacDonald, promotion manager for Boston Edison, said the company is not ready to announce its plans and Planning Director Regis Harrington and Building Inspector Alrick A. Weidman said they have not been approached about development.

200,000 Reasons Why Bishops Support Legislature's Welfare Refund Plan

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

There are 200,000 reasons why the four Catholic Diocesan Bishops of Massachusetts have expressed support of the legislature's approach to welfare reform over the governor's: each of them is a child dependent upon AFDC.

The bishops are concerned that in our impatience to change a faulty welfare system, we do not forget its purpose—to provide support for poor children and families.

The legislature's plan does not have all the right answers, but it is more in keeping with the bishops' proposal outlined this spring, "We Are Responsible For One Another." The Catholic Church, through Catholic Charities and its other social services organizations, is one of the largest and most responsible providers of subsistence-level services to poor women and children in the state. It is concerned for their well-being.

The legislative plan is the product of more than a year's work by numerous legislators, including Senator Theresa Murray, as well as input at hearings from recipients, advocates and practitioners from the public and private sector. The result is a decently crafted plan that comes closer to balancing the need to change some of the present system with the imperative to provide care to those in need.

The bishops, not swayed by campaign rhetoric, have more confidence that the legislative plan, albeit far from the ideal, will help to maintain the lives of those children.

Thank You, Captain Newman

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I had the distinct pleasure of being given a briefing of duties and a tour of the Braintree Armory by Quincy's own Jeff Newman.

Capt. Newman discussed the history of Company C, 1st Battalion, 182nd Infantry, a mechanized infantry unit, and its role in decisive battles. From Bunker Hill to Vietnam, Capt. Newman described the historic significance the Company has played in the shaping of American history. Using this history as a backdrop, Capt. Newman described its current role and his vision of future roles.

Company C, or Charlie Company, is comprised of primarily Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth soldiers. Those chosen to conduct the tour of the armory, its weapons, and armored personnel carriers, exhibited a genuine pride in what they have accomplished and a resolve to meet the level of excellence marked by those who wore the uniform before them.

The day was an outstanding opportunity to meet those entrusted with the awesome responsibility of protecting national security. The South Shore can be very proud of Capt.

Newman and those assigned to the 182nd.

QUARRY FIRE

Debris dumped in Hitchcock's Quarry on Quarry St. caught fire, sending thick clouds of acrid grey smoke over the Hospital Hill area. The three-alarm fire was punctuated by small explosions as bottles and other rubbish burst in the heat.

Mrs. Dora Donovan of 36 Filbert St. said the quarry "looked like a picture of hell," and another neighbor, Mrs. Dennis Behan, described it as "a blazing inferno."

At one time the entire surface of the quarter-mile square quarry was aflame and firefighters had difficulty getting down from the 100-foot ledges to the debris floating on the water. Deputy Fire Chief James J. Daley said it might be days before the fire was out.

BERNIE REISBERG of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop has the look of a winning pitcher after a strike that plunged Donald (D.J.) MacKinnon (at right), developer of the Granite Crossing Shopping Center, into the "dunk tank" during last week's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival. MacKinnon invited opponents, proponents and undecideds of the development to "Dunk the Developer." Two hundred new names favoring the shopping center were gathered during the festival, bringing to 1,500 the total names so far.

day, but I was disappointed. I think it was the heat and all."

Nancy McArdle, Hancock Tobacco: "It was all right. It was not really good, slower than last year. I actually did better inside my store than I did last year, but it was certainly slower outside."

Jeff Bertman, Rogers Jewelry: "(We did) not bad. We were happy with it, although obviously it can always be better."

Paul Sturman, Frantic Framers: "I don't think there were as many people out there. I think the heat, for sure, affected things. During the day it was dead, but when it cooled off at night, things picked up."

Tom Hanlon, Hanlon's Shoes: "It was a little slower than in years past, probably because of Thursday. Thursday was such God-awful heat, and Thursday usually sets the tone. But the other two days were all right."

Deanna Gazarian, Phase II Jewelry: "I wasn't down there, but that was my daughter's opinion (that business was down because of the heat). (But) she felt Friday was better than the other two days."

'Taste Of The South Shore' In Downtown Quincy Aug. 6-7

The second annual "Taste of the South Shore" will take place in downtown Quincy on Saturday, Aug. 6, and Sunday, Aug. 7.

The event will feature specialties from a wide variety of area restaurants, continuous live musical entertainment, children's activities and more.

Hancock St. between Granite and School Sts. will be transformed into a moveable feast for the weekend, as food establishments offer treats ranging from "down home" family fare to gourmet delights. To date, 21 food establishments have been confirmed to participate.

Admission is $1 (free for children under 12 and senior citizens) and "bite" tickets for the samplings are $1 each or 12 for $10.

Proceeds benefit Horizons For Youth, a

Sharon-based non-profit organization that provides environmental education for school and youth groups and residential camping programs for needy children.

"Taste of the South Shore" is produced by Horizons For Youth

For more information, call 828-7550.

QUESTIONS? Please call the Recycling Hotline, 770-BINS.

Terry Fancher Installed Quincy Rotary Club President

Terry N. Fancher, South Shore Chamber of Commerce General Manager, has been installed 1994-1995 president of the Quincy Rotary Club.

He succeeds outgoing president James "Jay" Asher, president of WJDA-Radio.

"Our challenge this year is to use everyone in the club to determine what groups in Quincy need our help the most. Then we will dedicate the time and money that will allow us to truly make a difference in helping Quincy," said Fancher, on assuming his appointment.

Fancher has been a member of Rotary 10 years. Programs planned for 1994-1995 Quincy Rotary Club will focus on raising community awareness by increasing membership and generating more funds for Quincy by initiating a charitable auction.

Fancher has been employed with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce since 1983 serving in his present position as general manager and manager of business and transportation since 1986. He is a weekend newscaster at WJDA-Radio, Quincy, and is the former press secretary to the executive officer of consumer affairs under Governor Edward King.

Fancher is affiliated with civic and professional organizations which include chairmanship of the Old Colony Rail Restoration Citizens Advisory Committee and vice chairman of the South Coastal Regional Employment Board.

Fancher resides with his family in Braintree.

'Up In Smoke' At Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre

Jody Scalise and Paul Richmond, members of the Community Education Workshop, Dover, N.H., will present "Up In Smoke" at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater, 100 Southern Artery, Quincy, Wednesday, Aug. 3 at 10 a.m.

The performers bring comic timing, amazing balance and juggling skills, and the silent power of mime together into a show that allows their audience to come to its own realizations about the insanity of tobacco use.

Their songs, skits, comedy, movement and costumes offer straight facts about tobacco and make strong points about nicotine addiction, peer pressure, self-esteem and how to thrive in a society that still permits the glorification of smoking.

The Community Education Workshop (CEW) was founded to help communities educate their children and role-model adults about pressing issues in health and safety, diversity and the environment.

Their specialty is creating performance-centered, value-based programs geared to help children receive and remember information they need to lead safer, healthier, fuller lives. Their programs also create opportunities for adults to talk about important issues with children by broaching subjects in entertaining, non-threatening ways.

There is no admission charge for the performance. The program is sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department and the Quincy Health Department.

Building Inspector Says He Did Not Deserve Suspension with the Mayor's order," Cheney wrote. "Therefore, as Acting Mayor of the City of Quincy, I hereby suspend you for one day for failure to comply with a direct order from the Mayor of the City of Quincy."

Cheney's letter informed Mulvey that the suspension would take effect Monday and that he would be reinstated on Tuesday. It concluded that "any further violation of this order will lead to further disciplinary action—possibly resulting in termination."

Cheney said he feels the allegations concerning Mulvey's actions were enough to warrant a suspension. He also said that Mulvey does not fall under Civil Service rules that require disciplinary hearings.

"I wouldn't expect him (Mulvey) to be happy with my actions," said Cheney. "I felt appropriate action had to be taken, and so I took it."

Cheney said at the time he issued the suspension, he was unaware an acting mayor does not have the authority to do so.

Sheets said he discussed the matter with Mulvey Monday but would not comment about their conversation. He also would not say whether the latest accusation against Mulvey came from the same accuser or a different employee.

The mayor said he has not decided whether he will take any disciplinary action against Mulvey. He added that he wants to discuss the matter with Yaeger after she returns from vacation Aug. 8 before making a final decision.

"I may do nothing, but I may do something," said the mayor, who has the authority to hire and fire the building inspector.

Mulvey, however, maintains that he has complied with Sheets' order to open only mail that is directed to him individually or to the Building Inspection Department without designation to any specific individual.

In addition, after the order was issued, Mulvey expressed his "strong disagreement" over the new policy to Sheets in a letter, saying it limits his ability to manage the business of his department and comprises public safety.

"What happens if a letter stating some structural damage is sent to the building department with an employee's name on it but that person is on vacation? That's a major concern of mine," he said.

Mulvey said he has been informed by City Solicitor Stephen McGrath and Assistant City Solicitor James Timmins that he does have the authority to open department mail addressed to someone else as long as the mail does not state "personal or confidential." Nonetheless, Mulvey said he will adhere to the mayor's order, although he hopes the mayor will reconsider the policy in the interest of public safety.

He added all department mail is a matter of public record. "Everything in my office, any municipal office, is public. I have to have the ability to know what's going on in my office," he said.

"Other departments in the city have the same practice," he added. "Everyone in my office is an extension of me. They are my assistants. There are not their own little departments."

Could Be Open By Spring Shipbuilding Museum Secures Bond Buyer

The U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River shipyard could be receiving visitors by next spring.

A buyer for $6.6 million in bonds that will finance the museum has been secured after more than a year's delay, according to Executive Director William MacMullen. The deal should be closed later this month, he said.

MacMullen said a Midwestern investment company has agreed to buy the bonds, and a major Boston bank has agreed to guarantee the bonds. A closing has been scheduled for July 28, he added.

MacMullen said he could not release the names of the parties, saying they had not yet given him permission to do so. However, museum documents filed with the state agency issuing the bonds identify the guarantor as the Bank of Boston.

Although the museum originally intended to borrow $5.8 million for the project, the amount increased to cover additional construction costs and fees the museum has to pay in order to get security for the bonds, according to MacMullen. He would not disclose the amounts of the fees.

MacMullen said if the closing takes place on schedule, the 718-foot USS Salem will arrive in Quincy by the end of August and museum construction will begin by September. Doors could open by next spring.

Quincy officials, including Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Michael Cheney, Ward 2 Councilor Ted DeCristofaro and state Rep. Ronald Mariano, who serves on the museum's board of directors, expressed satisfaction and relief over the good news from the museum. Some officials had expressed concerns that the tax-exempt bonds for the non-profit organization could not be sold in the current weak bond market, and feared the museum's future was in jeopardy.

At the same time, the Navy had said it would not send the USS Salem—a Quincy-built heavy cruiser that would be the centerpiece of the museum—until at least some of the bonds were sold. The Salem had originally been scheduled to arrive in January 1993, with the museum scheduled to open soon after that.

In addition, the financing plans suffered a serious setback last year when a deal to sell the bonds to a bank and two mutual fund companies fell through one week before the Dec. 22 closing date. MacMullen said there was a change in the bank management and the new leadership decided not to pursue it.

In order to make up for lost time, the museum earlier this year decided to seek an insurance company to guarantee the bonds, with the help of Oppenheimer & Co., an investment banking firm.

The delay ended up working in the museum's favor, MacMullen said, because it should now be able to get a better interest rate. In the December deal, he noted, the rate would have been 8.5 percent, but now it will be 5.6 percent, which will save the museum around $1.2 million in interest payments over its first five years.

Although details of the deal are still being negotiated, MacMullen said it calls for the bank to write a letter of credit backing the bonds and a California holding company to pledge government securities against the letter of credit.

A spokesman for Oppenheimer & Co.'s Boston office said under this arrangement, the bank would pay principal and interest payments on the bonds if the museum is unable. The California holding company will provide collateral to the bank through the securities, which carry a triple A rating, the highest possible, the spokesman added.

MacMullen said the museum will likely be asked to pay back the bonds in monthly installments over 30 years, beginning two years from the closing date. However, in order to save money, it will attempt to pay back the loan in less time, he added.

MacMullen also noted he expects the average monthly principal and interest payments to be about $38,000.

Shipbuilding Museum documents filed with the Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency, which will issue the bonds, indicate that the total bond package increased by $800,000 to cover the costs of fees to the backers, or "credit enhancement." MacMullen said the increase is due to additional construction costs caused by expansion of the project, as well as the backing fees.

The museum will be designed from two converted shipyard buildings and will trace the history of U.S. shipbuilding and serve as a military archive. It is expected to draw at least 250,000 visitors annually and will also include a movie theater and function hall for reunions, lectures and fund-raisers.

The museum negotiated a 10-year lease, with an option to renew for another 10 years, with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. The MWRA bought the shipyard from General Dynamics seven years ago.

Most of the $6.6 million will be raised from the bond sale to renovate the buildings, refit the Salem and create the exhibits. Plans for those projects are completed, having been done by a staff of six volunteers during the past 20 months.

Sheets has said the museum will be a key factor in the city's plans to boost tourism and crucial to getting a hotel in Quincy Center.

Wal-Mart Proposal Heads To Planning Board For Discussion

that in each of the public hearings on this project, virtually every neighborhood resident who testified highlighted the significant adverse effects this would have on their neighborhood."

The proposed Wal-Mart/Granite Crossing development has been met with both opposition and support since the project was first unveiled several months ago. However, project proponents appear to be outnumbering opponents in recent weeks.

A petition in favor of the project was signed by 200 people during last week's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, bringing the total number of names to 1500.

A small group of Falls residents formed the "We're Against the Wal Committee" to stop the project. They are concerned the 245,000 square-foot retail center and 1200 parking spaces will lower property values and increase traffic in the area, thereby diminishing the quality of life at the Falls.

According to Mignon, a retail development in a residential neighborhood in Shrewsbury severely depressed home values from $175,000 to as low as $115,000.

"This fact alone represents the significant adverse effect that would require the Planning Board to reject the proposal," Mignon said.

Traffic is another major concern of the opponents. Surveys estimate the development would generate over 16,000 vehicle trips on Falls Boulevard every Saturday and Sunday. "This increased level of traffic represents both a nuisance and a serious public safety hazard," Mignon said.

The project, if built, would be located about 800 feet from the Falls Condominium complex.

Project proponents, however, maintain the development will add jobs to the local economy and raise substantial tax revenue for the city. According to MacKinnon, the project would create 500 retail jobs and generate $610,000 in annual tax revenue.

As proposed, Granite

Crossing would consist of two buildings, one would be Wal-Mart and the other an as-yet unnamed supermarket.

The Planning Board will decide Sept. 27 whether to allow a change in the Falls Boulevard, the entrance to The Falls, to accommodate the shopping center. The board has the sole control over approving the road change.

MacKinnon has requested special permits for each of the two buildings. The property is zoned Planned Unit Development.

The permits must be approved by the City Council by Sept. 27 for the project to move forward.

Planning Director Richard Meade said the board will continue discussing the permits at future hearings, if all questions are not answered at Wednesday's meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room.

Planning Board Director James Kelly said the proposal will generate many questions,

Volunteer Positions Available At CP Of South Shore

Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore is currently interviewing individuals interested in volunteer work with the agency at the Quincy office.

The organization assists developmentally disabled children and adults in the Quincy, Metropolitan Boston and South Shore areas. Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore runs the Children's Developmental Disabilities Center providing therapeutic, educational,

Morrisette Squeezes Into Legion Playoffs

The Morrisette Post American Legion baseball team entered the season's homestretch needing four wins in their last five games to earn the third and final playoff spot allotted to Zone 6 (East) teams.

After wins over Canton and Quincy and a loss to Randolph in their final three regularly-scheduled games, Morrisette won, by forfeit, two make-up games to gain a spot in the playoffs.

Morrisette's July 8 game against Holbrook was rained out. Holbrook forfeited the make-up when they were unable to field a nine-man unit. Conditions of the Weymouth forfeit, however, were less clear.

Earlier in the season Morrisette beat Weymouth, 2-0. Weymouth protested the contest, claiming an illegal pitching change was made by Morrisette. As such, the game was stricken from the books, and a make-up date was scheduled at the end of the season. Weymouth, standing atop the Zone with a 16-5 record, failed to show up for the game. Morrisette was given the victory - a win they earned on the field in the original contest - and a place in the playoffs.

The Morrisette win/Weymouth forfeit meant just one game separated the top four teams in the Zone 6 final standings. Weymouth edged out Milton for first place on tie breakers, as both teams finished with 16-6 records. Morrisette (15-6-1) surpassed Braintree (15-7) for the third playoff spot by the narrowest of margins.

Morrisette battles Needham this week in a best-of-three opening round Bracket A playoff contest. The first two games (Tuesday and Wednesday) were played at Adams Field. If necessary, a third game will be played tonight (Thursday). A coin flip will determine the location. The winner of this match will play the winner of the New Bedford-Plymouth series.

In action from final week of the season:

Ace pitcher Tom Malvesti fanned 11 Canton batters in a 5-3 Morrisette win.

Morrisette took charge of the contest with three runs in the fourth inning to take a 5-0 lead. A triple by Joe Biagini, single by Neil Connelly, and a fielder's choice by Mark Cahill accounted for the three runs.

The two early runs scored due to a Canton wild pitch and an error.

Connelly finished the contest with two base hits. A.J. Carthas and Jim Sapienza had one hit each.

Malvesti allowed just five hits and two walks in earning his fifth win of the season. Two of Canton's three runs were unearned.

Morrisette also beat Quincy, 14-3.

Dan Duncan worked the mound for five innings to notch his first win of the season. He allowed just one hit, no runs and struck out five.

At the plate, Duncan cracked an single and a triple and knocked in two runs.

After being held hitless against Canton, Dave Reinhardt bounced back with a more characteristic offensive showing: He clubbed a pair of doubles, drove in three, walked twice, and scored four runs.

Sapienza recorded four RBIs with a double, sacrifice and a fielder's choice. Carthas also had two hits for Morrisette. Connelly, Malvesti, Biagini, Andy Joyce and Jeff Russell each chipped in with base hits.

Morrisette was routed by Randolph, 11-5, in their final contest.

Randolph jumped to an 11-0 lead before Morrisette was able to put a run on the board.

Reinhardt recorded two hits and an RBI. Cahill drove in two with a triple. Sapienza had an RBI single and Malvesti, Duncan and Jim Cuneo all had base hits.

Five different players worked the mound for Morrisette. Pat Bryan took the loss to drop his record to 3-3.

In Scholastic Events, Jennifer Pineo of North Quincy High placed sixth in the discus while schoolmate Aja Jackson took seventh in the triple jump.

Kelly Burke, now attending Marshfield High School, placed third in the long jump and Danielle Dickey, now at Scituate High, was fourth in the shot put.

The seventh annual Dick Koch Memorial Softball Doubleheader will be played Wednesday, Aug. 24 at Adams Field, Quincy.

This year's charitable contest features the Quincy Police versus the Quincy Fire at 6:30 p.m. followed by the City Officials--New Media game at 8 p.m.

Since the charitable event was founded in 1977 by the late Richard Koch Sr. and renamed in his honor seven years ago, the doubleheader has raised $24,700 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, including $1500 last year. Beginning this year, the game will feature a different charity to benefit from the event's proceeds. This year's charity is the Quincy Police Athletic League.

"The doubleheader was started as one of the many activities sponsored by the Quincy-South Shore MDA Telethon Committee based at The Quincy Sun and which raised over $1 million to help fight muscular dystrophy," said Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth.

"We have decided that beginning this year the proceeds from the doubleheader will be shared with other charitable organizations.

"This year we have selected the Quincy Police Athletic League which does so much to help Quincy youngsters in need of wholesome recreational and other activities."

Doubleheader Co-Chairmen Tom Koch and Bob Bosworth agreed.

"We're very proud to have helped the Quincy community raise $24,700 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association over the past 17 years," Koch said. "Now we believe there is a need to help other worthy causes which are based right here in Quincy."

Bosworth added, "By changing the charity every year, we feel this is a fair way of sharing the resources this game generates. Certainly MDA, as well as other meaningful causes, will be included as the tradition of this unique game continues for years to come."

Tickets for the twin-bill are $2 which includes admission to both games and a chance to win prizes in a drawing. Among the prizes are Red Sox tickets; gift certificates from area restaurants and stores and other items.

Tickets are available at the Mayor's Office at City Hall and the Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center. They will also be available at the gate Wednesday, Aug. 24.

The Quincy Fire Department, which as not defeated the Quincy Police for some time, is aiming to end the drought with a win this year.

The News Media, which topped the City Officials 20-13 last year, will try to make it three straight wins and take a 10-8 series lead. A City Officials' win would snap the Media two-year winning streak and tie the series at nine games each.

Quincy Runners Shine At Bay State Games

Several members of the Quincy Track Club performed well in the Bay State Games held last week at MIT.

In Women's Open Events, Tricia Hughes, a former QTC and North Quincy High star now attending Springfield College, won the triple jump with a leap, leap, leap of 35'10". Maureen Roche, currently assistant girls' track coach at NQ, won the shot put with a heave of 38'8". Roche also took fourth in the discus.

Former QTC member Tracy Maher, now an assistant at U Lowell, won the 3000-meters in 10 minutes, 35 seconds. Jennifer Pratt, a member of U Lowell's women's squad and a long-time QTC member, took second in the high jump with a height of 5'4".

Football Camp Begins Aug. 2

The Quincy Recreation Department is accepting registrations for its football camp to be held Aug. 2, 4, 9, 10 and 11.

The camp is open to youngsters entering grades 6-9 and cost is $13.

Registrations will be taken on a first come, first serve basis from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, at the Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery.

The five two-hour sessions will cover stretching, conditioning, passing, receiving, special teams, and running and blocking techniques.

Jack Raymer, Quincy High head coach, and Ken McPhee, North Quincy

High head coach, will supervise the camp. They will be helped by assistant high school coaches and coaches from the Quincy Youth Football League.

The camp will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. at a location to be announced.

For more information call the Recreation office at 376-1386.

Sacchetti Golf Tournament To Be Held Aug. 1

The second annual Charles Sacchetti Remembrance golf tournament will be held Monday, Aug. 1 at the Brookmeadows Golf Course in Canton.

Sacchetti was a Quincy High graduate, where he excelled in football and baseball. After serving in the U.S. Army he became a police officer and later transferred to the Quincy Fire Department, where he rose to the rank of Captain.

The tournament fee is $260 per foursome, which includes greens fee, cart, dinner, hat and prizes. Those wishing to sponsor a hole with their name and title/position on a given tee can do so for an additional $100.

For application information call John "Butch" Mahoney at 472-9193, or Peter White at 479-3624.

South Quincy Bocce Club Rolls To St. John's Title

By POMPEO
CARDARELLI

South Quincy Bocce Club rolled past defending champion BFI in the St. John's League championship game.

Big outings by Sarah Larson, Tim Pazzolo, Ryan McMahon and Matt Gardener led Bocce Club to the 29-5 win.

Larson was 4 for 4 with two doubles and two singles. Pazzolo went 3 for 3 with a triple. McMahon also went 3 for 3 while Gardener was 2 for 3 with a double and triple. Dave Centrella added a single and a double.

BFI's Jimmy Constat nailed the games only roundtripper and teammate Justin Hall notched two base hits.

Pazzolo earned the win for Bocce Club. Ryan McMahon recorded the save with seven strikeouts in three innings of work.

The two clubs met earlier in the double-elimination playoff tournament. Bocce Club also won this contest, 15-2.

BFI took a quick 2-0 lead in the top of the first when Mike Hogan's single drove in Rachael Powers and Steffanie Roche.

Bocce Club responded with three in the bottom of the inning to take the lead for good. Rookies Gardener and Centrella combined for four triples, two singles, seven RBIs and six runs scored (three each).

Bocce Club ace Ryan McMahon fanned seven batters to give him 83 for the season against just 11 walks.

McMahon added five more Ks to his total in his squad's playoff win over the Yankees. He relieved winning pitcher Tim Pazzolo.

McMahon also led his team at the plate with a 3 for 3 (two singles, double) day. The defense was anchored by right fielder Brian Keefe, who made a home run-saving catch, and third baseman Sarah Larson, who made several outstanding plays at the hot corner.

Defending champs BFI opened the playoffs with an 8-5 win over Cable.

O'Neil earned the game ball in the 27-7 win over the Marlins. Dingers were hammered by Rachael Powers, Hall, Hogan, Constat and George. Bleakney notched two doubles and a triple.

In other playoff action, Cable hooked the Marlins, 10-7.

Kevin Shea led the Cable club with a 2 for 2 effort that included a home run and two runs scored. Also cracking round-trippers were Julio Ochoa and Chris Worley. Both recorded three RBIs as well.

Sean Bailey fanned six batters in just two innings of work.

home run. Jonathan Dipietro cracked an RBI triple. John Lapo made Cable's top defensive play when his outstanding throw nailed a runner at home.

BFI also earned playoff wins over the Yankees and Marlins.

Hall was again a top performer in the 26-4 win over the Yankees. He fanned seven batters and allowed one hit in three innings on the mound, while driving in five runs at the plate. Jimmy Constat, Ted George, Billy Page, Dave Kasy and Powers also had great games. Outfielders Steffanie Roche, Jayme O'Neil, Joe Bleakney, Mike Boyle and Chris Powers handled the longballs with ease.

O'Neil earned the game ball in the 27-7 win over the Marlins. Dingers were hammered by Rachael Powers, Hall, Hogan, Constat and George. Bleakney notched two doubles and a triple.

In other playoff action, Cable hooked the Marlins, 10-7.

Babe Ruth

Elks Top Fire In First Round Playoff Duel

The Elks cooled off Fire Dept., 4-1, in a much-anticipated pitchers' duel between Andrew Byrne of the Elks and Mike Doyle of Fire Dept. in opening round Babe Ruth League playoff action.

The Elks entered the contest as the league's best team with a 16-6 record, while Fire Dept. came in as the hottest team in the league, having won eight of their last nine contests to make the playoffs with a record of 12-10-1.

The game might have been closer had it not been for a mysterious illness or injury which left Doyle temporarily unable to pitch. With the visibly shaken Doyle playing first base in the third inning, the Elks struck for all four of their runs to insure the win.

Doyle was able to return to the game in the following inning and shut down the Elks the rest of the way. However, his squad was unable to overcome the deficit against Byrne and the Elks' stingy defense.

Matt McLaughlin was the top batsman for the Elks - his single drove in two runs, including the game-winner. Steve Clarke also had an RBI. Eric Wood hit a double, the game's only extra-base hit for either team. Chris Bregoli had a hit and Jack Daley walked twice. Also reaching on balls were Tim Wood and Scott Statti.

Vacuum-like left fielder Ted McGillicuddy and third baseman/shortstop Statti were the Elks' top defensive players.

For Fire Dept., Doyle went 2 for 3 at the plate and walked once. Bobby Walsh scored his club's only run on a base hit by Jose Diaz. Fire Dept. loaded the bases in the fifth inning but were unable to get a man across the plate.

Both Byrne and Doyle fanned six batters.

Fire Dept. closed their impressive late-season surge with victories in three final must-win outings.

Fire's last win came in an extra-scheduled game against Granite City to determine a playoff spot. Fire Dept. pounded out 14 hits in a 10-4 win.

Bobby Walsh's single, two doubles and four RBIs led the attack. Other top batsmen included Billy Walker (triple, single), James McDonagh (three singles) and Mike Doyle (two singles, walk). Chad Fitzpatrick and Kevin McQue both had base hits.

Kelly also had a perfect day at the plate with two hits, including a long triple, and six RBIs.

Brian Gates and Steve Wiltshire both had two-hit games. Kevin Cellucci and Mike Sullivan each singled.

Jon Ryan, Matt Norton, Billy Graney, Shawn Manning, Mike Eddy and Pat Cummings all played well.

Local 444 beat the Elks, 6-4.

Local scored five runs in the fourth to capture the win on three walks and doubles by Robby Bell and Steve Maze. Earlier, Mike Russo clubbed a triple to knock in a run.

Bobby Johnston made his pitching debut for the Elks and was impressive through the first three innings, allowing only two hits before tiring. Chris Bregoli had two hits and an RBI. Also with RBIs were Steve Clarke and Tim Wood.

Trill threatened in the sixth. Two doubles and a single brought them to within two at 7-5. But Doyle settled down and smoked four batters in the final two innings.

Against Bryan Post, Fire Dept. and hurler Bobby Walsh found themselves trailing 4-0 in the second before six runs in the fifth gave them the lead. Six walks, a hit and errors brought in the decisive runs.

The winners added three more runs in the sixth with back-to-back triples by Chris Robinson and James McDonagh and singles by Jose Diaz, Mike McLaughlin and Chad Fitzpatrick.

Walsh ended the game with nine Ks and looked strong in the late innings.

John Sullivan clubbed a three-bagger for Bryan Post. Pitcher Mike Shaw carried a shutout into the fifth inning.

In other regular season-ending action:

Bryan Post defeated Morrisette 9-2 as Mark Kelly fired a three-hit and fanned nine.

Kelly also had a perfect day at the plate with two hits, including a long triple, and six RBIs.

Brian Gates and Steve Wiltshire both had two-hit games. Kevin Cellucci and Mike Sullivan each singled.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

The American Legion baseball sectional tournament began this week with Morrisette hosting Needham at Adams Field, but controversy clouded the end of the regular season.

Morrisette was scheduled to play a make-up game - their last game of the season - Sunday, July 24 against Weymouth. The game would have a major impact on the tight Zone 6 (East) race. Weymouth (16-5, 32 points) led the Zone, followed by Milton (16-6, 32 points), Braintree (15-7, 30 points) and Morrisette (14-6-1, 29 points).

A win by Morrisette would pull them one point ahead of Braintree for the third and final playoff spot allotted to Zone 6. A win by Weymouth, who would finish first in the Zone either way, would put Braintree in the tournament.

Instead of playing, Weymouth forfeited the contest. Morrisette was in, Braintree was out.

Herein lies the controversy: Did Weymouth coach Phil Van Neste owe it to the Braintree team to play the game, despite the fact that it might hurt his own team?

Here is a summary of the situation: The forfeited game was supposed to be a make-up of a June 18 contest which Morrisette won, 2-0.

After that game, Van Neste filed a formal protest because, with the game scoreless in the fifth inning, Morrisette manager Dave Perdios came to the mound to speak to pitcher Dan Duncan on two different occasions with the same Weymouth batter (Michael Gates) at the plate. Under the Sporting News rules which govern Legion play, it was illegal for Perdios to do so. Upon the Morrisette manager's second trip to the mound, Duncan was replaced by Sean Dolbear, who went on to retire Gates and the next two batters with men stranded on second and third.

Van Neste, who umpired Legion games for 12 years, made it known to the officials working the game that not only was it illegal for Perdios to come to the mound for the second time with the same batter at the plate, it was illegal for him to replace Duncan with Dolbear. The umpires, however, allowed Dolbear to stay in the game.

Van Neste's knowledge of the rule proved to be correct - Perdios had in fact committed an infraction and the umpires were wrong in letting the pitching change stand. As such, the game was stricken from the record books and a make-up would be played.

However, the controversy was just beginning. Van Neste, whose team was tied after playing 10 games in the 12 days before the rescheduled date of July 24, expected the new game to begin at the point of infraction: fifth inning, scored tied 0-0, men on second and third, no outs, Duncan on the mound, Gates at the plate with a 1-0 count. He claims league officials told him this is where play would resume.

Perdios understood differently - the game would be replayed in its entirety.

Whatever the case, when it came to gametime, Van Neste was told by regional Legion baseball vice-chairman Merrill Fleck that they would, in fact, play an entire game.

Van Neste, who felt he had been lied to, walked off the field with his team rather than subject his ball club to another complete game just two days before the sectional tournament was to start.

For Weymouth, the game meant nothing. Even with the loss, they finished with the same record as Milton, but would get the first-place nod due to a tie breaker rule. If the protest had never been lodged and the game rescheduled, Morrisette would have made the tournament because they beat Weymouth on the day in question. Would they have won had Duncan faced Gates for his entire at-bat? Who knows. Milton, by the way, was unaffected by the whole mess.

So who suffered? Braintree did. Which brings us back to our question - did Van Neste owe it to the Braintree team to play the make-up game, no matter what the circumstances? Perdios certainly thinks so.

"Two years ago when we won our state title, we had to play Wollaston in a make-up game," he said. "We were going to win the Zone no matter what, but if we won the game, Weymouth went to the playoffs. If Wollaston won, they went to the playoffs. We played our starters and we did beat Wollaston and Weymouth went to the playoffs."

Van Neste feels differently. "I feel Braintree was the loser in all this but I feel if I were to go out and play seven innings, exhausted as our players were, we wouldn't have won anyway. My allegiance is to Weymouth and my players. It would've been magnanimous of me to send out my players for seven innings, then I have to play two, maybe three, nine inning games this week."

Junior League 10-Year-Old All-Star Game Saturday

The Quincy Junior Baseball League will hold its 10-year-old All-Star Game Saturday night at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

The festivities are scheduled to get underway at 7 with a home run derby where the city's top young sluggers will get a chance to knock balls over the fence. The derby is modeled after the major league version.

Those invited to play in Jaehnig Club Wins Two In Marlboro Tournament

The Jaehnig Chiropractic baseball club, a team of local 10-year-old ball players, won two exciting games in the Marlboro Baseball Tournament.

The tournament featured seven of the top teams from central and eastern Mass. competing in round-robin play.

The Jaehnig squad staged two late-inning rallies to sweep a doubleheader played Sunday in sweltering 95-degree heat.

In the opening set, Quincy scored nine runs in the last inning to upset Shrewsbury, 10-3. Mark Maher's bases-loaded double tied the contest, and Jason Fidalgo's knocked in the go-ahead run with a clutch two-strike sacrifice fly to left field. John Fidalgo, Justin Hall and Patrick Jaehnig followed with consecutive doubles to break the game open.

Hall fanned eight batters in a four-inning stint on the mound. He also nailed a home run in the fourth inning that easily cleared the fence in left-center field.

Keith Doherty recorded the win with two innings of relief work. He struck out the side to end the game in the sixth.

Also playing well for the Jaehnig club was Tom Buckley, who hit a couple of hard shots and played a great defensive game behind the plate for three innings.

In the day's second contest Quincy trailed Milford, 5-3, in the fifth, before a late rally gave them a 7-5 win.

David Jaehnig started the rally with a bloop single. With one out Hall singled and Pat Jaehnig blasted a long double to the fence in right-center. Doherty drove in the tying and winning runs with a hard double. Chris Lockhead (3 for 3, three RBIs) followed with another double.

An insurance run was scored in the sixth when Charlie Vidoli walked, Dave Jaehnig singled, and Hall whacked a sacrifice fly.

Pat Bregoli went 2 for 2 in the contest and pitched three strong innings. Pat Jaehnig was credited with the win. He gave up just one unearned run in three innings of relief. He was backed by the outstanding defensive plays of Lockhead, Bregoli, Vidoli, Maher and John Fidalgo.

The Jaehnig club continues play in the Marlboro Tournament with three games this week.

The team is managed by Mark Jaehnig and coached by Les Fidalgo, Peter Currie and Charlie Jaehnig. Matthew Jaehnig is the bat boy and team mascot.

IT'S IN THE BAG

Judging by the car-buying public's preference for automobiles equipped with air bags, it may be assumed that these safety devices are perceived as being quite effective in preventing injury and saving lives. Data released by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS) bears witness to the presumption of air bag effectiveness. Based on studies of about 18,000 driver crash deaths between 1985 and 1992, researchers found 24 percent fewer deaths than expected in front and front-end crashes involving cars equipped with air bags. Even though air bags are designed for protection in front-end crashes, they yielded a 16 percent reduction in fatalities in crashes of all kinds. These lives saved by air bags are over and above the lives already saved by seat belt use.

HINT: Air bags are not intended to replace, but to supplement, the use of seat belts.

We know how important your family is to you and so we suggest you make sure they always wear their seat belts. Make an appointment today at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

People who are sensitive to the suffering and misfortune of others are generally happy people. Showing pity for others with sympathetic and kindly action is like lending a helping hand. Jesus said on one occasion, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth... but lay up for yourself treasures in heaven."

Every time we do something for someone else, every time we set ourselves aside that another may live a fuller life, every time that we contribute to some project for human betterment, we are laying up spiritual treasures. If we think about the matter for a moment we realize that the only money we have truly saved unto eternity is the money we have spent unselfishly for the benefit of others. These are treasures stored away "where moth and rust do not corrupt."

Ronald Zooleck Named To Quincy 2000 Board

Ronald Zooleck, South Shore Chamber of Commerce President and CEO, CCE, has been named to the board of The Quincy 2000 Corporation by Quincy 2000 Chairman Thomas Galvin.

"Few business organizations executives carry the breadth of experience Ron Zooleck is bringing to the board of Quincy 2000. As Quincy 2000 broadens its spectrum of development opportunities, Ron Zooleck's expertise will serve as a welcome asset to implementing plans for retail and commercial development, transportation improvement and marketing and financial incentive programs," said Galvin.

The Quincy 2000 Corporation is a non-profit public/private partnership that serves as a catalyst for economic and commercial development in the city of Quincy.

Zooleck began his 32-year professional career with the Waterbury, Conn. Chamber of Commerce in 1962 where he was responsible for economic development, and implementing retail and legislative programs. In 1969, he was named president of the Northwest Connecticut Chamber of Commerce in Torrington, Conn.

He has served as president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the region's largest business organization, since 1978. Zooleck has earned recognition as president of the New England Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives, director of the American Chamber of Commerce Executives and chairman of the Delaware Institute of Organization Management. Most recently he was named 1993 New England's First Executive of the Year.

Zooleck is a graduate of the University of Connecticut and the Institute and Academy for Organizational Management at Notre Dame, Indiana. He lives with his wife, Jane, in Hingham, Mass.

Atty. Matthew McDonnell Admitted To Practice Before U.S. Supreme Court

Quincy Atty. Matthew J. McDonnell was recently admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States by a motion presented by Aviam Soifer, Dean of the Boston College Law School, at Washington, D.C. before the full bench sitting at the Supreme Court in Washington, D.C.

MATTHEW McDONNELL
Presidents Place.

That session of the Supreme Court marked the last day that retiring Justice Harry Blackmun sat on the full bench of the court.

McDonnell has been practicing law for over 27 years and maintains a private law practice in Quincy Square at Quincy Bar Association, a president of the Quincy Lions Club, a past president of the Merrymount Association and a past Grand Knight of Dorchester Lower Mills Knights of Columbus Council. He currently serves on the Boards of the Massachusetts Bar Association, the Massachusetts Bar Foundation, Notre Dame Academy of Hingham, Por Cristo (of Quincy) and the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

McDonnell lives in Merrymount with his wife Eileen. They have five children and one grandchild.

Lorraine Barry Named Realtor Of The Year

Lorraine Barry, GRI, principal in the firm of Barry Realty of Weymouth, was named 1994 Realtor of the Year of the Quincy-South Shore Board of Realtors at a recent award ceremony at the Lantana in Randolph.

Barry received the honor for her outstanding contributions and dedication to the Realtor Association and the real estate profession.

A member of the Board since 1977, she has served on the Board of Directors for several years and currently serves on the Multiple Listing Service Committee, Joint Venture Executive Committee and is a member of the Budget and Finance Committee. Barry has also served as Chairman of the Bylaws and Library Committees and has served as a member of the Board Orientation, Personnel, Programs and Membership Committees and on the Computer Task Force.

Among the 150 people at the ceremony were Barry's husband and partner, John, their son Michael and his wife Lisa, daughter Kathleen and her husband Ed Cardinal.

As Realtor of the Year, Barry's name will be placed in nomination for receipt of the Massachusetts Realtor of the Year Award to be presented in September at the Massachusetts Association of Realtors Convention in Puerto Rico.

The Co-operative Bank Announces

11% Increase In Second Quarter Earnings

The Co-operative Bank of Concord, with branches in Quincy, announces earnings for the second quarter ended June 30, of $1,832,000, or $0.50 per share, as compared to $1,621,000, or $0.45 per share, for the same period last year.

The annualized return on average assets and average equity were 1.08% and 12.54%, respectively, for the second quarter of 1994.

Earnings for the six months ended June 30, were $3,549,000, or $0.96 per share, as compared to $5,686,000, or $1.59 per share, last year. During the first quarter of 1993, the Bank recorded a $2,000,000, or $0.96 per share, credit from the adoption of a new accounting rule for income taxes and $850,000 in other income from the acceleration of the unearned discount associated with loans acquired in the 1987 acquisition of The Quincy Co-operative Bank.

The Board of Directors voted to pay a quarterly cash dividend of $0.08 per share on Aug. 15, 1994. Shareholders of record as of Aug. 1, 1994, are eligible to receive the dividend.

On June 3, the Bank completed the acquisition of Depositors Trust Company, which added three branch offices with $70,596,000 of assets, $64,718,000 of deposits, and $38,630,000 of net loans to the balance sheet. The transaction was accounted for as a purchase and, therefore, prior period financials have not been adjusted.

Diane Demarkles Named Conway Top Lister

Diane Demarkles has been named both Top Lister and Top Seller for the month of June for Jack Conway and Company's Wollaston office.

Demarkles has consistently been among the company's top producers, according to Chairman Jack Conway.

Jack Conway and Company is one of the largest independent real estate companies in Massachusetts, with 570 sales agents in 34 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Walsh Begins Petition Drive Against Red Line Noise

Bernard Walsh, Democratic candidate for State Senate, has begun a petition drive to combat high noise levels coming from MBTA Red Line trains.

Walsh said the petition, which was begun last Friday, seeks noise mitigation and other relief from the trains which run over 18 hours a day through neighborhoods in Quincy and Braintree.

"People living along the Red Line have suffered long enough from the excessive noise levels coming from those trains," he said.

Walsh said anyone interested in signing the petition can contact his campaign headquarters at 1504 Hancock St., Quincy Center. He added that petitions will also be circulated in the affected neighborhoods by concerned residents and will be available at local businesses.

Sheets Calls New Hospital Director 'Great Choice'

Mayor James Sheets said the selection of Ralph DiPisa as the new director of Quincy Hospital is a "great choice" for the hospital and the city.

DiPisa, 37, chief operating officer of Brockton Hospital since 1990, was unanimously chosen from a field of six finalists just hours after The Sun went to press last week. Board members praised him as the perfect replacement for Ellen Zane, who resigned in May.

Sheets, who was in Ireland at the time the choice was made, said Tuesday he is very pleased with the selection.

"I interviewed him (DiPisa) along with two others before I went to Ireland," said Sheets. "I was impressed with them all, but I was exceptionally impressed by DiPisa. He has a good idea of where hospital health care is going, just as Ellen Zane did."

"I think he will best meld, or become part of, the management team at the hospital."

Zane also said last week the hospital chose the best person for the job, calling DiPisa a man of vision and talent.

DiPisa, a Wrentham resident, was chosen last week from a group of 150 applicants from as far away as Florida and California.

Quincy Hospital is owned by Quorum Health Resources Inc., a national hospital management company. DiPisa, like the hospital's other top administrators, will become an employee of Quorum.

DiPisa, who is on vacation until Aug. 1, accepted the job by telephone July 20, the morning after the board's selection. He will start working at the hospital in September.

Brockton Hospital and Quincy Hospital are about the same size, with Brockton Hospital having 10 more than the 290 beds at Quincy Hospital.

Brockton Hospital is a private, not-for-profit teaching hospital affiliated with Boston University Medical Center.

The search for a new Quincy Hospital director began when Zane announced she was leaving to develop and become head of a Boston health care network affiliated with Brigham and Women's Hospital and Massachusetts General Hospital.

About 150 resumes were screened by Dick Lefebvre of Quorum's Boston office and interviewed the top 25 candidates for the position. The board of managers, which is chosen by the mayor, chose the six finalists from Lefebvre's list of 25 on June 28.

The other finalists were John G. Albert of Windham, N.H., president of Oxford Health Systems since 1993; Joseph M. Cimerola of Woodbury, Conn., chief operating officer of Waterbury Hospital in Connecticut since 1987; Thomas W. Huebner of Rutland, Vt., senior vice president of Rutland Regional Medical Center since 1990; Edward F. Kittredge of Dudley, chief executive officer at Winthrop Hospital since 1993 and Delia O'Connor of Boston, chief operating officer at Holy Family Hospital in Methuen since 1989.

DiPisa's duties as chief operating officer at Brockton Hospital included overseeing the hospital's budget, and he said on his resume he eliminated 75 full-time-equivalent positions over a three-year period through attrition, and that during his tenure, the hospital's finances improved considerably including a gain of $2.6 million last year.

From 1981 to 1990, he worked at St. Anne's Hospital in Fall River, rising from an administrative resident to chief operating officer.

DiPisa has a master's degree in health care administration from George Washington University and a bachelor's degree in health services administration from Providence College. He is married and has three children.

Ceramics Camp Begins Aug. 1

The Quincy Recreation Department is accepting registrations for its ceramics camp which begins Aug. 1.

The camp will take place on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays through Aug. 12 from 1:30 to 4 p.m. at Dawes Memorial Estate on the corner of Quincy Shore Drive and Channing Street.

The camp is open to boys and girls ages 8-14. It will cost $32.

The camp is under the direction of Margie Swanton, ceramic specialist for the Recreation Department. Campers will be taught basic techniques, such as the cleaning of greenware and the staining and glazing of bisque pieces.

The Recreation Department will supply all cleaning tools, paints and brushes, and the firing of all projects. A limited number of small pieces will be available. Participants are expected to supply four pieces of greenware for the first class and special paints if they are needed. No previous ceramic instruction is required.

Interested persons can register at the Recreation office, 100 Southern Artery, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Registrations will be taken on a first come, first serve basis from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, at the Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery.

Charlene McDonald Honored For 10 Years Of Dedication

Snug Harbor School Playground Named For Summer Camp Volunteer

By LIAM FITZGERALD
Charlene McDonald, who has volunteered at the summer camp program at the Germantown Neighborhood Center since 1975, was recently honored for her dedicated work with the racially diverse Germantown community.

The playground at the center was dedicated in her honor at a recent ceremony attended by 150 people, including invited guests and local officials, among them Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney and Rep. Steve Tobin.

McDonald, who has watched her children and this summer her grandchildren participate in the summer camp program, was pleased that they could be present at the dedication.

"I'm really happy about the whole thing," said McDonald, a former resident of Germantown public housing for 14 years. "It was special that it was done here at Snug Harbor (Middle School), because the kids here are great. I can't say how thrilled I am about the dedication. It's a bit overwhelming, to say the least."

Judy Donnelly, McDonald's successor since 1992, said her predecessor set a perfect example of how to deal with people. McDonald also comes back to help Donnelly with the children during the summer camp program.

"She set an example for me, that's for sure," Donnelly said. "She's great with the kids. That's why I have her come back as an advisor to help me out

Applicants Deadline Aug. 25 New College Board In Place Aug. 30

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Members of an appointing council that will choose 11 people to serve on Quincy College's new independent governing board of trustees will make those choices Aug. 30.

Interested applicants must send letters of interest or resumes to the appointing council by Aug. 25. The council will hear two-minute presentations by applicants Aug. 29 at 6 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at Quincy City Hall.

"Only those who have properly submitted applications or resumes prior to the deadline will be heard at that time," said School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, a member of the appointing council.

Raymond said the appointing council will begin making appointments to the board of trustees at 6 p.m. the following evening--Aug. 30--in the Conference Room, adding that all trustees will likely be appointed by the end of the night. He added that previous reports by other media sources that the trustees will be appointed Aug. 29 were inaccurate.

The board of trustees must be in place by Sept. 1.

The selection council includes Raymond, City Council President Michael Cheney, School Committee member Ronald Mariano, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and college trustee Richard Hart Jr.

Quincy College, a city-owned, two-year institution has traditionally been governed by the School Committee. However, a governance change became necessary after the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) ruled that the college must change its governance system or risk losing its accreditation.

Officials said they felt the college had grown to a point where an independent board of trustees was necessary for the school to meet NEASC requirements.

The City Council passed Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition regarding the governance change in March. The petition was approved by the state Legislature in late June and signed by Gov. William Weld earlier this month.

Despite the governance change, Quincy College will continue to pay rent to the city for a number of buildings it uses. The college has a campus in Plymouth in addition to its Quincy site.

According to the home-rule petition, at least one member of the board of trustees must be a Quincy College graduate and not more than four members can live outside of the city.

The board of trustees will consist of 13 people, including 11 chosen by the appointing council as well as a School Committee member and a city councillor.

Fabrizio will serve a two-year term on the board as the city councillor specified in the home-rule petition. Raymond has not yet chosen a School Committee member for the two-year term and said he will likely wait until the end of the month to do so.

Besides meeting the requirements of the home-rule petition, members of the appointing council said they will try to select a board of trustees that is diverse in terms of culture,

City Cabs Sporting New Medallions

By LISA CONNELL
City Clerk and License Board Chairman Joseph Shea confirmed Tuesday that all of the city's 86 cabs, including the Marina Bay Taxi fleet, are now bearing city-mandated cab medallions.

Cited for being the last fleet to comply, according to Shea, Michael Condon of Marina Bay Taxi appeared before the Board Tuesday in response to letters sent earlier to him by Shea.

Condon was asked to attend the Board meeting because of complaints received by Shea regarding the total operation of Marina Bay Taxi, 86 Summer St., Quincy Point.

Condon, prior to Tuesday's License Board meeting, had placed the medallions on the back left corner of each of his cabs, said Shea.

Shea also said that Condon recently purchased several new cars for his taxi service. Shea acknowledged that he had received complaints from several residents about the condition of Condon's vehicles.

The new medallion registration program, which began several months ago, requires that all taxi companies operating in Quincy must now place medallions in the left corner of the rear of the vehicle.

Shea said the city's four cab companies must now annually renew their fleet's medallions in April.

The cost of the medallion has also increased, according to Shea. Medallions now cost $35, up from their earlier fee of $10.

Shea instituted the new medallion program this spring in an effort to bring the city's "cab system more into the line of what we expect."

Future plans for the city's cabs involve a thorough background check of each driver. "We're going to do this in phase two," said Shea. "We should be doing a better job [regulating cab companies] and we are."

7 Residents To Serve As Cancer Unit Officers

Seven Quincy residents have been named to serve as officers and directors of the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society for 1994-95.

Beginning Sept. 1, Dr. Theresa Mulvey of Quincy will serve as medical vice president of the unit and Eileen Cooney of Quincy will serve as secretary.

Quincy residents named to the board of directors are: Father Bill McCarthy, Carol and Joseph Rizzo, Barbara Sullivan and Pauline Sweeney.

Cahill Sells Handshakes Cafe

By LISA CONNELL
It's deja vu once again at Handshakes Cafe.

License Board officials granted a request Tuesday by Councillor-At-Large Timothy Cahill, owner of Handshakes Cafe, 1354 Hancock St., Quincy Center, for a change of ownership.

This is the second time within the past year that Cahill has relinquished control of his cafe.

Effective immediately, Michael and Kerry Walsh, a father and daughter team who live in Dorchester, will own and operate Handshakes.

Cahill sold the restaurant in January, 1993, but resumed management control last November to revitalize the restaurant and restore its quality of service and menu.

"I sold the business once and I came back. I was forced into coming back, always with the intention of finding a good buyer," said Cahill.

Cahill said after he turned over operations previously, the business had fallen off. In November, 1993, Cahill resumed control of Handshakes to avoid the disappearance of the restaurant altogether.

"My decision to sell the business was made last November," he said. "It took a long time to find the right buyer, the right owner."

"Handshakes should be run as an upscale cafe that thrives on fast service, and a clean and nice environment. That's what made us successful."

Cahill's future plans will be decided next year, he said.

Cahill has no political plans other than serving on the City Council. "This is an off-year for me; I enjoy not having to campaign all summer and fall," he said Tuesday.

According to Cahill, he met Kerry Walsh last year when she was a student in the business course he was then teaching at Quincy College.

He casually mentioned he was interested in selling his business.

Walsh, according to Cahill, said she and her father had an interest in purchasing a restaurant.

A short time later, negotiations began between the Walsh's and Cahill.

Cahill would not disclose the selling price for the 2000-square foot restaurant.

Confident that the "place will stay the same," Cahill said customers can expect the same level of service from the same good employees.

"If anything, it will get better. There will be some new faces, but they'll [the Walsh's] bring their own style and add some things," he said.

Kerry Walsh, a hotel and restaurant management major, will bring to the business much that she's learned from the classroom and on the front lines, explained Cahill.

Michael Walsh, a retired computer room employee of The Boston Globe, will assist his daughter.

Kerry Walsh currently works at The World Trade Center in Boston as a supervisor in the catering department.

Jim Abdou will stay on as manager and work with the Walsh's. Cahill expressed much confidence in Abdou's abilities.

"Everything will be exactly the same" said the Michael Walsh. "If people ask for something, we'll try it. I don't think we'll ever get into the fried stuff, though."

Cahill chose to enter the restaurant business in the early 80s following his first run for a seat on the City Council.

Working again with the two friends that helped him during that campaign, Eddie Graham and Joe Irvine, the trio founded Handshakes in 1982 at its original location on Granite St.

The cafe moved to its present location across from the Fleet Bank building in 1984.

Irvine and Graham decided to divest their share of the restaurant at that time, according to Cahill.

Refrain From Posting Materials On Utility Poles

Massachusetts Electric Company requests that customers refrain from using utility poles to display signs or posters.

The presence of such materials can create unsafe conditions for utility workers, particularly line workers attempting to climb poles to repair power lines.

The company makes a special appeal to political campaign workers and to community organizers who occasionally use utility poles to post candidate information or to publicize local events such as school activities, tag sales, car washes, etc.

The unauthorized posting of signs on utility poles may result in fines of up to $100.

Housing Authority Hires Legal Counselor

By MICHAEL WHALEN

For the first time in its history, the Quincy Housing Authority has hired a full-time legal counselor.

QHA Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said the authority's growth over the years has made such a move a necessity.

"Our authority has grown so much that it would now be far more advantageous for us to have full-time counsel," he said.

Comer said in the past, Atty. Paul Hunt of Quincy was called in to help the authority with any legal matters. However, because Hunt recently announced plans to retire, the QHA Board of Commissioners decided to seek a full-time replacement.

Ironically, although five candidates were interviewed, Comer said the attorney chosen for the position is Patricia Hunt—Paul's daughter—who also practices in Quincy.

"Her expertise is unquestionable," he said.

Comer said Hunt will start in September and will make an annual salary of $59,000. He added that the position will be funded by the money in the authority's budget that was previously used for legal fees when Paul Hunt's services were used on a case-by-case basis.

In other business at its meeting last week, the QHA Board of Commissioners welcomed former School Committee candidate Christine Cedrone as its newest member. Cedrone was appointed in May by Gov. William Weld to replace Rosemary Wahlberg who had served 15 years—three five-year terms—on the board.

At last week's meeting, the board named James McDonald, its labor representative, as its new chairman. Rev. James Kimmell of Faith Lutheran Church was named vice chairman, and Mary Kay Bamford, a resident of the QHA's headquarters in Tobin Towers at 80 Clay St. in Wollaston and the board's tenant representative, was named assistant treasurer, while Frank Kearns remained treasurer.

Comer said that by law, the four mayoral appointees on the board must consist of a labor representative, a tenant representative, and two private citizens.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE was sworn in as a member of the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners by City Clerk Joseph Shea last week. Cedrone, a former School Committee candidate, was appointed in May by Gov. William Weld to serve a five-year term on the board.

Board To Consider Events Planned At Marina Bay Sites

By LISA CONNELL

At their next meeting on Aug. 16, License Board officials will consider a request from South Shore Hospital in Weymouth to hold a fundraiser, "The Spinnaker Ball," within the hangar located on Marina Bay property in North Quincy.

It's not the event itself that concerns Board member and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman but the site of the proposed annual hospital gala, scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 17.

Event committee officials are seeking a one-day liquor license for use in the hangar.

"The hangar is a hangar; now you're changing it into a place of assembly," said Gorman. "Marina Bay will have to get their act together and bring this site up to code. Bringing a place of storage to a place of assembly....all the criteria there is changed," he said.

Building Inspector and License Board Vice Chairman Matthias Mulvey concurred.

"Let them [event officials] get a professional architect in there and evaluate to see if they can set it up the way they want to. They have to show us no one will get hurt out there," he said.

MWRA To Demolish Building In Shipyard Staging Area

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) will demolish Building 86, located on the outside perimeter of the Fore River Staging Area, in the fall.

Building 86 was painted with lead-based paint many years prior to the Authority's purchase of the former General Dynamics Shipyard in 1987. The paint has become deteriorated and has begun to flake off and become airborne. Recent tests indicated that the lead concentration was over acceptable limits. Building 86 is within several feet of eating establishments in the Quincy area.

"The demolition of Building 86 will eliminate an obvious eyesore and potential health hazard," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald. "This project is in response to a significant and long-standing community concern."

MacDonald credited Rep. Ron Mariano and Councillor Ted DeCristofaro for bringing resident's concerns regarding the building to the MWRA's attention.

The one-story building stands 44-feet high and 123-feet wide. The demolition will cost $145,000 and is expected to take three months to complete.

Map Available

By MICHAEL WHALEN

An updated street map of Quincy is now available.According to Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader, it is the first such map to be printed "in almost a decade."The map contains a keyed legend for finding individual streets, the Quincy Historic Walking Trail, and a list of the most commonly requested telephone numbers in the city, including those of the mayor's office, Quincy Hospital, Quincy College, and police, fire, school and other city departments.Executive Secretary Thomas Koch said the city appropriated about $10,000 from its free cash account to pay for 30,000 copies of the map. Planning Director Richard Meade said the map was printed by Arrow
Map Inc. of Bridgewater.Koch said the city decided to have the mapsprinted now because of growing demand from Quincy residents."We've had a lot of inquiries," said Koch.
"About 12 to 15 people a week walk in (at the mayor's office) and ask for a map of the city."Koch said everyone is entitled to one free copy of the map, but additional copies will be sold for $1 apiece.Maps may be acquired

YOUNG WOMEN AND SKIN CANCER RISK

It may be that one of the images considered most glamorous in our society, that of a young, shapely, and TAN female figure, is also one of the highest risk when it comes to developing skin cancer.Basal cell carcinoma (BCC), the most common type of skin cancer, strikes most frequently among people 60 years old and older. Recent studies have found, however, that when BCC is diagnosed in younger people, the patients are most likely female. Researchersspeculate that young women may spend more time in tanning salons, where ultraviolet rays are more intense than those coming from the sun. Regardless of age or gender, everyone should avoid overexposure to ultraviolet rays and wear sunscreen when outdoors.P.S. Use a sunscreen with a sun-protection factor (SPF) of at least 15 to block harmful ultraviolet rays.Tanning parlors, which were virtually unknown a generation ago, can be blamed for much of the increase in skin cancer among young women. If you'd like more information on this topic, or how to prevent heat disease, feel free to call either myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE
(472-2550). We place strong emphasis on caring for the patient, rather than simply treating the disease. Office hours are by appointment.
We have ample parking at our office, located at 700
Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.H ow active should the acting mayor be when the mayor is out of town?

Timely question.

Traditionally in the past when the mayor was away,
the city council president who becomes acting mayor, contented himself with the honor of holding the title, cutting an opening day ribbon or making a visiting dignitary an honorary citizen, etc.Except for a sudden major emergency the acting mayor, out of courtesy, usually left any weighty decisions for the mayor to make when he returned.The acting mayor wasn't expected to really act as the city's chief executive unless the mayor died or, for some other reason, left office before the end of his term.That's the way a lot of people still see it. Better, they feel, the acting mayor be seen and not heard.But City Council President Michael Cheney and others apparently don't see it that way. Cheney believes that, as acting mayor, he does what he is supposed to do: act as mayor.

And he did just that while Mayor

James Sheets was on a recent 10 day trip to Ireland with a group of Quincy residents.

SHEETS

It was an active 10 days for Cheney.He went down to Wollaston Beach to see first hand the problem of teenagers hanging out there and opted for the reinstatement of state police foot patrols rather than a teenage curfew. He had Sheets' blessing on that.Cheney was confronted with an 18 inch water main burst in downtown at the start of the annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival.He suspended Building Inspector Matt Mulvey for a day for allegedly opening mail addressed to someone else in the department. Mulvey denied this and reminded Cheney he couldn't suspend him without a hearing. And, as it turned out, Cheney couldn't suspend him anyway as Sheets noted when he got back. An acting mayor, under state law, can't make personnel decisions.

Cheney, accompanied by Ward 6 Councillor Bruce

$12 Million Approved For MBTA Noise ReductionReducing noise along the MBTA Red line corridor in Quincy is one step closer to reality.On Monday, the Senate gave preliminary approval to a $6 billion transportation bond bill which contains $12 million for the installation of sound barriers along the MBTA's rapid transit lines in Quincy, announced Sen.
Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy).

The language is identical to that placed in the House version of the Transportation Bond by Rep. Joseph Sullivan (D-Braintree) and supported by Quincy representatives

Ron Mariano, Michael Bellotti and A. Stephen Tobin. This means the matter is not subject to review by the Conference Committee and will be included in the version of the bill sent to the governor's desk.Morrissey praised the hard work of the Quincy-Braintree delegation in securing the noise abatement monies."We will continue to aggressively work to get the T to reduce the impact that the MBTA trains haveon the residents of Quincy and Braintree," Morrissey said. "This money, along with the purchasing of new Red line cars, will go a long way toward alleviating the problem of excessive noise along the Red Line.""I am pleased that we were able to secure this money for noise abatement," Rep. Sullivan said. "We will continue to press the MBTA to do all that they can to reduce the noise impacts they cause."Mariano and Bellotti said the bond is the first step in providing noise relief along the Red line corridor."I am happy to see the appropriation included inthe bond bill, but we now must push the MBTA to get the sound barriers installed as soon as possible," Mariano said."Without this appropriation," Bellotti added, "the addition of the Old Colony commuter line trains would have made a bad situation worse. This will allow us to address the impacts of both the Red Line and Old Colony line."Both branches of the legislature have included money for the purchase of new Red Line cars in their versions of the bond bill.
They hope the final version of the budget will contain approximately $110 million for new cars.

The Acting Mayor

Ayers, met with Boston Mayor Thomas Menino on Moon Island regarding the dispute over Boston using the island for detonating explosives and as the site of a Boston Police gun range.The meeting came after the Boston Police Bomb Squad carried a large bomb through Squantum en route to Moon Island.Sheets took issue with Cheney when he returned from Ireland, saying he and Menino had agreed back in December to try and work things out.But Cheney said he, Menino and Ayers agreed to create a bi-city commission to solve the differences.
And he was quoted as saying he had accomplished more in one hour than Sheets had done in six months to resolve the matter.Sheets, who is low keyed and takes things in stride, said publicly he was generally satisfied with the way
Cheney handled things during his absence.But the one-hour, six-months remark attributed to Cheney is not apt to be soon forgotten. Some around Sheets consider it a cheap shot.If a Walter Hannon, Arthur Tobin or Frank McCauley, had been mayor at this time, the sparks would still be flying.They probably would have told Cheney to stay out of the mayor's office the next time they left town. Or would have locked the door to the mayor's office and taken the keys with them.Cheney feels he did a good job as acting mayor and did what he was supposed to do.No city councillor has worked harder at his job than Cheney. He has tiger-in-his-tank energy and will tackle any project with it. Like, for example, Quincy's First Night which is under his leadership, has become a major celebration event.He would do anything for his constituents. If there was a flood, he'd be there in a boat to help evacuate. In a blizzard or major snowstorm you could find him on a snowplow or in an Army tank opening up roads.He puts in a lot of service mileage as a city councillor and never seems to run out of gas. He's aggressive—sometimes a little like a bulldozer—some think.He wants to be mayor someday. And someday he might be.But being a Gung-ho acting mayor is no guarantee to get there.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD WAS stamped July 18, 1911 and is a view of the 1910 Harvard Air Meet at Squantum. The Morwenet Hummock is to the right and in the distance, north on Quincy Shore Drive, can be seen the tents and other temporary structures set up for the meet in the area now occupied by the Naval housing and the new location of the Beechwood Community Life Center along East Squantum Street. This was only the second air meet held in the United States and it drew the most famous aviators and most advanced airplanes from around the world. The Boston Globe offered a $10,000 prize to fly from this site to the Boston Harbor Lighthouse and back. The winner and only pilot to dare attempt the flight was Claude Grahame-White from England who flew a French built Bleriot monoplane as shown here. There were three Bleriot entered in the meet, but this could very well be a picture of Grahame-White, whose wife presented a trophy he won at this meet to the Quincy Historical Society in 1963.

Wal-Mart Is An Opportunity for Quincy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As an unemployed resident of Quincy, I realize the many economic advantages of the Granite Crossing Shopping Center, and I am not alone. The mayor of Quincy, Quincy 2000, Quincy's public/private economic development agency, and many of our business leaders agree that Quincy needs to improve its economy. We have a great opportunity to welcome Granite Crossing which is scheduled to be built on 28 acres of vacant land at the intersection of Route 53 and Quincy Avenue.

As residents of Quincy, we would be foolish not to work together to ensure that this exciting new multi-million dollar project be built in our hometown, which I might add, is not a small town, but rather a big city. It is vital for Quincy to maintain a strong economy and it would be a shame if this construction project, which will provide much needed traffic improvements, and when completed will bring the City of Quincy over a half million dollars in new taxes annually, is not built in Quincy but a short distance away.

If the Quincy City Council denies the proposal to build Granite Crossing Shopping Center, we would not receive any portion of the profit, we would not get the roadway improvements that the developer has committed to, we would not have the opportunity to recapture the millions of dollars that Quincy residents are spending outside of the city, and we would not help our local merchants by bringing anchor stores back into Quincy, but we would most certainly be reminded of the lost opportunity daily.

When you look at the whole picture, it is really a simple decision to make. Let's try to keep this opportunity here for Quincy residents to benefit from and not send it to one of our neighboring towns.

Says Falls Site Is 'Totally Inappropriate' For Wal-Mart

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On July 23, several members from the "We're Against The Wal" Committee served at an anti-Wal-Mart booth at the annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival. More than 100 signatures were obtained in opposition of the Granite Crossing/Wal-Mart development.

I feel the most important thing of the day was getting important information to the Quincy residents. It occurred to me that Saturday as I was questioned more and more that people just aren't educated on the history of Wal-Mart.

Yes, they do have great prices. I'm all for a bargain—but at what cost? How long will Wal-Mart have these low prices after the competition has been put out of business? History has been repeating itself over and over, state after state across the country.

Some information I'd like to share:

•Wal-Mart has been accused of predatory pricing.

•I recently read a story in Rhode Island newspaper. K-Mart employees purchased a cake and sent it to Wal-Mart employees to welcome them to the neighborhood. The next day, Wal-Mart employees went to K-Mart, pen and paper in hand, to list the prices of items in the store. Why?

•Wal-Mart has been accused of selling ammunition to a 15-year-old child. Joseph Morales Jr. was later accidentally shot in the head. Joey is now a vegetable. Will the Quincy store have this type of irresponsibility, selling ammunition to our children?

•If this location is appropriate, why is it necessary to do more than $1 million in road improvements?

•It has been estimated that on an average Saturday and Sunday, 16,000 cars will travel up Falls Boulevard to Wal-Mart. More on holidays. Let me remind everyone, Falls Boulevard is the driveway to the Falls condos.

The Falls and the "We're Against The Wal" Committee could go on and on regarding Wal-Mart. All we really need to say is this is a residential neighborhood. The site is totally inappropriate. I do not believe anyone would want to share their driveway and front yard with a store the size of Wal-Mart. It is just baffling to me with all the appropriate retail areas in Quincy that are currently vacant. Why is this location so important to Atlantic Development and Wal-Mart? It seems there is much more here that we just don't know about.

Please write your thoughts to The Quincy Sun and your city councillor. We the people are the voice. We must decide not only our own future and the future of our children, but obviously the future of Quincy itself.

The City of Quincy should be remembered as a city of former presidents, not another city destroyed by the Wal-Mart tornado.

Pollution Bill Sabotaged, Says Health Commissioner

Dr. Richard M. Ash, the city health commissioner, charged that the Metropolitan Sewer Construction Commission and certain members of the Legislature were deliberately sabotaging legislation designed to eliminate pollution from Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor.

"It's the old story," said Dr. Ash. "They have stalled every year since the question of pollution came before them and they are stalling now. Action will be delayed until the next session of the Legislature in 1943 and then we'll go through the same thing again."

Dr. Ash's comment came in the wake of the failure of the State Senate to act on a bill that would permit the Commission to apply for federal aid in the construction of a $3 million sewage treatment plant on Nut Island.

The Senate then turned its attentions to impeachment proceedings against Governor's Councillor Daniel H. Coakly, who was charged with misconduct in office in connection with a pardon granted to Raymond L.S. Patriarca, Rhode Island's Public Enemy No.1.

"After the senators finish the Coakly trial they will be so worn out that all they will want to do is go home," said Dr. Ash.

GAS CURTAILMENT URGED

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin directed city department heads to curtail use of gasoline in city-owned vehicles as an example to Quincy residents to cooperate with Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes' voluntary reduction of gasoline consumption by a third," Burgin told the city workers.

He urged them to plan truck routes to avoid unnecessary driving, shut off the motor when the car or truck is standing still, have carburetor and spark controls checked frequently and have all city-owned vehicles off the streets by 5 p.m. daily.

FORCED LANDING

A light seaplane from Rye, N.Y., piloted by Al Travis of New York City, was forced to land in Quincy Bay near Norton Rd., Merrymount, when the landing area at the East Boston Airport was fogged in. Travis spent the night moored at Squantum Yacht Club.

STRANDED IN FOG

Edward Swindler, 19, of East Squantum St., North Quincy, an athlete of note, rescued by the Coast Guard after his 16-foot sloop became lost in fog returning from the races at Marblehead. The fog was so thick the Nantasket boat had to anchor overnight.

QUINCY-ISMS

Mayor Burgin said applications will be made for federal grants to purchase $60,000 worth of new fire equipment and widen East Howard St. from Quincy Ave. to Des Moines Rd. ... A note in a bottle left lying on the ice of Quincy Bay in February by Robert Sines of 1156 Sea St., Houghs Neck, was washed ashore at Boston Light ... Asst. Dist. Atty. George W. Arbuckle addressed the 104 men of the first group of Quincy Auxiliary Police to complete their training course. ... The businessman's lunch for 50 cents at the Howard Johnson Restaurant in the Granite Trust building was broiled Boston bluefish, whipped potatoes, buttered beets, rolls and butter ... The Rev. Frank Seymour preached his last sermon at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church before leaving for a new pastorate in Lancaster ... Pot Roast was 21 cents a pound at Lodge's Market, 1474 Hancock St. ... The 10 members of the Municipal Airport Committee met with Chairman Victor Brown at the Neighborhood Club to discuss plans for a city airport to replace Dennison Airport, which had been taken over by the federal government ... A committee of Houghs Neck residents, led by James Wilcox, met with Mayor Burgin to discuss the possibility of a seawall along Edgewater Drive ... The British Comfort League met at the home of Ethel O'Brien, 76 Franklin Ave., Wollaston ... "Out of The Fog," starring Ida Lupino, John Garfield, Thomas Mitchell and Eddie Albert, was playing at the Strand, where all matinee seats were 27 cents. ... Arthur Berman, Quincy insurance man, was named chairman of the Campaign for Gasoline Conservation.

Storyteller To Perform At Crane Library Aug. 9

Rick Goldin will present a story concert at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, Tuesday, Aug. 9 at 7 p.m.

The event will be the fifth in a series of six performances funded by the Quincy Arts Council and the Friends of the Library. The special program is being offered to families with children 4 and older.

Goldin will present his concert with younger family members in mind. He will talk about trips as near to home as the library and as far away as a train ride in China with stops for stories, songs and puppets.

Goldin has performed at schools, libraries and community events all over New England.

Snug Harbor School First Graders Perform 'Superkids'

First grade students at the Snug Harbor Community School recently performed their annual "Meet the Superkids" program.

The show was developed by grade one teachers Susan Egan, Carolyn Eckhardt and Ellen Johnston in conjunction with the reading program. The theme of the show is "I Am Special." The children sang many songs and recited poems which highlighted the special qualities which make them unique individuals.

Students also wore costumes to portray the "Superkids" who are part of the Addison Wesley reading program. They sang the Superkids songs and explained to the audience how they learned to read.

The students gave two performances of the show. Staff and students of the school attended the first; the second was attended by more than 75 parents, relatives and friends.

'Elder Talents' At Beechwood Center

"Elder Talents" will be presented at the Beechwood Community Life Center today (Thursday) at 1 p.m.

Following a luncheon, elders from throughout

Quincy will entertain one another.

"Performances will include story-telling, singing, whistling, tap dancing and group singing," said Mary Centola, Director of Elder Action.

Reservations for lunch should be made by Wednesday, if possible.

Chapter I Parents Visit Children's Museum

Parents in the Chapter I program of the Quincy Public Schools recently visited the Children's Museum in Boston--without their children.

The trip was arranged through Chapter I Director Alicia Coletti and Sheila Petrucelli, parent coordinator. The idea behind it was for parents to tour the museum before bringing the children so that they will be able to select the activities and exhibits which will have the greatest appeal for the children when they bring them during a return trip.

Parents who participated included: Liz Bowman, Debbie Edgerly, Elizabeth Ferguson, Nancy Flynn, Mary French, Paulette Hurt, Lory MacIsaac, Petrucelli, Lisa Tavakoli, Belva Veno, Barbara Waters and Jane Williams.

This is the second consecutive year Quincy Chapter I parents took part in this activity. Kathryn Jones of the museum has led both tours.

The federally-funded Chapter I program contains a parent component which emphasizes the important of parent as their child's first teacher.

Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley:

New A.L. State Commander Has Plans, Goals

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. You were recently named state commander of the American Legion. That must have been quite a thrill.

A. Yes it was; it was the culmination of 14 years of working. From a position at the Morrisette American Legion Post (in Quincy) up to state commander, it took 14 years.

Q. What are your immediate plans as state commander? What are some of the things you intend to do?

A. Well, we've got a few things on the fire. We intend to raise $25,000 for the Shriners Burn Institute in Boston, where they do such tremendous work for children. And on the veterans' issue, we expect to have every post in the state go in and have a veteran who is hospitalized and can't get out, have them adopt the vet and take care of his personal needs such as bringing items in to him, or taking care of him on his birthday and making sure they bring him gifts, or at the holiday season, just so that the man or the woman who is in there is not forgotten.

And probably one of the more prominent ones that everybody will be hearing about is our flag issue. Presently, what my plans are—I've already talked to the state executive committee—we are going in to all the Superior Courts in the state of Massachusetts to check on the flags in the court-houses and make sure they're all presentable and have them cleaned or replaced, and then try to encourage the local Posts to go into the courts in their particular areas and take care of the same thing, to make sure that Old Glory is in a fitting and proper position in the court, as well as in a condition that's worthy of it.

Q. Besides being past Morrisette commander, aren't you also past Norfolk County commander?

A. Yes, after I finished as commander of the Morrisette Post, then I went to Norfolk County District 6, the American Legion and started up there. I am a past commander of Norfolk County, and that was back around 1988 or '89, somewhere right around there.

Q. So you've worked very hard, and you must feel qualified to be state commander of the Legion.

A. I feel that I am; I've had the interest of the veteran at heart for many years. I started back around 1969 at Milton American Legion Post, where I served as commander. And then through various things that have happened, I transferred over to the Morrisette Post, and then to District 6. I'm also a past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council.

Q. How did you become the city's veterans services director?

A. I had had a fourth back injury and an operation while I was a police officer here in Quincy—I was a police officer for 20 years—and after my fourth back operation the city doctor recommended that I do not go back to work, that I be retired because of the weakness of the back in that particular area. At the time that my paperwork was being prepared, an opening came up in veterans services. A friend who worked there had told me about it and recommended that I submit my paperwork if I was interested, and I did. And I was fortunate enough that Mayor (James) Sheets chose me to replace the previous director.

Q. Why, specifically, were you interested in the position?

A. Simply that in the Legion, you have certain areas that you can work in through the V.A. (veterans' administration). This was more of a "home" situation that you could do something in your community to try to assist the veterans. It's like anything else; you have an interest in it, and you take a shot, and I feel very fortunate to be employed in a profession that I thoroughly enjoy—and that is being able to assist the veterans and their families.

Q. How exactly do you work with the families? What are your duties as director?

A. Through the director's office, we have veterans who may come to us, that they're receiving a pension and once a year that have to have papers filled out. They'll come down and we'll assist them on filling those out. Or spouses who may have been married to (recently deceased) veterans and may not have any idea what their rights are—they'll come

HENRY (HANK) BRADLEY, director of Quincy Veterans Services the past four years, was recently elected state commander of the American Legion.

FULL NAME: Henry Philip Bradley

AGE: 53

ADDRESS: Montclair

OCCUPATION: director of Quincy Veterans Services for the past four years. Previously served as a Quincy police officer for 20 years; prior to that, he worked in construction.

EDUCATION: graduated from Dorchester High School, 1959; attended Quincy Junior College and Boston State College; plans to attend the University of Massachusetts/Boston in the near future to pursue a bachelor's degree in business management.

FAMILY: married to the former Rosemarie Muscato. They have two daughters, Helena of Hull and Annette of Quincy.

down, and we'll try to explain, and we'll fill out the paperwork. And we have the grave markers, if they're allowed in whatever cemetery the veteran is buried in, we fill out the paperwork for those, and we follow through on trying to find out if the dependent of the veteran is, in fact, receiving the proper amount of money that is allowed by pension rights through the V.A. or through the government. And we fill out whatever paperwork there is there, too.

If we have somebody who's out of work and whose unemployment has run out, they can come to us and we can assist them to the limits allowed to us by law. We also try to assist anybody who needs care because of dependency on alcohol of drugs—we try to get them into the V.A. system and put them through the course down there, and bring them back and have them look for jobs and try to find jobs for them.

Q. The city in general is pretty supportive of veterans, the most recent example of that being the dedication of a new Korean War Memorial near Veterans Memorial Stadium.

A. That's correct. That's one highlight of it, but we've been most fortunate because the city fathers of Quincy (i.e. the mayor, city councilors, etc.) have always been very respectful of the veterans. They've always gone out of their way to try to make sure that the veteran knows that he's cared about here in the City of Quincy.

Q. Do you know how many veterans we have here in the city?

A. Approximately 10,000, believe it or not.

Q. That must be for all wars.

A. That is correct. From World War I and on.

Q. Are you a combat veteran yourself?

A. No, I was with the Air National Guard. I joined there when I was in high school, and I remained with them. And back in the early '60s, when President Kennedy called the troops to activation, I was with the 102nd Tactical Fighter Wing, and we were sent to Europe. We were stationed in France for almost a year over there because of the Berlin Crisis.

Q. You were also involved in last year's Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort that sent food and supplies to the flooded Midwest. That was essentially your brainchild, wasn't it?

A. That started while I was sitting at the Houghs Neck (Legion) Post with my friend Mary Timcoe; she and I were talking about the situation and saying that it was too bad something could not be done. And she had told me that that morning, the waters had started in toward Quincy (Ill.), and said it was too bad we couldn't do something about that. Mary was actually the overall brainchild on that.

It was going to start out as just the Quincy American Legion to Quincy, Ill. American Legion, but then we just decided to broaden the scope and make it Quincy to Quincy, Ill. and that way everybody could participate. And it was probably one of our finest moments here in Quincy, the way our people showed their care and their love for those who were in the devastated area.

Q. You had kind of a scary moment with your health during the relief effort. Wasn't it an angina attack of some kind?

A. They weren't sure at first, and they had me booked up like I was about to be launched (laughs), but the doctor came in later and told me after a day or two that it was pleurisy and everything else was fine. So I guess it was just a case of being worn down, or run down, or whatever you want to call it, not taking proper care of myself. I was most fortunate.

Q. I was kind of surprised when nominations came in for the 1993 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year and your name wasn't among them.

A. Well, that's because my family was humble (laughs). But that's (the relief effort) one of those things that when you're doing it, you're not doing it for that purpose (recognition), as you well know, you're doing it for the sake of trying to assist, and just the pleasure of seeing the results from Illinois was well worth it.

Q. You've also been involved with the refurbishing of several monuments here in the city.

A. What we hope to do is gradually take care of all of the war monuments in the city. We've already taken care of three of them: the Trevore Street monument for Southwest Quincy veterans, the "Doughboy" statue in front of the Quincy Historical Society on Adams Street, and the Montclair School monument for the men and women of Montclair. It's something that is long overdue, in my opinion, and especially with the 50th anniversary celebrations coming up regarding the various segments of World War II and the ending of World War II. We feel that we want Quincy and its residents, and particularly its veterans, to be proud of those monuments.

Q. All the work that's been done has been through private donations, hasn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. You've been involved in a lot of different things. What's your proudest accomplishment?

A. To be quite honest with you, out of all of them, you really can't take one particular one. When you start on one, you start with the intention that it's going to either help a person, a community, or an organization. I've been most fortunate. I enjoy the work I do now; I thoroughly enjoyed the work I did as a police officer. I've been blessed with a great family and good friends, and I really don't have any particular one I can pick out. When you're doing them, they're all very important.

Barbara Haggerty Named Professional Review Director At Quincy Hospital

Barbara Haggerty, RN, CPHQ, has joined the staff of Quincy Hospital as its director of professional review.

Haggerty will be responsible for managing the hospital's programs in quality management, Massachusetts patient care assessment, utilization management and professional risk management. QHS AFJROTC Program Named 1993-94 Honor Unit

The AFJROTC program at Quincy High School has been named an Honor Unit for 1993-94.

Prior to winning the honor, the Drill Team and Color Guard of the Quincy High unit each won their regional championships. In addition, the unit had to keep orderly records and a clean office, pass an inspection and give a briefing to the inspecting officer in order to be named an Honor Unit.

Officers of the winning unit included Julie Lai, commander; Scott Mercurio, deputy commander and Dennis Greeley, operations officer. Instructors are Col. Joseph Ciampa and Sgt. Edward Holland.

Only 20 percent of the hundreds of AFJROTC units in the country are annually named Honor Units and only one unit in New England is so recognized. This year's award marks the second time a Quincy High unit has won the honor, following a 16-year period without the school's group being named above a meritorious unit.

Car Care in 'The Computer Age'

The old adage: "They just don't make them like they used to," is certainly true of car manufacturing and the technological advances made in the past two decades. Most cars manufactured in the 1980's and 90's have on-board computers that regulate engine systems from start to stop.

At SPARKS Computerized Car Care in Quincy, both Leonard Lescaubeau, specialist in electrical and fuel problems for 31 years, and John Teixeira, a specialist in drivability problems and general repair for 20 years, are at the forefront of the increasingly complex business of automotive diagnostics; combining high tech equipment with advanced know-how.

Lenany and John perform diagnostic testing to verify proper operation of all engine systems: starting, charging, compression, fuel, ignition, emission and on-board computer sensors and actuators. Their test results can determine what parts to replace to restore proper operation of these systems.

Today's cars demand diagnostics. Problem areas can be detected early, before breakdown occurs, ultimately saving you time and money.

Take advantage of today's computerized diagnostic testing to protect your investment. Rely on professionals to check your vehicle thoroughly.

Canines Graduate Beechwood Center Obedience Course

This Class Is Really For The Dogs

By LIAM FITZGERALD

The latest graduates from Beechwood Community Life Center barked up a storm as they received their diplomas during a recent commencement ceremony.

No, this was not the usual two-legged high school or college graduates, celebrating their freedom after four years of hard work. Rather, it was the eight four-legged graduates of the dog training class, "Dog M&M (Manners and Maneuvers)" who yelped with glee after completing their training.

During Monday's graduation, the well-behaved dogs performed tricks they had learned, such as jumping over a gate, retrieving a ball, as well as behavioral traits they had acquired throughout the six-week course.

Angel, a cocker spaniel, fared well with the retrieval portion and also leaped over a short gate to win the praise of her owner, Kathy McGrath of Wollaston.

"The name's really a misnomer, but she has progressed a lot, along with the other dogs," McGrath said. "She snaps at the other dogs at times and sometimes gets a little excited, but that's to be expected. This is just to help the owners get a better handle on their pets. It's been great."

The course's designer and teacher, Lisa Aprea, who recently received her bachelor's degree in the behavioral sciences from UMass-Amherst, said she designed the course herself to allow the owner and the pet to live in harmony.

"I designed it by mixing training disciplines to include your basic manners and maneuvers, in addition to making it entertaining and helpful for the owner to carry on the training in the future," Aprea said. "It's not me training. I just teach the owner to teach the dog, since that is who the dog will live with, not me."

This was the first class of its kind at Beechwood, led by Aprea, the creator of The Essential Dog Manners and Maneuvers Training Series at the Center.

The other dog owners were pleased with the results they saw in the dogs after the course was finished, and mentioned how they would recommend it to other dog owners looking to get a better handle on their pets.

"Cedric is getting much better," Chris MacLeod of Wollaston said of her rambunctious great dane mix. "He did his homework and has learned a lot about how to behave and getting rewarded for doing the right thing. I definitely recommend it to others, especially if their dogs are hard to control, like ours."

Quincy residents Jim and Dolores Evans, the proud owners of Criterion, a seven-month old boxer, were pleased with the how well behaved their dog became as the course came to a close.

"He is hyper, but he has calmed down a lot and has learned his manners," Dolores Evans said. "We definitely would recommend this to anyone who wants a dog who is well behaved and agile at the same time."

McGrath added how much the owners appreciated the hard work and patience Aprea brought to every class.

"She's been a great instructor," McGrath said. "She's so patient with the dogs. She could work with anyone's dog."

The dogs seemed to share her sentiments, since they all grew somewhat attached to her, especially Criterion, who laid down by her and wouldn't trot away until Aprea walked the dog and his owner back to the group.

Many of the owners said they will move on to the next level which starts next week, since they had so much success with Level 1.

"This course has done so much for Cedric that we want to continue his training with Level 2," MacLeod said.

"He's done so well that there's no sense not moving onto the next course," Dolores Evans said of Criterion. "He's a good baby."

The next level, Aprea said, will deal more with the jumping and agility of the dog, along with teaching the heel technique among other learning tools.

The first week of the course there was a little friction between the dogs, Aprea said, but that by the third week, the dogs "were well-socialized."

"That's when the bulk of the learning takes place, once they get over not knowing each other," Aprea said.

Aprea said this was a unique course, since various tools are utilized to keep things light and enjoyable for those involved.

"We do the jumps mainly for fun and obedience work," Aprea added. "Along with the retrieval and voice commands, I try to provide a variety and mix it up a bit. It's not just for obedience or agility. I don't think there's one quite like it around."

In addition to the hour a week class, Aprea provides an extra half-hour of individual time for those owners whose dogs may not be progressing as quickly as the others.

"If there is a problem, we can take it aside and deal with it on a one-to-one basis, not in front of the whole class," Aprea said. "We can discuss it, work through it and find a solution that will work for everyone involved."

At the completion of the course, Aprea gave the owners pet-related information about household poisons, what medications to administer, along with the municipal law on having pets in Quincy and what responsibilities and rights the owners have.

"It gives it a balance - information for the owners to read over and learning skills the dogs have acquired over the six-week period," Aprea said. "My focus is on the family dog. I realize people don't have time to do it on their own, with dual incomes and busy lives, so this is a good way to get the basic tools."

Aprea added that the main goal is to make sure all the participants, dog or owner, get the most of the experience and enjoy themselves, too.

"The bottom line is that it's fun," Aprea said. "For that alone, I would recommend it. I had a great time teaching it, and these people are great. We all had a lot of fun."

Legion Baseball

Friday At Adams Field

Morrisette Ready For Title Run

By KERRY BYRNE
Morrisette Legion, which won the state title in 1992, will open their bid for their second championship in three years Friday at Adams Field against Walpole.

Morrisette (17-8-1) swept Needham in their first-round sectional series, then were swept themselves by New Bedford. They still have a chance in the state playoffs, though, due to an automatic bid as the host team.

Despite the losses to New Bedford, Morrisette coach Dave Perdios is confident his club will do well in the upcoming tournament.

"Our goal was to play better in the [sectional] tournament than we did in the season. We did that. We stepped it up a notch; our pitching has been good, our defense has been good. We've played good solid defensive ball over the last four games," he said.

Morrisette beat Needham 6-2 in the first game and 7-5 in the second game of the first-round series.

The starting lineup for Morrisette Friday will probably look like this:

C - Joe Biagini

1B - Neil Connelly
2B - Dan Duncan
3B - A.J. Carthas
SS - Tom Malvesti
LF - Jim Sapienza
CF - Dave Reinhart
RF - Brian Hayes, Mark Cahill
P - TBA

Saturday Morrisette lost 6-2 at New Bedford and lost 6-2 Sunday at Adams Field.

Sunday's game was a tightly contested battle for eight innings.

Trailing 1-0 in the seventh, Morrisette pinch hitter Tim Zaniboni nailed a double to knock in Dan Duncan who had singled to open the inning. With two out, Neil Connelly reached first due a throwing error by NB second baseman Jason Baptiste, which allowed Mark Cahill, running in place of Zaniboni, to come around with the home club's final run to give them a short-lived 2-1 lead.

New Bedford tied the contest with a run in the top of the eighth. Two walks led to a fielder's choice RBI by Rudy Bulgar.

They put the game out of reach in the ninth when they batted around the order and scored four runs. Hits were clubbed by Tim Lygren, Matt Poitras, and Bulgar. A hit batter, walk and Morrisette's only error contributed to the outburst.

"They're a good ball club," said Perdios of the New Bedford squad. "The difference tonight was that they didn't beat themselves."

Sixteen-year-old hurler Mike Kenney went 7-1/3 innings for Morrisette, allowing just four hits and issuing three walks, two just before he was pulled in the eighth.

"Mike pitched great tonight," said Perdios, who also had praise for Pat Bryan, the pitcher in Saturday's loss. "Pat pitched phenomenally last night but was robbed in the game."

Bryan was denied the victory, in part due to a controversial call late in the contest.

With the score tied 1-1 and New Bedford at the plate, a catch that would have led to an inning-ending double play was ruled a trap. As a result, NB went on to score five runs in the inning.

Morrisette scored single runs in the third and eighth innings.

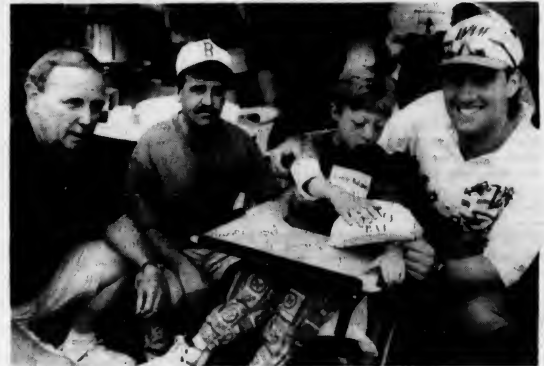

A single by Duncan and a sacrifice by Bryan led to

Connelly's RBI single in the third. In the eighth Connelly was hit by a pitch and scored on Dave Reinhart's double.

Both Connelly and Reinhart recorded two hits in the contest. Duncan, Tom Malvesti and Jim Sapienza had base hits.

"These were two very good teams that play very good defense," said Perdios after the series was completed. "Hopefully the tough series will make us a better team down the road."

In the 6-2 first-round victory over Needham, relief pitcher Jeff Russell pitched four-plus innings of two-hit shutout ball to earn his first win in Legion play. Starter Kenney allowed one hit and two unearned runs in four innings on the mound.

Morrisette's top defensive play came in the seventh inning. With the score tied 2-2 and a runner on first, a looping fly ball dropped in front of right fielder Mark Cahill. Cahill fired the ball to cut-off man Malvesti, who threw to A.J. Carthas who applied the tag to the lead runner at third base.

The play seemed to motivate the home squad - they sent four men across the plate in the bottom of the inning to earn the win.

With one out, Malvesti whacked a ground-rule double that one-hopped the fence at the 408 mark. Russell then walked and Cahill doubled to drive in Malvesti with the game-winner. Connelly singled to knock in two and came home himself on a throwing error.

Carthas drove in Morrisette's first two runs when his double brought home Connelly and Reinhart.

Duncan provided the big hit in the decisive 7-5 win at Needham.

His sinking line drive got past the Needham left fielder who attempted to make a shoestring grab. The ball rolled past him into the open field, allowing Duncan to round the bases for a three-run in-the-park homer.

Morrisette took a 5-3 lead in the fifth on RBI singles by Reinhart and Carthas.

Needham tied the game in the fifth but RBIs by Reinhart and Sapienza sent the winning runs across the plate.

The state tournament is being held at Adams Field in honor of the Morrisette American Legion Post baseball team's 50th anniversary.

They won their first state title in 1975.

Elks, Houghs Neck In Babe Ruth Title Game

Houghs Neck and the Elks staged late inning comebacks to earn a spot against each other in the Babe Ruth League title game.

Both teams suffered their only losses in the double-elimination tournament at the hands of the other club. They were scheduled to square off this past Tuesday night at Adams Field in the decisive game.

Houghs Neck beat the Elks, 4-3, last Thursday due to their last inning heroics.

The Elks led 3-1 in the top of the final inning. Houghs Neck scored one run to close the gap. They followed with three straight walks which set up a two-run bloop hit to shallow center for the winning runs.

Mark Glynn sent the Elks down 1-2-3 in the bottom of the inning to earn the save.

The Elks' loss set up their must-win game against Bryan Post for a chance to play Houghs Neck for the league championship.

The Elks trailed Bryan Post, 5-3, in the sixth inning before scoring two runs to tie the game. In the seventh, Matt McLoughlin and Rusty Corner both singled and Andrew Byrne was intentionally walked to load the bases. With one out, Ted McGillicuddy nailed a sharp grounder to deep in the winning run on the game's final at-bat.

At one point the Elks led, 3-0, but Bryan Post fought back to tie the contest, and Mark Kelly's two-run double gave them the lead. Mike Eddy also had a clutch RBI hit for BP.

McLoughlin was the winning pitcher. BP's Jon Ryan suffered the loss after an outstanding season on the mound, behind the plate and with the bat.

In the Elks-Houghs Neck rematch on Sunday, Byrne spun a two-hitter to lead the Elks to an 8-0 win. It was Houghs Neck's first loss in the tournament and set up a decisive final showdown.

The Elks pounded out 14 hits in the contest. The top batsman was Steve Clarke, who single-handedly doubled the Houghs Neck output on a 4 for 4 day with three singles and a double. Tim Wood followed with two singles and a double. Ted McGillicuddy notched three base hits. Eric Wood had two hits and Jack Daley and John Mahoney recorded one each.

Byrne fanned nine in six innings of work. Daley sent Houghs Neck down in order in the seventh. He struck out one batter.

Rusty Corner has been the leader of the Elks tough defense throughout the playoffs. Although hobbled by injury, he has been flawless playing third base and shortstop. In the win over Houghs Neck he was the pivot man on an impressive 3-6-3 double play with Tim Wood. Eric Wood and Clarke have also been top defenders for the Elks.

Brandell Pickney (double) and Cooper nailed the hits for HN.

In previous Babe Ruth playoff games:

The Elks eliminated Local 444, 6-0, behind the outstanding pitching effort of 13-year-old Chris Bregoli.

Bregoli went the distance while allowing just three hits. He benefitted from outstanding defensive plays by McGillicuddy, McLoughlin, Corner and Scott Statti.

Local pitcher pitched well but suffered one bad inning in which the winning club struck for all six runs. John Mahoney and Statti led with walks and were driven in on McLoughlin's single.

Byrne walked and Eric Wood followed with an RBI single. Clarke then walked and Bregoli nailed another RBI single for the Elks.

Corner ended the scoring when he reached on an error that allowed both Clarke and Bregoli to score. Local got superb efforts from catcher Mike Russo and shortstop Steve Maze.

Mark Kelly pitched a superb game to lead Bryan Post past Fire Dept., 6-2. BP jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first on Jon Ryan's long double and Steve Wiltshire's base hit. They clinched the victory in the sixth with back-to-back doubles by Kevin Cellucci and Ryan and a base hit by Matt Norton.

Second baseman Brian Gates made several excellent defensive plays. Outfielder Mike Eddy turned in two key plays. Pat Cummings, Billy Graney and Shawn Manning all played well.

Bob Walsh had a strong game on the mound for Fire Dept. He also hit an RBI double. Billy Walker had two hits and Mike Doyle and Jose Diaz both singled.

Bryan Post also beat Morrisette, 9-0.

Eddy pitched well, scattering just three hits.

Kelly (three hits) and Wiltshire (two hits) paced the offense. Gates, Cellucci, Ryan, Cummings and Graney had one hit each.

Third baseman Cummings anchored the defense and outfielder Mike Shaw made an outstanding catch. Norton, Manning, Matt Graham and Craig Bigham were also superb in the field.

Jeff Feiner, Jon Haddad and Jason Crossman had the Morrisette hits.

Morrisette blanked Bryan Post in an earlier game, 11-0.

Ryan Ploof fanned six batters and allowed just three hits in earning the win.

Ploof, Haddad and Mike Centrella led the attack with two hits each. Feiner and Crossman each clubbed doubles.

Helping to maintain the shutout were defensive stars Mike Greene, Greg Peck, Dave Keady and Anthony Capriano.

Ryan nailed a two-bagger for Bryan Post. Wiltshire and Cummings sparked on the diamond.

Cheerleading Camp Registration Starts

The Recreation Department is accepting registrations for its Cheerleading Camp to be held Aug. 8-12 for girls from fifth grade through high school age.

Registration will be taken on a first come, first serve basis at the Quincy Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The camp is geared to beginning through intermediate cheerleaders. Emphasis will be placed on fundamental techniques, voice, partner stunts, mounts and dance routines. In addition, new sideline and floor cheers will be taught. Special sessions including gymnastics and pom-pom dancing for competitions will be taught by NCA

Patti Myers.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

One of the great aspects of the Quincy-North Quincy sports relationship is its two-fold nature. Pitted against one another on the field of battle, they are hated arch-rivals, engaged not in a battle of natural enemies but a true civil war, neighbor versus neighbor, father versus son or sister versus brother.

On the other hand, under more friendly circumstances, it makes for a tighter bond among the contestants. Your toughest opponent in high school baseball may be your most trusted teammate in Legion ball. The kid you tried to pummel in youth hockey could be your top linemate in high school. In other words, it is a relationship of both fierce competition and shared friendship.

So, without babbling needlessly any longer, I present you with examples of the cooperation between these two rivals:

The Quincy High School - North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame is accepting nominations through the second week of August for this year's pre-Thanksgiving induction ceremony.

Every person nominated will be added to the present list. A vote will narrow the field down to three finalists from each decade and then one person from each school and each decade will be inducted.

Nominations should be sent to: Tom Kiley, Hall of Fame secretary. c/o Cosgrove, Eisenberg and Kiley, P.C. Suite 1820, One International Place, Boston, MA 02110. The phone number is 439-7775.

The Hall of Fame committee also hopes to have a preseason event such as a cookout or softball game. If you can help with the event call Tom Kiley.

In another joint venture, the Quincy High and North Quincy High Booster Clubs will hold the first Quincy-North Quincy Alumni Hockey Game November 26, two days after Thanksgiving.

Alumni hockey players who graduated between 1954 and 1990 are invited to play in this no-check game. Each participant will receive an commemorative Alumni Game hockey shirt. All proceeds from the event will support the hockey programs at the two schools.

Former Quincy High players interested in playing should contact Michelle Bini Stenberg at 773-3511. Former North Quincy players can call Nancy Morrissey Stone at 773-8464.

Chris Bregoli of Quincy was in Iowa this weekend competing in a baseball tournament with the AAU Mariners, a team of all-star 13-year-old players from throughout New England.

On Saturday the Mariners beat a squad from Sterling Heights, Mich., 7-3.

Bregoli, who's DHing due to a groin pull he suffered while playing with the Elks of the Quincy Babe Ruth League, had two hits in the contest.

As a prelude to the Des Moines, Iowa tournament the Mariners played, with great success, several games against teams of 15-year-olds in order to get used to the increased level of competition.

In the field Bregoli is a third baseman and shortstop and often sees time on the mound.

The Jaehnig Chiropractic baseball team won three more games in the Marlboro Baseball Tourney to improve their record to 5-0.

The team of Quincy 10-year-olds beat Hudson, Shrewsbury and Marlboro to clinch a playoff spot.

The Jaehnig club sailed past Hudson, 11-4, behind the strong pitching of Chris Lockhead (5 Ks in three innings), James LaFleur, Keith Doherty and Charlie Vidoli.

Doherty led the offense with two doubles and a single. Justin Hall nailed two line-drive doubles. John Fidalgo, Patrick Jaehnig, Mark Maher and Lockhead had one base hit each.

Jaehnig closed out the game with a solid defensive play when he threw out an attempted base stealer at second.

The Jaehnig Club tamed Shrewsbury, 20-8, as the Quincy club jumped to an early lead - their first seven batters in the contest came across the plate.

Dave Jaehnig looked solid in his pitching debut. Also working the mound for the Quincy squad were Hall, Fidalgo and Pat Jaehnig.

Lockhead smashed a titanic blast over the left field fence and Hall recorded three doubles and a single to pace the offensive explosion. Pat Jaehnig also had four hits and Tommy Buckley, Doherty and Lockhead notched three hits each. Pat Bregoli and LaFleur nailed two hits each while Fidalgo and Maher both had one.

The Jaehnig squad also smoked Marlboro, 14-2.

Vidoli pitched two strong innings to earn the win while Lockhead and Jason Fidalgo threw extremely well in relief.

John Fidalgo opened the contest with one of his two sharp singles up the middle. He stole second, took third on an infield ground out and scored on a sacrifice fly by Pat Jaehnig (2 for 2).

Doherty then silenced the crowd with a Ken Griffey Jr.-like round-tripper that traveled an estimated 250 feet - a tremendous shot for the 10-year-old boy.

The Jaehnig club added three more in the second as Bregoli (2 for 2) and LaFleur singled and scored on Buckley's two-bagger. Buckley scored on a well-executed squeeze bunt by Dave Jaehnig. Quincy put the game out of reach with seven runs in the fourth inning.

The Jaehnig club has outscored their five opponents by a combined margin of 63-23.

Markarian Top Slugger At Home Run Derby

Longball-phenom-in-the-making Scott Markarian of the Junior League's Colonial Federal club smashed five balls over the fence at McCoy Field to earn top slugging honors at the 10-year-old All-Star Game home run derby.

In the derby, which was modeled after the big league version, each player was given five outs. Any swing that did not result in a home run was considered an out.

Markarian walked off with a home run derby championship trophy and a home run derby baseball.

Before the contest Markarian visited the hospital and promised another little boy that he would hit five home runs for him. Neither boy could be reached for comment.

Other sluggers were Patrick Duff and Jordan Virtue of Rotary and Dave Germain of VFW who swatted three dingers each.

Cable's Justin Hall, Elks' Greg McGuinness and Police's Aaron Echelle and James LaFleur each clocked two bleacher-reachers.

Single home run hitters were Casey Hilles of

Family Life Seminars At Beechwood Center

A new series of Family Life Seminars is being sponsored by Beechwood Community Life Center and the South Bay Mental Health Center.

The next seminar topic, "Transitions: How to Get Through Them Constructively," is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 23 at 7 p.m. at the Beechwood Center, 225 Fenne St., Wollaston. Counselors will be Jean Cancilla and Andrea Everett.

South Bay Mental Health Inc. is a family counseling service with centers in Brockton, Weymouth and other South Shore communities. Many referrals are currently generated from child care centers and other agencies in Quincy.

Helene Cronin Receives Cancer Society Award

Helene Cronin of Quincy has received an award from the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society for outstanding service to cancer patients in this area.

She is a member of a corps of volunteer drivers organized by the Service Committee of the South Shore Unit and during the past year, made more than 20 trips to area hospitals with cancer patients needing treatment.

Operating on assignment from a "hotline" office in Hingham, volunteer drivers offer free transportation to cancer patients who are often undergoing daily treatments over a period of 6 to 7 weeks. At times, the service has been provided for as many as 10 patients a day. Persons needing transportation or willing to be a volunteer driver, are invited to call the "hotline" at 749-2535.

YOU AUTO KNOW

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

DISPOSING OF TOXIC FLUIDS PROPERLY

It is estimated that a third of the nearly 400 million gallons of used crankcase oil generated by backyard mechanics (the equivalent of anywhere from 27 to 36 Econ Valdez-size oil spills) is dumped into landfills, backyards, empty lots, and storm drains each year. What makes this improper disposal all the more troubling is that used motor oil is contaminated with gasoline and such heavy metals as lead, cadmium, and others from engine-bearing wear. Used crankcase oil is so toxic that one gallon of it can leach into the ground to render one million gallons of fresh water undrinkable. Antifreeze, coolant, one of the most toxic of automotive fluids, should also be spared from the environment. Be sure, then, to recycle used oil and other toxic auto fluids at certified collection

HINT: By comparison to used crankcase oil, crude oil (a natural organic substance) can be considered to be relatively safe to the environment.

If you have questions about disposing of toxic auto fluids or having a particular problem with your car, don't hesitate to come into LEO & WALT'S SUKOCO. For all your car's repairs, we have modern test equipment, the ALL-DATA computer system, and the best service technicians available in the area. We know how important your car is to you and that it represents a sizable investment. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

While driving here you ever found you were as pre-occupied with your thoughts as you were in driving your car? Of course you have. All of us have been guilty of this at one time or another.

Once while driving through a residential section of a large city this happened to me. All of a sudden, I noticed a sign indicating fifteen miles per hour as the speed limit. To my surprise, I was driving nearly forty miles per hour. I had been driving in the line of traffic... my speed not governed by the maximum speed posted but influenced by the other drivers around me.

We become so involved in our everyday living that we fail to see many of the errors we can so easily fall into. We can be thankful when we find ourselves alerted by seeing something that will cause us to stop and take notice of ourselves. These instances may well be God's way of exercising His watchful care over us to stop us from driving with the crowd and to be mindful of our doings.

Quincy Natives Participate In D-Day Commemoration

Four Quincy natives serving in the Armed Services recently participated in the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of D-Day.

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Gaetano J. Brancaccio, Marine 1st Lt. Robert J. Callahan, Navy Airman Robert G. McCafferty and Navy Seaman Apprentice Dino D. Salvatore were among the participants who commemorated the 50th anniversary of the Allied invasion on the beaches of Normandy, France, the greatest amphibious assault in history.

Brancaccio is the son of Gaetano and Catherine A. Brancaccio of 39 Sullivan Rd., Quincy. He is deployed aboard the aircraft carrier USS George Washington. He joined the Navy in 1991 after graduating from Brockton High School.

Callahan is the son of Margaret M. and Edward J. Callahan of 54 Lennox St., Quincy. He is deployed with the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit, Camp Lejeune, N.C. A 1987 graduate of Boston College High School, he received a bachelor of science degree from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1991.

McCafferty, a 1992 graduate of Quincy High School, is deployed aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Guam.

Salvatore, the son of Richard Salvatore of 1 Branch St., Quincy, is deployed aboard the dock landing ship USS Tortuga. A 1991 graduate of Cherry Hill East High School, he joined the Navy in June, 1993. He holds a associate degree from West Virginia Wesleyan College.

Free Foot Screening At Health Center Aug. 18

The Quincy Council on Aging will sponsor a free foot screening for Quincy senior citizens Thursday, Aug. 18 from 9 a.m. to noon at the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Dr. Thomas E. Lyons from Commonwealth Podiatry will conduct the examination. Commonwealth Podiatry is affiliated with Boston Podiatry at Quincy Hospital.

The screening will consist of a brief examination of the feet addressing specific concerns such as pain, hammertoes, poor circulation, and others.

For an appointment or more information, call the Council on Aging at 376-1245.

In addition, a foot care presentation entitled "Proper Foot Care: Hints and Tips" will be held Wednesday, Aug. 31 at 10 a.m. Dr. John Giurini will give the presentation which will be followed by a question and answer period.

Raymond said the appointing council will be active in the next few weeks, reaching out into the community to find applicants interested in serving on the board.

According to Fabrizio, the first order of business for the new board of trustees will likely be to search for a new president.

Donald Young has served as interim president since O. Clayton Johnson was fired by the School Committee last fall, and he said at a recent School Committee meeting he would like to stay on as president as long as he can make a contribution.

Those interested in serving on the Quincy College Board of Trustees should send a letter of interest and/or resume to School Supt. Eugene Creedon, 70 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

when I need it.

"It's wonderful that we've been able to work together. If there was a personality conflict, than things would not go as smoothly as they do now. I am really happy for her. This is something she has deserved for a long time. After 10 years of hard work and long hours, she's finally being honored."

Tobin, who has served in the area as Quincy's state representative for six years, commended McDonald on her 10 years as director of the center and her dedication to the community.

"In the six years I've worked in this district, I don't know of any member of the community who is more devoted and dedicated to the kids and families of this community than Charlene," Tobin said.

"She works tirelessly in their behalf and provides the opportunity for child, tries to sustain an atmosphere so peoples of all diverse backgrounds, color, economic backgrounds, can get along. She provides a public service in the truest sense. I am pleased to at least dedicate a playground in her honor."

Kolson, who was instrumental in bringing money to the Germantown area and getting the dedication plans underway, said he was pleased he could be part of such a rewarding ceremony.

"She's done an excellent job, and has set a great example for people to follow in the future," Kolson said. "I'd like to thank the mayor and other officials who have helped with appropriations to this community. I'm looking forward to kids enjoying this playground for many years to come."

On the last day of the two-week program, the parents of the 85 campers were invited to attend a celebration surrounding the dedication of the playground.

The campers were treated to a Quincy Police Athletic League cookout, sports with the PAL and pony rides.

Donnelly, the current director of the summer camp program, said she feels the program will continue to flourish because it provides the opportunity for the children who are not able to go away on vacation.

"I think the program will continue to progress and it's valuable because a lot of these kids don't get the chance to go on vacation during the summer," Donnelly said. "This is all they have, since they don't go away."

Co-operative Bank Volunteers Delivering Meals To The Elderly

The staff at the North Quincy branch of the Co-operative Bank of Concord is participating in the bank's volunteer program to deliver meals to elderly in the area.

They responded to a recruitment effort organized by co-worker Patty Gillis to support the Meals on Wheels program of South Shore Elder Services of Braintree.

Gillis was a volunteer in the Friendly Visitor program when she learned of the critical need for drivers to bring meals to homebound people in 11 South Shore communities served by the agency. After gaining the approval of the bank's senior management, she began soliciting volunteers at the branch located at 300 Newport Ave, North Quincy.

Working in teams of two, the volunteers leave their office at 10:15 a.m., two days a week, and go to the Fenno House meal site to pick up meals for 16 deliveries.

The route usually takes less than 45 minutes to complete and they are back at work by 11 a.m.

"We all enjoy doing this," Gillis said. "It isn't hard to give up a couple of lunch hours a week, and we enjoy meeting the people. Everybody feels very good about participating."

"Patty has been a real lifesaver for us," said

Mary Ellen Wetzel, director of volunteers at South Shore Elder Services. "We are grateful to the management and employees of the Co-operative Bank for their enthusiastic support for Meals on Wheels. We hope other businesses and individuals in the Quincy area will follow their example. We need help!"

South Shore Elder Services is a private, non-profit agency that serves the city of Quincy and 10 towns in the South Shore area. South Shore Elder Services provides a broad range of programs and services to people age 60 and over to promote elder independence.

Lydon Funeral Home Continues Tree Planting Program

The Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofly Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. This program is part of a large endeavor, to restore the landscape and our environment with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle and John J. Lydon, Jr. of the Lydon Funeral Home. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

In all, 25 posts sponsored 68 boys for the 50th anniversary program.

Central Students Find Trip To Washington, D.C. An Unforgettable Time

[Earlier this year, students from Central Middle School in Wollaston visited Washington, D.C. The following story was submitted by two eighth graders who participated in the trip.]

By SHANNON WHALEN and MOLLY RANDALL
At 6 a.m. on Thursday, May 12, 80 students from Central Middle School piled onto two buses. Their destination: Washington, D.C.

The trip was to last about 10 hours. Fortunately, each bus was equipped with three TV screens and a VCR. Unfortunately, only one screen worked on one of the buses and on the other bus the sound did not work. So we were on our own for entertainment for the entire ride to D.C.

There were 40 students and four chaperones on each bus. Arthur Svensen, Tom Henderson, Anne Vella and Assistant Principal Don Houghton were on Bus One. Ken Panaro, who organized the trip, Mary Lou Petrelli, Jim and Marie Piccini were on Bus Two.

The anticipated long bus ride to Washington didn't seem that long in that many of the songs learned for the performance of the school's musical "In My Way" were performed.

One of the first things we noticed when we arrived was that the streets and the sidewalks were very wide, and the streets were long and almost all named after states. This was all evidence of a planned city. Our hotel was just across the Potomac River in Virginia, so we still had a little way to go.

When we arrived at the hotel, we had a little over an hour to settle into our rooms, be ready for a dinner dance cruise on the Potomac, and get on the buses.

The boat we toured on was called the "Spirit of The Potomac." The dinner was served buffet style. It consisted of chicken, tater tots, corn, bread and butter and the beverage of your choice (non-alcoholic, of course). We shared the ship with three other schools—one from them from Florida, one from Arizona and one from the D.C. area.

After the dinner, the kids started to dance and the party was in full swing. The D.J. played a variety of songs: disco, rap, a couple of slow songs, dance pop, and hard rock. Even Mr. Panaro could be seen headbanging, but just a little.

All in all, the dinner dance cruise was a great success. The kids had a great time and even the chaperones had a good time. We left the ship and arrived back at the hotel at 10:30 p.m. for a good night's sleep. We had to get up at 6 a.m. the next morning.

On Friday, May 13 we visited the Supreme Court building. We learned about how the judges and how the Supreme Court operates. Shortly afterwards, we walked to the Capital building to sing "Happy Birthday" to U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, met us on the Capital lawn and we surprised him with the birthday song.

After our meeting with the congressman was over, we toured the Capital and were allowed to view the rooms where the Senate and the House of Representatives meet.

From the Capital building, we walked to the Library of Congress and ate lunch in the cafeteria. When we were leaving, Mr. Houghton and 21 of our students were trapped in an elevator for about 10 minutes. We would have been trapped, too, but fortunately we were in the bathroom.

After lunch we walked to the Smithsonian Museum of Air and Space. After spending hours inside and seeing the sites, we found what every 14-year-old wants—souvenir cards located just outside of the museum.

Around 4:30 p.m. we left the museum and returned to the hotel to get ready for the night's event. First, we had dinner at Union Station. There has to be at least 50 different places to eat there; at least it looked that way! After dinner, we attended a performance of "Hot Mikado," a play that parodies the original "Mikado" but is a lot livelier.

As far as we could tell, our classmates and teachers enjoyed it also. One of the big things about the play was that we saw it in Ford's Theater, where Abraham Lincoln was murdered.

The next day, Saturday, May 14, we ate breakfast at the hotel, as usual, and then went on a tour of Arlington National Cemetery. We arrived in time to see the changing of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. We also saw the memorial to the Challenger astronauts, the Eternal Flame, where President John F. Kennedy rests; and the single white cross that marks the grave of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. We learned a lot about the cemetery and saw many memorials there.

Our next stop was the Smithsonian Museum of Art and Natural History. There are some very large and very beautiful gems located in this museum as well as some very large animals, both prehistoric and present day. We roamed around this museum for hours; it also has a great cafeteria.

After the museum, we traveled to the National Geographic Society Museum. On the way there, we passed numerous embassies by going down Embassy Row. At the museum, we learned about the some of the geographic features of the earth during a visual presentation.

At the conclusion of the presentation it was back on the bus to the hotel. Once there, we were given the opportunity to go swimming in the indoor pool. However, soon we were on the buses again on our way to our very own pizza party. The restaurant was entirely ours; we were the only ones there. It was awesome—all the pizza and soda you could eat and drink!

After the pizza party, we went on a night tour of Washington, during which we saw famous landmarks such as the White House, the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, and the Jefferson Memorial. We also went to the Marine Memorial, the one about the Marines raising the flag on Mount Suribachi on the island of Iwo Jima. When we returned to the hotel from our last evening on the town in Washington, we packed for our ride home.

Of course, no one was totally packed come the next morning so we finished packing before breakfast. Breakfast was at 6:30 a.m. because of some hotel goof-up. After breakfast, we trudged the bus sadly and drove off.

Before leaving our nation's capital, we still had time to visit the Holocaust Museum and see "Daniel's Story," a story that most of us read in language arts this year. We also visited the Vietnam Memorial and still had time to do a little shopping at the Old Office. Then we embarked on our 10-hour trip to our City of Quincy, famous in its own right.

Once we reached our destination, we were reunited with our parents and our journey was completed.

INVITATION FOR BIDS

The Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library invite sealed bids for the Accessibility Improvements to the Thomas Crane Public Library, located at 40 Washington Street, Quincy, Massachusetts. Bidding procedures shall be in accordance with the provisions of M.G.L. Chapter 149, Section 44A through Section 44J, inclusive, and Chapter 30, Section 39M, as amended.

Sealed proposals shall be delivered to the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street, Quincy, MA and received no later than the times set forth below when they will forthwith be publicly opened and read aloud in the Meeting Room on the ground floor of the Library after the closing of the receipt of bids.

Sealed bids for the sub-trades designated below will be received until 2 PM, 10 August 1994.

Sealed bids for the General Contract will be received until 2 PM, 17 August 1994.

Filed sub-bids will be required and taken for the following classes of work:

SECTION 04200 - UNIT MASONRY

SECTION 05500 - MISCELLANEOUS METALS

Bidders may obtain sets of Contract Documents, at the Thomas Crane Public Library upon deposit of $50.00 per set, in the form of check, made payable to the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The Contract Documents may be examined at, but not removed from, the following locations during normal business hours:

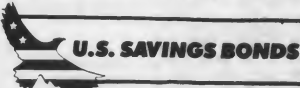

Construction Market Data, 75 Second Avenue, Suite 320, Needham, MA 02194

F.W. Dodge, 800 Boylston Street, Suite 320, Prudential Tower, Boston, MA 02199

Each bidder is advised to visit the site of the proposed work, become fully acquainted with conditions as they exist, and thoroughly examine the Contract Documents. Failure of any bidder to visit the site, and to examine the Contract Documents shall in no way relieve the bidder from any obligation with regard to the bid as submitted. The Thomas Crane Public Library is exempt from sales tax, for which reason bidders should not include sales taxes into figuring, or in reference to, any bid.

The Awarding Authority reserves the right to reject any or all bids if it is deemed to be in the public interest so to do.

Construction Plans For Roadway Approved Planning Board To Continue Wal-Mart Deliberations Aug. 17

The Planning Board has delayed a final decision on whether to give its approval to the proposed Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point.

The board, which held a meeting last week on the controversial project—which would include the construction of a Wal-Mart store near The Falls condominium complex—chose to continue its deliberations on the project until Aug. 17. The board must make a recommendation to the City Council by the end of September in order for the council to consider permitting the project.

At last week's meeting, the board unanimously approved a change to Falls Boulevard, the entrance to the condo complex, so it can accommodate traffic for the condominiums and the proposed shopping center. However, discussion of other key issues such as traffic and the economic impact on the condos was continued until the Aug. 17 meeting.

Planning Board Chairman James Kelley has asked Hingham developer Donald MacKinnon of Atlantic Development, the company behind the project, to arrange for a representative from Wal-Mart to attend the board's next meeting so board members can ask questions about truck traffic and hours of operation.

As has been the case with past meetings on Wal-Mart, a group of more than 50 picketers demonstrated outside City Hall while the board discussed the issue. Most appeared to be construction workers in favor of the project.

About 15 project opponents, most of them Falls residents, sat inside the hearing room during the deliberations. One of The Falls residents, Sylvia Mignon, spoke briefly before the board, saying that the fact that the developer is willing to spend $1 million in traffic improvements indicates that the proposed site is inappropriate for the Granite Crossing project.

However, Jim Fuda, traffic engineer for the engineering firm Vanasse Hangen Brustlin, Inc. said the $1 million are needed to correct existing traffic problems on Quincy Avenue and feed-in streets, not just the proposed shopping center.

The change to Falls Boulevard sets up a T-shaped intersection, so that traffic into the shopping center turns left and traffic into the condominium complex turns right.

Kelley said he had originally planned to wait on the road change until the board finished its deliberations on the shopping center, but changed his mind because something other than condominiums will be built on the land, even if it is not a Wal-Mart.

Mignon said she expected the road to be approved, but is hoping the board's detailed review of the project eventually results in a decision to reject Wal-Mart and the shopping center.

Chiropractic Update

by Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

WHAT IS A "SLIPPED DISC"?

The term "slipped disc" has been used commonly by doctors and patients alike, to generally describe an injury to one of the 23 "jelly-like" shock absorbers found between each of the bones or vertebrae of the spine. These intervertebral discs are ligaments which actually consist of a "jelly-like" middle surrounded by rings of cartilage. While these discs do not actually "slip" from between the spinal bones, they can be worn, compressed, bulged, or ruptured causing pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves. It is this bulged or ruptured disc that pressures or "pinches" the nerve which actually causes the severe back and/or leg pain that may result. Often times, muscle spasms will accompany a disc injury as the body attempts to stabilize or splint the damaged lower back or neck.

While the intervertebral discs may lose some of their height and resiliency and dry out slightly over the years, the final straw of a disc injury may be a sudden twist or slip, an improper lift, or a seemingly minor accident.

Chiropractors are well qualified in the prevention and/or treatment of disc injuries and often employ the modern technology of MRI or Catscan to ensure accurate diagnosis. Chiropractors use a drugless, non-surgical approach which may include manipulation, forms of therapy, proper exercise and bed rest.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-9400.

3 Bids Received New Parking Contract Seen By Next Week

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Three independent companies have bid on the right to manage Quincy's parking system, and one could be chosen as soon as next week, city officials said Tuesday.

Mayor James Sheets and Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon both said the three companies vying for the new five-year contract are Metropolitan Parking Systems Inc. of Quincy—the system's current manager—Kinney Systems Inc., and Fitz-Inn Auto Parks Inc., both of Boston.

Kinney managed the parking system before Metropolitan took over in 1989. The system includes two Quincy Center parking areas: the Hancock Parking Lot and the Ross Parking Garage.

Gillon said the three bids are as follows:

•Kinney has offered to charge the city a fee of $215,000 a year for its managerial services, while the city would keep all receipts from the parking system. Gillon has estimated that the city's annual parking receipts will total about $400,000, so the Kinney bid would result in a profit of $185,000 for the city if that estimate is accurate.

•Fitz-Inn would charge the city $246,000 annually for their managerial services and also would allow the city to keep all parking receipts, which according to Gillon's estimate would mean a profit of $154,000 for Quincy.

•Metropolitan would charge the city only $70,000 a year for its services, but would also keep all receipts. Metropolitan has estimated the total annual parking receipts at $450,000 but claims it would cost $520,000 to manage the parking system, so the city would need to make up the additional $70,000. Gillon said such a deal would work in the city's favor if for some reason parking receipts totaled less than $145,000, or more than $70,000 less than the Kinney bid.

He added that he should have a recommendation for the mayor on which company to choose by next week, after he consults with other members of the city's parking committee.

Will Send New Plan To Council In September Moon Island Fight Not Over Yet, Vows Sheets

The city plans to continue its fight against the use of Moon Island as a site to detonate explosives.

However, Quincy will not appeal a decision made last week by the state Board of Fire Prevention Regulations regarding the transportation of explosives by Boston authorities to the island for detonation, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

"The decision by the state is clear," said Sheets. "But we'll continue to explore our options."

The board rejected a new Quincy ordinance requiring Boston to get a permit from Quincy's fire chief each time bombs or other hazardous substances are taken to the island.

The board, which must approve all such municipal laws, ruled that the ordinance, which was passed by the City Council in May, conflicts with state fire codes.

However, Sheets said the city will try to prevent such action by Boston authorities through a zoning change, "police power," or other means. The mayor added that he hopes to have a proposal prepared in time for the City Council's first meeting in September.

"I will not back off on this," he said.

The state board's vote came two weeks after Boston police took three pounds of C-4 explosive to the island. The powerful military plastic explosive was moved to Washington, D.C. the next day.

Quincy has clashed with Boston for nearly a year over the use of the island, which is owned by Boston but falls within Quincy city limits in Squantum. In addition to the explosives issue, Quincy has successfully fought in court a plan by Boston officials to expand a police gun range on the island.

In April, Quincy went to court after Boston police exploded a pipe bomb on the island. But a month later, Norfolk County Superior Court Judge Robert Mulligan said the city's zoning ordinance was too vague, and he denied Quincy's request for an injunction.

The City Council then passed the new ordinance at the request of Sheets, who hoped to use it as a basis for future court actions.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said although the board ruled that Boston officials do not have to apply for a permit to detonate the explosives, they must give him "reasonable notice" before doing so.

"An operation like that still has to be proven to me that it's a safe operation," said Gorman.

But Sheets said the Boston bomb squad—unlike the state bomb squad,

Weld, Cellucci Visit Quincy Today

Gov. William Weld will make his fifth trip to Quincy this year today (Thursday) as one of his Cabinet Day events.

Weld will make several stops in the city including the following:

•2:45 to 3:15 p.m., a visit to the former Procter & Gamble plant in Quincy Point.

•3:30 to 4 p.m., a tour of the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point.

•4:30 to 5:30 p.m., a Weld Cabinet meeting in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex in Quincy Center.

The public may attend any or all of the governor's appearances. Cabinet Day will also take Weld, who will be accompanied by various members of his Cabinet, to Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Randolph and Stoughton.

Lt. Paul Cellucci will also make four stops in Quincy: Quincy Police Station, 9:45 to 10:15 a.m.; South Shore Chamber of Commerce, 10:30 to 11 a.m.; Quincy District Court, 11:15 to 11:45 a.m., and the Cabinet meeting.

Like Weld, Cellucci will be accompanied by several Cabinet members. He will also make appearances in Braintree, Hull and Marshfield.

Mayor James Sheets, who will attend most of Weld's and Cellucci's appearances, said he is thrilled the governor is returning to the city for the fifth time in 1994.

"Twice he (Weld) has said, 'I think Quincy has its house in order,'" said Sheets. "Quincy is the hub of the South Shore, and it will receive the lion's share of the governor's time. I really am honored."

In his previous trips to Quincy this year, Weld has discussed, among other things, domestic violence, city projects such as the proposed Quincy Center Concourse, and his proposal to reinstitute the death penalty which was recently defeated by the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTER Mike Radigan hoses off youngsters at the conclusion of "Foam Day" at the South Shore YMCA. The event, which benefits the American Lung Association, was preceded by an educational program about asthma.

Purchases Boston Gear Property

Shaw's Still Hoping To Build New Store

Officials from Shaw's Supermarkets are still hoping to build a new store at the former Boston Gear site on the Wollaston-North Quincy line.

The project's developer, Mark Dickinson of Dickinson Development, said Shaw's has purchased the land from Boston Gear. He would not disclose the purchase price or the date of the sale.

Shaw's withdrew a plan to build on the site last October after a majority of City Council members said they would vote against it. The company had proposed building a 56,000 square foot supermarket as well as another 30,000 square feet of retail space, but councillors cited traffic and the size of the project as their major concerns.

However, Dickinson said the company was willing to risk buying the property because of its location, a belief that traffic problems can be resolved, and because the company had to make a decision about the property. He added that he has used a computer simulation to show that $300,000 in planned traffic improvements will make traffic flow better on Hancock Street than it does today, even after the store is built.

Dickinson said Shaw's is also willing to delay the opening of the retail space until after the supermarket is open in order to prove that the traffic solution works.

The company hopes to appear again before the City Council this fall, Dickinson said.

The site in question borders Wards 5 and 6. Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers both opposed the Shaw's project last October.

Phelan said this week he will keep an open mind about the proposed supermarket, but added that it will have to be considerably different from the one proposed last October.

"People will be looking for something that's a significant change," said Phelan. "They've (Shaw's) expressed optimism that they'll be ready to (appear before the City Council) by the fall, but I don't share the same enthusiasm. They still have a lot of issues to resolve."

Ayers could not be reached for comment at press time.

BUT IT'S JUST A BACKACHE, DOCTOR

It was Mr. Andrews's first visit to a Doctor of Chiropractic. The only reason he came in was because of a pain in the back—imagine his surprise when he was asked to fill out a detailed health questionnaire.

"But it's just a backache, Doctor," he complained as he was ushered into the chiropractor's examination room. "What have children diseases and the condition of my gallbladder got to do with that? Just fix my back, Doc."

It's not that simple, Mr. Andrews.

Your backache might very well be caused by a subluxated (bone out of place) vertebra in your spine that is causing nerve pressure or irritation. But it's also possible that any one of many other complicating factors are involved, and we must find them or rule them out. Your body is certainly a precious possession, and it is our responsibility to treat it with at least all the concern and all the knowledge which one would give a fine piece of machinery.

So let's get on to the business of that backache, Mr. Andrews, and to the important overall total health care of your body.

Police Seek Bank Robber

Quincy police are investigating a mid-day robbery at the Quincy Savings Bank, 371 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The robbery occurred shortly before 1 p.m. Monday.

Police Detective Lt. Neil MacDonald said a man entered the bank and gave the teller a note demanding large bills. MacDonald said the teller handed several $50 bills to the suspect, who then demanded all the $5, $10 and $20 bills in the teller's drawer.

Police describe the robber as a 6-foot, Caucasian, 25 to 30 years old, with a medium build.

He was wearing a royal blue jacket, dark baseball cap, a gold loop earring in his left ear and dark sunglasses.

He did not show a weapon, according to the teller.

$1.35B Package To Aid Fore River, Other Shipyards Studds Legislation For Maritime Reform Approved

The final piece of a bipartisan initiative authored by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds to reform and revitalize the U.S. maritime industries has been approved by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The legislation, which earmarks $1.35 billion for maritime reform, was passed last week.

Studds said passage of H.R. 4003, the Maritime and Promotional Reform Act, provides the funding offset required to enact the ship operating and ship building programs agreed to by the House last November to aid the ailing U.S. maritime industries.

"Today, the House voted to ensure that American flags continue to fly from vessels carrying this nation's commerce," Studds said after the vote.

For the last two years, Studds has led a bipartisan effort to ensure that the United States retains a U.S.-flag merchant fleet to help American shipyards, including the Fore River shipyard in Quincy, convert to competitive commercial ship construction.

During last week's floor debate, Studds offered an amendment on behalf of himself and Rep. Jack Fields (R-Texas) to raise a total of $1.35 billion over 10 years from increased tonnage duties on vessels calling at U.S. ports. The amendment, approved by a vote of 268 to 153, represents a compromise between the original proposal from the Studds Committee to provide $1.7 billion and the version adopted two weeks ago by the Ways and Means Committee to provide $1 billion.

The Studds-Fields amendment would increase the existing duty from nine cents per ton assessed on vessels calling from Western Hemisphere ports and 27 cents per ton on vessels calling from other world ports to a flat 38 cents per ton.

The amendment also raises from five to 25 the number of times the duty can be assessed each year.

"Passage of this amendment to this bill, this session, is possibly the only hope we have to ensure that this nation has the ships, the trained merchant mariners, the shipyards, and the skilled shipyard workers we need to protect our national and economic security," said Studds. "Anything less than the funds it provides would send U.S.-flag ships to foreign registries and close the doors on even more American shipyards."

Regency Holdings Inc., a Greek firm, was reported last week to be moving closing to its goal of reviving shipbuilding at the Fore River shipyard. The company hopes to begin working at the site as early as this fall.

Asks Zoning Board To Carefully Consider Wal-Mart Proposal

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The City of Quincy Planning Board is due to offer an opinion on the proposed Wal-Mart development on Route 53, adjacent to the Falls condominium community. Because of the significant long-term implications of this proposal, we would like to recap for the Planning Board, as well as for all Quincy officials and the community at-large, the key issues that must be given meticulous attention.

•We cannot look at this project in a vacuum. Should Quincy be fortunate enough to lure both the USS Salem museum to the Fore River, and a financial savior for the shipyard (as was reported in the newspapers), the impacts on Quincy Point will be astounding, if only from the standpoint of traffic. It is safe to say that the neighborhood cannot bear the impact of all three major projects, therefore the City must decide on its priorities.

•The Quincy Zoning Code is crystal clear. The Planning Board, in issuing a special permit, must ensure that in any proposed development: 1) The specific site is an appropriate location for such a use or structure. 2) The use as developed will not adversely affect the neighborhood. 3) There will be no nuisance or serious hazard to vehicles or pedestrians.

First, one can only assume that the parcel in question was specifically zoned residential after careful review and thought. What has changed? Second, a "neighborhood" is usually defined as the people who live there, first, and then by the stores, parks and other attributes that it has. As such, there is absolutely no way to look at this project as anything but damaging to the surrounding neighborhood. It will destroy the property values of nearby residents who sank life savings into homes. It will choke a wholly inadequate roadway system that cannot be physically enlarged enough to handle 16,000 new car trips each day (no matter what Wal-Mart's traffic study says). And it will turn Falls Boulevard into a dangerous commercial thoroughfare, instead of the quiet residential street it is today.

Finally, countless examples across the country show that Wal-Mart will destroy neighborhood businesses built by local entrepreneurs ($11 million in diverted sales each year by their estimates), while providing services that are already available ten times over.

Yes we need economic development. But the City must weigh its priorities regarding Quincy Point, and decide if "good" economic planning means building up one gigantically rich corporation at the expense of the hard working homeowners and small businesspeople that give life to the neighborhood, and give Quincy its character.

Cahill Warming Up?

Is Tim Cahill warming up for a mayoral run next year?

He's not saying, publicly, anyway. But he seems to be leaning in that direction.

The fact he has sold his Handshakes Restaurant is seen by some observers as an indication he is planning to run.

He would need to wage a full-time, all-out campaign to take on incumbent James Sheets who is expected to seek a fourth term in 1995. Freeing himself of the restaurant will give Cahill that all-important time.

SHEETS

Cahill will tell you that selling Handshakes was strictly a business deal with no political link.

But he does concede that trying to run a restaurant and campaign for mayor would have been pretty difficult at the very least.

Cahill appears to be the most likely to challenge Sheets, one of the city's all time popular mayors. He almost did it last year but was finally talked out of it by friends and advisers.

Other potential mayoral candidates like City Council President Michael Cheney, former state Senator Paul Harold and School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, would rather wait for Sheets to step down or move on before making their move. So would Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien who has a down-the-road interest in the mayor's office.

Cahill, who is only 35, could wait with them but he seems to feel the hour is near and that he could give Sheets a good run.

He's a proven vote-getter, topping the city council at-large field in the last three elections.

Of course, in a city council at-large race, you can get one of three votes cast for that office. A head-on, one-on-one mayoral contest is a little different.

But there is no doubt Cahill would be a serious contender and a good showing, if he lost, would put him in a strong position for another shot in 1997.

Sheets is riding a popularity wave right now but that doesn't seem to bother Cahill.

When you talk about Sheet's popularity, Cahill reminds you about George Bush who was seen as unbeatable during the Persian Gulf War but within a year was knocked over by a little known governor from Arkansas.

If he takes the plunge next year and runs, he would have a little Quincy political history for extra encouragement.

BRIAN GLENNON of North Quincy was awarded an academic achievement award in government at Suffolk University's Recognition Day awards ceremonies. Presenting Glennon with his certificate is Dr. Michael R. Rosayne, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at Suffolk University.

CAHILL

A young Jim McIntyre took on a very popular Amelio Della Chiesa in 1959 and lost by 2,100 votes. But when Della Chiesa retired in 1965, it was McIntyre who came on strong to win the office by swamping Joseph LaRaia by over 14,000 votes.

MCINTYRE

AND IT LOOKS like Michael D'Amico may be getting ready for another political run next year.

D'AMICO

D'Amico is hosting a "campaign get-together cookout," Sunday at 2 p.m. at his Willard St., West Quincy home.

The cookout is to thank those who helped him in his campaign for the Ward 4 City Council seat last year and at which he says he will "share my future plans."

D'Amico, at age 18, made an impressive political debut last year challenging incumbent Tom Fabrizio for the Ward 4 seat. He finished 277 votes behind Fabrizio.

SHEA After

Although he has said a couple of times he was going to shave it off, he hasn't yet and doesn't seem to be looking for his razor.

What do you think? Should he keep it or shave it?

MILESTONE: Good friend Kae Spargo of Sherman St., Quincy, is celebrating her 86th birthday today. Husband, Ed, who is a health activist and, "pushing 87," says Kae would like to have a major league baseball dispute settlement for her birthday. She's a rabid Red Sox fan—whether they win or lose.

Clarification

A story in the July 28 Quincy Sun mistakenly stated that Quincy Hospital is owned by Quorum Health Resources Inc., a national hospital management company.

Although the hospital is managed by Quorum, it is owned by the City of Quincy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A late 1920's postcard of Klein's Pharmacy at the corner of Beale and Hancock Streets in Wollaston. The automobile was added to the scene by the postcard publisher to show some sign of life. This was a common practice at the time. The Wollaston Theater built in 1926 is the tall building on the right. A second story was later added to the Klein's building but many of the original architectural details are still extant. And although this drugstore became the Blackwood Pharmacy many years ago, the Klein's name can still be seen in faded paint on the bricks at the top of the south side of the building.

Wal-Mart Would Bring 'Many Benefits'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Once again the anti-Wal-Mart group has resorted to making false and misleading statements in an effort to prevent Quincy from receiving the benefits that Granite Crossing and Wal-Mart will bring (The Quincy Sun, Reader's Forum, Page 5, Aug. 4, 1994).

Ms. Goscinak said that more than 100 signatures were collected at their anti-Wal-Mart booth at the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival. Organizers of the Sidewalk Festival, at the QCBPA, reported that the anti-Wal-Mart group did not even rent space for a booth; apparently, they borrowed a table from one of the few retailers opposed to Wal-Mart. We found overwhelming support for the project at the Granite Crossing booth from hundreds of people that spoke in favor of Granite Crossing and signed petitions supporting the development and the 500 permanent jobs that will be created. These new petitions will be added to the thousands of signatures already received in support of the project.

Ms. Goscinak casts aspersions on Wal-Mart for trying to offer high-quality merchandise at the lowest possible prices and for researching the prices of its largest competitors. What is wrong with that? It is a standard practice in any industry and is the essence of free enterprise. Free and fair competition keeps our economy strong and serves customers. It is the American way.

Ms. Goscinak criticizes Atlantic Development's proposal to make $1 million in road improvements, saying the need for improvements indicates the site is unsuitable. Most of the road improvements that need to be made are for existing traffic problems along the Southern Artery and Quincy Avenue, not Falls Boulevard. Anyhow, if Quincy followed that line of reasoning we would build no new roads, bridges, sewers or infrastructures of any kind, anywhere. Our economy would soon stagnate. Is that the kind of city we want?

Moreover, over $1 million in road work will improve the flow of traffic to and from the site and a $600,000 mitigation package will help nearby Falls residents improve the value of their property. Many residents of The Falls and adjacent neighborhoods will appreciate the convenience of having a quality shopping center nearby. Maybe that's why a recent real estate transaction involving undeveloped land in The Falls condominium complex indicates that residential property values in the area are rising. Maybe that is why The Falls voted 80 percent in favor of working with us to develop the Granite Crossing Shopping Center.

Ms. Goscinak states that "on Saturday and Sunday, 16,000 cars will travel up Falls Boulevard to Wal-Mart." Again, another false statement. The actual figure for Saturday is approximately 4,000 vehicles or one-fourth the figure she uses. On Sunday the traffic will be even less.

Ms. Goscinak states that "Falls Boulevard is the driveway to The Falls condos." This statement is false. Falls Boulevard connects to Quincy Avenue at a four-way signalized intersection, opposite the beginning of the Southern Artery. Both Quincy Avenue and Southern Artery have traffic flows in excess of 30,000 vehicles per day. Falls Boulevard was constructed to service our site which is zoned for retail and commercial uses plus an additional 50 acres of land zoned to allow retail, commercial, industrial and residential uses. Over 1 million square feet of development was approved along Falls Boulevard in the past. The driveway to The Falls condominiums is off Falls Boulevard over 1,000 square feet south of the Quincy Avenue intersection.

None of the Granite Crossing or Wal-Mart traffic will pass by The Falls driveway. The Planning Board on July 27 unanimously approved a reconfiguration of Falls Boulevard so that the commercial and residential traffic can be separated and none of the vehicles going to and from our 240,000 square foot shopping center will go by The Falls driveway. Under the previously approved $1 million square foot development, Falls Boulevard would not have been modified and most of the traffic was designed to go past The Falls driveway.

To date all individuals or groups wanting to participate with concerns, ideas or suggestions regarding our project have been part of the permitting process. Many of their suggestions have become part of the plan. Unfortunately, the anti-Wal-Mart group will not meet with us to work out any reasonable concerns that they may have. Their only option is to suggest that the city should deny this opportunity and the many benefits that are associated with it.

Fortunately, the overwhelming majority of Quincy residents and businesses, including residents in the immediate neighborhood, have voiced their support in favor of the project. The 500 permanent jobs will strengthen, not weaken, Quincy's economy.

We will continue to work with city officials, business leaders and residents to plan and build for the future of Quincy, helping make the city a better place in which to live, work and raise a family.

Donald J. MacKinnon,
President
Atlantic Development

Mayor Ross Ready To Name New Police Chief

Mayor Charles A. Ross received a favorable report from Atty. Gen. Francis E. Kelly and said he plans to ask for a Civil Service list from which to appoint a Successor to Police Chief John J. Avery, who was due to retire Aug. 27.

Kelly had been investigating the circumstances surrounding the chief's sexam and the marking and regrading of the papers.

Aug. 11-17

45 Years Ago

"I am pleased to note that there apparently were no irregularities in connection with the examination and that no official of the city of Quincy is in any way involved in either the conduct of the exam or appeals or otherwise," said Ross.

Ross was to select Chief Avery's successor from the first three officers on the list—Lt. Joseph F. Hughes, Capt. Joseph P. Flaherty and Lt. John E. Weurth.

The investigation began when the name of Capt. James W. H. Kemp was regraded so that he dropped from first place on the list to sixth place, which made him ineligible for consideration as chief.

POLIO SPREADING

An 8-year-old North Quincy girl came down with what was diagnosed as infantile paralysis, the 14th victim of the dread disease polio during the current outbreak in Quincy.

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash urged parents to keep their children away from crowds, avoid chilling and over fatigue and stay away from streams, lakes and ditches into which sewage drains.

The Norfolk County Infantile Paralysis Chapter presented a hot pack machine, purchased with $350 of March of Dimes funds, to City Hospital for the treatment of polio victims.

A new $10 family polio insurance policy, with coverage up to $5,000, was being offered by Riggs and Son, 23 Beale St., Wollaston.

SCHOOL ADDITION

The City Council approved a $100,000 loan order to build a four-room addition to the Atherton Hough School in Houghs Neck and sent to its Finance Committee an order to take marsh land on Fennel St. for a new elementary school.

"It's unfortunate," said Councilor Frank N. Orcutt, "we always have to get a swamp on which to put a new school."

SECOND GRADE STUDENTS at the Merrymount Elementary School recently participated in the school's annual Dinosaur Program. The children were presented diplomas for their work in language arts, science and social studies.

Diplomas Presented At Merrymount Dinosaur Program

The second grade class of Kathleen Fitzpatrick at the Merrymount Elementary School recently presented the school's annual Dinosaur Program.

The program is a multi-disciplinary unit based on all areas of the curriculum. Principal Kathleen Morris presented each student with a diploma for their work in language arts, science and social studies.

Students receiving diplomas included: Jennifer Baszkiewicz, Michael Cafano, Patrick Carnell, Dylan Chesley, Phillip Cohen, Mary Curran, Daniel Earle, Sally Exilus, Francis Feeley, Stephen Graham, Chande Johnson, Jeffrey Ketcham, James Layden, Michael Marshall, Breda McCarron, Kristen McCaul, Lara Murray, Nancy Nguyen, Stephen O'Brien, Paul Orzelek, Elizabeth Thomas and Kristen Walter.

At the end of the program, parents served a "dinosaur brunch" they had prepared.

Youth Center Dance At United Methodist Church Aug. 19

The Teen Get-Away youth center will hold a dance Friday, Aug. 19 from 8 to 11 p.m. in the downstairs of Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

The dance, the center's special monthly event for August, is being sponsored by Hibernia Savings Bank in Wollaston.

Admission is $3 per person. Each member may bring a guest. Music will be provided by Jimmy Jay Entertainment. Snacks and soda will be available.

The center, which opened in April, now has a membership of over 100 13 to 17-year-olds. It has two sites—the Methodist church and South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy Center—and offers a variety of sports activities, video games, music, monthly special events and other activities.

Executive Director Jo-Ann Bragg said the center, which has already received grants of $2,500 from Impact Quincy and $5,000 from the Harold Brooks Foundation, will receive $10,000 from the city's federally-funded Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) account. The money will be spent on programs, equipment, special events, activities and staff.

In June, the center held a Basketball Shoot-Out Tournament co-sponsored by the Quincy Police Athletic League. Winners in the boys 13-14 age division included: first place, Peter Tran; second place, Bobby Harvey and third place, Enc Sullivan. Maureen Sullivan took first place in the girls division. First, second and third place winners in the 15-17 age division were Tim Semchenko, Tuan Tan and Pat McDonough.

Last month, the center's monthly special event was a cookout and Volleyball Tournament between the staff and members.

Those interested in joining the center may bring a birth certificate, $1 entrance fee and $5 annual membership dues Friday from 8 to 10 p.m. at the church or Saturday from 8 to 10 p.m. at the YMCA.

Flutist, Pianist To Perform At First Parish Aug. 13

Flutist Virginia Sindelar

and pianist Leslie Amper will perform Saturday, Aug. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The concert is part of the Summer Concert Festival series being presented by Scarborough Productions at the church. It will include works by Beethoven and several other composers.

Sindelar, founder of the Scarborough Chamber Players, has achieved recognition as an international concert flutist and has conducted master classes both in the United States and abroad. She also serves as artistic director for Scarborough Productions.

Amper, who made her orchestral debut with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra at the age of 14, has also given recitals throughout the world.

The concert will also include historical commentary on 19th century members of the Adams family by Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society.

For tickets or more information, call 328-0677.

Virginia Kelly Named Bookmobile Librarian At Crane Library

Quincy resident Virginia Kelly has been appointed Bookmobile Librarian for the Thomas Crane Public Library.

In making the appointment Library Director Ann McLaughlin cited Mrs. Kelly's library experience, a commitment to public service and her good humor.

Mrs. Kelly is near completion of a bachelor of arts program at Bridgewater State College with a minor in business. Her associate's degree is in business from the Quincy (Junior) College.

During her 15 years on the Quincy library staff, Mrs. Kelly has worked in the interlibrary loan office and at the North Quincy Branch Library and has filled in on the Bookmobile.

She also worked as a library page during her high school years. Many patrons will recognize her from her stints at the Main Library circulation desk and the children's room. Her most recent assignment has been in the technical services department.

One of Mrs. Kelly's outside interests is children with special needs. She is a founding member of the local chapter of the National Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

Before Mrs. Kelly meets library patrons, the Bookmobile will be retrofitted with a wheelchair lift bringing it into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"I didn't think Fleet would give me a loan because I don't own property. I thought they would ignore me like everybody else, but it wasn't that way at all."

*Roberto Irizarry
La Cava Alegre market*

No property, no loan. It was an equation Roberto Irizarry had heard time and again. And without a loan, the business to which he had dedicated himself over the past 5 years would be history. So instead of focusing our attention solely on his assets, we looked at the way he ran his neighborhood market instead. Though his rented space is relatively small, the market is extremely well organized and stocked. His hard work is clearly evident. And with only his efforts as collateral, we provided the money he needed to continue. That's the kind of thinking that's at the heart of our INCITY program for people and communities in need. At $8 billion, it's the most comprehensive lending commitment ever made by any financial institution in the country. If you'd like to participate in the Fleet INCITY program, call 1-800-CALL-FLEET (1-800-225-5353). It could make a real difference.

Mullen Attends Seminar At National FBI Academy

Police Chief Francis Mullen recently attended a special two-week seminar for police chiefs at the National FBI Academy in Virginia.

Mullen, a graduate of the academy, was the only police chief from New England invited to the seminar, which was attended by 30 chiefs from across the country. The event was called the Law Enforcement Executive Development Seminar (LEEDS).

"It was a very elite group of law enforcement executives," he said.

Mullen said topics discussed included economic, political and social trends that affect all law enforcement managers; the police chief's role in creating an innovative environment, labor and media relations, budget strategies, legal issues, leadership, ethics, and other issues.

The chief noted that he has no idea how he was chosen to participate in the twice-a-year seminar, which was held in conjunction with University of Virginia. He added that it was possibly because he is a graduate of the FBI Academy.

"Not all chiefs are graduates of the academy," he said.

Mullen said he feels he learned a lot while attending the seminar.

"It's held to keep the modern chiefs up-to-date with the problems we're facing in the '90s, and it was very informative," he said. "It was also an occasion to meet police chiefs from all over the country."

Mullen said he attended the seminar, which was sponsored by the federal government, at no cost to the City of Quincy.

Lions Club Remembers John Swanson Through Donation To Crane Library

The Lions Club of Quincy recently presented a low vision device to the Thomas Crane Public Library in memory of its late member John Swanson.

Swanson joined the club in May 1967 and was a member for more than 25 years. He was editor of the Lions Club newsletter "Notes From the Den," annually organized the club's Christmas luncheon for the blind and devoted his time and efforts and many of its other fundraising events.

A handwriting analyst by occupation, he testified during many court cases regarding handwriting evidence.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin accepted the low vision device in memory of Swanson, who was a member and weekly regular at the Thomas Crane Public Library. Swanson's wife Pat and their children were also present at the dedication.

The low vision device was supplied by Better Sight of Quincy.

Study: Voluntary Measures Reduce Rush-Hour Bridge Openings 70%

A Coast Guard study of vessel traffic going through the Fore River drawbridge shows that voluntary measures to restrict the barges have reduced the number of rush-hour bridge openings by 70 percent over the past four months.

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds announced the study's findings last Friday.

The Coast Guard, which conducted the study at the request of Studds, said the measures proved so effective in keeping commuter traffic flowing along Rte. 3A that it would propose drawbridge regulations to require that rush-hour openings be limited to commercial tankers and other tide or current-dependent vessels.

"We believe the voluntary measures and the above action should help alleviate rush-hour traffic problems for those traveling on Route 3A in the Quincy-Weymouth area," Rear Admiral John Linnon, commander of the First Coast Guard District, wrote in a letter to Studds.

The congressman said he was pleased with the Coast Guard's study and its recommendations.

"Our primary concern has been to reduce the number of drawbridge openings, which have caused intolerably long delays on Rte. 3A," said Studds. "The proposed regulations will help ensure we do both."

Linnon said that during the past few months, the voluntary measures implemented by CITGO, whose barges are the prime reason for the bridge openings, have reduced the number of rush-hour bridge openings from 30 to nine, when compared with a similar four-month period last year.

"In addition, five of those nine rush-hour openings were for tide-dependent tankers, and one was for a medical emergency aboard a recreational vessel," Linnon wrote. "My bridge staff is preparing a notice of Proposed Rule-making for a proposed regulation change to limit rush-hour openings to commercial tankers and other tide or current dependent vessels."

In a letter in February to then-Coast Guard Commander William Kime, Studds asked the Coast Guard to meet with representatives of CITGO and local and state officials to discuss the situation. After a series of meetings in the spring, the Coast Guard released its letter last week.

Studds also wrote this past winter to CITGO President and CEO Ronald Hall asking him if CITGO could institute a formal system of informing the public in advance of its schedule for using the drawbridge, so commuters could plan accordingly. CITGO has since done so.

SPOTTING FLUID LEAKS

When was the last time you took a close look at your garage floor or the patch of driveway beneath your car in an effort to spot a fluid leak? This type of informal inspection should be conducted on almost a daily basis. Conscientious car owners who frequently spot-check for leaks will more likely be rewarded with a minor repair bill, rather than a more costly complication of fluid loss. A puddle of greenish yellow fluid is indicative of a loss of engine coolant. Motor oil is usually blackish-brown, while transmission fluid has a red tint. Brake fluid is clear, but its location near the wheels may help identify it. These fluids are all considered to be lubricants, the loss of which compromises a corresponding unit's functioning efficiency and HINT: If fluid spots are a common sight on a garage floor or driveway, start fresh with a clean piece of cardboard beneath the car as a background for spotting leaks.

Consumer Affairs Secretary To Address Chamber Council

Massachusetts Consumer Affairs Secretary Priscilla Douglas will address the Continuous Improvement Council of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce at a breakfast meeting today (Thursday).

The meeting, one of the Weld Administration's Cabinet Day activities, will be held from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the Bank of Boston's Amphitheatre, Main Annex, 17 Chestnut St., Quincy. Douglas will speak on the integration of Total Quality Management (TQM) into state government.

Douglas is a recognized expert on TQM, a management strategy focusing on process involvement and customer satisfaction. She is a member of the Commonwealth Quality Improvement Council which functions as an umbrella for statewide implementation of TQM and chairperson of the Council Strategy Committee.

Before joining the Weld Administration in 1991 as assistant secretary of public safety, Douglas worked in the private sector for five years as an executive in charge of marketing research and quality systems for the Pontiac Motor Division.

Marilyn Reisberg Exhibits Painting In N.Y. Gallery

By LISA CONNELL
Marilyn Reisberg of Quincy says she feels like "she's walking on cloud nine."

Her vocation is men's formal wear, but her avocation is art and she pursues it with a passion and dedication that has resulted in the highpoint of her career: a New York gallery show.

President and co-owner of Bernie's Formal Shop, Reisberg will exhibit a painting in her first New York juried art show at the Galerie des Hamptons, Westhampton Beach, New York. The show opens Saturday, Aug. 13, and runs through Saturday, Sept. 10.

Entitled, "The Secret Garden," Reisberg's entry is a bas-relief painting of a red poppy, with pale lilac irises in the background.

The entire background is done in an inlay of 24-carat gold leaf. The flowers are sculpted in gesso, which gives the painting a three-dimensional quality. The painting measures 3 and 1/2 feet by 4 and 1/2 feet.

The use of gold leaf in her paintings is a fairly new venture, Reisberg said.

"I've always looked for something new for my florals," said Reisberg. Inspired by another local artist, Charles Kellman, who uses gold leaf in the background of his portraits, Reisberg began working with gold leaf separating the tissue-thin sheets, smoothing out its wrinkles with an iron, applying the gold, and then varnishing and finishing the gilded area with a preservative.

Reisberg works on her art every day. In the area, she is best known for her portraits, but her abilities extend to miniature paintings as well as florals.

"I am very fortunate; I have a studio in my house," said Reisberg. "No matter how tired I am at the end of a day, I go into my studio even if I just doodle for 10 minutes. I am always working on two or three paintings at the same time."

"The best part of the show is that my son's in-laws live nearby [in New York], so my whole family will be there," said Reisberg.

While she awaits the opening of her show in New York, she continues to work on new pieces.

"It's a good outlet for stress; this truly relaxes me," said Reisberg.

Reisberg, who has been taking formal art classes in Boston since the age of 10, attended the Massachusetts College of Art following her graduation from Malden High School.

A member of the Quincy Art Association (QCA) since 1958, she served as its president in 1971 and 1988. On seven occasions she has served as QCA Exhibit Chairman. In 1992 and 1993, she was Chairman of Quincy's "First Night" Art Exhibit.

She has received several awards at the QCA's annual fall and spring shows.

For 11 years, she has been a contributing artist to the Mayor's Exhibit at City Hall.

A life member of the prestigious Copley Society of Boston, she is a former member of the Board of Governor's. Because she has been selected for inclusion into five juried shows, she has attained the status of "Copley Artist."

She has participated in the Society's "Plein Aire" Auction for five years.

Recently Reisberg joined a women's art association in Manhattan, the Catherine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club of Gramercy Park. The club was formed in 1896.

Reisberg has had other solo shows, including Handshakes Cafe in Quincy Center and the Milton Marketplace Gallery Cafe.

At Quincy Shore Drive

Child Passenger Law To Be Enforced Here

The State Police will enforce the Child Passenger Safety Law at Quincy Shore Drive and other public beaches and recreational areas for six weeks as part of a special initiative to reduce deaths and injuries on Massachusetts roadways.

The Governor's Highway Safety Bureau is funding the program as part of an existing grant to the State Police targeting drunk drivers and speeders.

In addition to Quincy Shore Drive at Wollaston Beach, the program will be enforced at Breakheart Reservation, Horseneck Beach, Houghton's Pond, Lynn/Nahant Beach, Nantasket Beach, Revere Beach, Salisbury Beach and Walden Pond.

"Nationally, the leading cause of death to children over the age of 6 months is car crashes, the majority of these fatalities and serious injuries involve unrestrained children," said Governor's Highway Safety Bureau Director Nancy Luther in making the announcement last week.

"Adults must understand the danger they are placing their children in by not properly restraining them every time they get into the car. We believe education combined with enforcement can make the difference between an unnecessary injury or death and a life saved," Luther added.

Operators of motor vehicles with unrestrained children will receive information on the safety belt and child car safety seat laws as well as the need for safety belts and child car safety seats. Those drivers may be given a $25 citation per unrestrained child by troopers in the state's special motorcycle, mounted and bicycle units.

The Massachusetts Child Passenger Safety Law requires children age 12 and under to be properly restrained when riding in a motor vehicle.

"Police officers see first hand the needless tragedies that occur when children are restrained in a crash," said Col. Charles Henderson, superintendent of the State Police. "Children can become projectiles in a crash. Car seats and safety belts will reduce their chance of serious injury or death by 50 to 75 percent."

In 1993, there were 475 motor vehicle fatalities in Massachusetts, 32 of which involved children age 14 and younger. In addition, 2,700 in that same age group were seriously injured.

"We want everyone to enjoy themselves this summer; however, we need to stress the importance of safety belts and child car safety seats to parents and caregivers," said Luther. "Police officers will be able to make contact with a large number of families at the beach and recreational areas."

Massachusetts has the lowest fatality rate in the nation based on population and miles traveled, according to the National Safety Council's ranking of states during the first four months of 1994. Massachusetts traffic fatalities were down 24 percent during the first four months of this year as compared to 1993 and down 38 percent compared to 1992.

During the same time frame, traffic deaths nationally were up 3 percent in 1994 as compared to 1993 and up 4 percent compared to 1992.

Parking Contract Seen By Next Week

picking an operator," he said.

Metropolitan's original five-year contract with the city to manage the parking system, expired July 1, the start of this fiscal year. However, Sheets said the contract has been extended until a permanent manager is found for the system.

Gillon told The Quincy Sun in March that under the terms of the 1989 contract, Metropolitan had to pay the city $125,000 annually for the use of the two parking lots. In addition, the city shared a percentage of the parking receipts, with the percentage based on the total amount Metropolitan earned for the year.

Gillon said Tuesday the key reason the new bids are so different from Metropolitan's first contract is the fact that the city will be offering free parking at the Ross Parking Garage.

Sheets announced in March his plans to offer limited free parking on the first level of the Ross Garage as incentive to consumers who want to shop in Quincy Center as part of his mission to revitalize the downtown section of the city. Although details of that plan are still not complete, the mayor has said any revenue loss by the addition of free parking should be made up for by the additional shopping dollars that come into the city.

Sheets has also said a key factor in bringing additional shoppers to Quincy Center will be the arrival of Decelle—a division of Burlington Coat Factory that sells mainly women's and children's clothes—at the site of the former Child World on Hancock Street. Negotiations between Decelle and the city began several months ago and are ongoing, according to Sheets.

Because of the decision to offer free parking, Sheets had subsequently toyed with the idea of the city taking control of the parking system. However, Sheets said in May that after discussions with Gillon and retired Purchasing Agent Robert Denvir Jr. it was decided that the city would save money by allowing the system to remain under the management of an independent company.

Neither Sheets nor Gillon, when asked in May, could provide a dollar figure on what the resulting savings from that decision would be.

Sheets Vows Moon Island Fight

which services all other communities in Massachusetts—transports explosives in an open-top container rather than a "total containment vessel" which completely covers a bomb.

The mayor said if a bomb being transported by the Boston bomb squad accidentally exploded, it would at the very least cause windows in nearby buildings to shatter.

"Even if that's all it does, there is still a danger factor," said Sheets.

He added that the state bomb squad, whenever possible, detonates a bomb at the site where it is found and only move it to the nearest open space when absolutely necessary.

Therefore, Sheets said, claims by Boston officials that Moon Island is the only safe spot for Boston's bomb squad to detonate explosives make no sense.

"That's just not true," he said.

Drive To Aid Homeless Veterans This Weekend

Quincy Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley announces that the Massachusetts Operation Stand Down 1994 to assist homeless veterans will be held this weekend.

The event will take place Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Rotch Park, Randolph and Albany Sts. in Boston's South End.

Bradley said the goal of the event is to do as much as possible to help the veterans back on their feet by collecting food, clothing, money and other supplies and providing other services for them.

"It's a cooperative effort of many organizations getting together trying to assist," said Bradley, who is also state commander of the American Legion.

Bradley also noted that Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director John "Jake" Comer will be on hand to assist the veterans. The QHA and other organizations will do what they can about finding housing for the veterans, he said.

The Veterans Benefits Clearinghouse Inc. (VBC) serves as the lead agency for the Massachusetts Stand Down's statewide direct provision of services to homeless veterans for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Bradley said last year's Stand Down, the first ever in the Boston area, was a tremendous success, serving a total of 633 veterans. Participants came from all geographical areas and from various shelters across the state, he said.

Volunteers are also needed to help at the event. Those interested in making a donation or providing other assistance should call Samuel Martin at the VBC at 445-7030 or call Bradley at 376-1193 for more information.

After Poor Showing Against Walpole

Morrisette Stays Alive With Win Over Arlington

By KERRY BYRNE

Morrisette shortstop Dan Duncan's leaping snare of a sharply cracked line drive provided the final out as his club beat Arlington, 3-0, Sunday in a do-or-die game for both teams in the double-elimination American Legion baseball state tournament at Adams Field.

Duncan's stop came with men on first and second and preserved pitcher Tom Malvesti's complete-game shutout effort. More importantly, the big-league catch capped a remarkable return to the field by Morrisette less than 24 hours after they committed seven errors during a 15-0 drubbing at the hands of Walpole.

"[After the Walpole game] I told the kids to go home and look in the mirror and come here ready to play," said Morrisette coach Dave Perdios after Sunday's win. "We had some things going on off the field that meant our team wasn't in the game mentally. The kids responded today, though."

Malvesti's performance on the hill highlighted the victory. Sticking with the heat for most of the contest, the righty fanned nine and allowed just four hits.

"We thought Malvesti would be strong. We were concerned that he might be too strong. The first few innings he was up with his pitches but then he settled down," said Perdios.

The ace was forced to work his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth after giving up a single and issuing two walks. With two outs he got Bill Christopolous to pop out to Jeff Russell at second to end the threat.

Arlington had another chance to score in the seventh but left men stranded on first and second as Malvesti struck out opposing pitcher Jeff Russell for the final out.

Malvesti was backed by an infield that was completely revamped after the Walpole debacle. Only first baseman Neil Connolly started both games at the same position. Duncan played second against Walpole before switching to short Sunday in place of Malvesti.

"We shuffled everything around," said Perdios. "Andy [Joyce] did a great job behind the plate. He threw a man out early trying to steal and called a great game. We also put a 15-year-old, [Paul] Marnikovic, at third. I think we found our third baseman of the future."

Morrisette scored all three runs in the fourth inning. Connelly was hit by a pitch then stole second. Jim Sapienza's bunt and a subsequent throwing error by Arlington's Russell allowed Connelly to score. Dave Reinhart's two-bagger plated Sapienza. The final run came courtesy of another error - Malvesti hit a sharp grounder that was fielded by second baseman Geoff Tierney but then thrown away, allowing Reinhart to chug home.

Reinhart's double was the game's only extra-base hit. Mark Cahill and Marnikovic both had singles in the seventh for Morrisette's only other hits.

In Saturday's contest, Morrisette crumbled in the field but also found themselves befuddled at the plate due to the impressive outing of Walpole hurler Mike Scarlata.

Scarlata combined a consistently on-target fastball with an extremely effective change-up that had the hometown batters swinging at dust mites. He posted 13 Ks and allowed just three hits in seven innings.

Morrisette was at their worst in the fifth as Walpole scored 10 runs on only three hits. This amazing feat was made possible by a Morrisette team that committed three errors and walked six batters in one inning.

Mark Cahill was Morrisette's top hitter against Walpole. He went 2 for 3, including a double and a walk. Reinhart and Duncan both had singles in the contest.

TOM MALVESTI of Morrisette Post works from the windup in Sunday's 3-0 win over Arlington. Malvesti pitched a complete game, striking out nine and allowing four hits. He sent Arlington down 1-2-3 in five different innings.

MORRISSETTE HEAD COACH Dave Perdios and catcher Andy Joyce confer with pitcher Tom Malvesti in the sixth inning of their 3-0 win over Arlington. "I got three-quarters of the way to the mound and heard Tommy say 'I'm not coming out!'," said Perdios of his highly competitive pitcher after the game.

through four-plus innings. He allowed two singles and only one other ball - a fly-out to left - cleared the infield. On this night, however, that was not a good thing.

Bryan was replaced by Brian Hayes in the fifth after walking two of the three batters he faced.

Cahill pitched the final three and one-third innings for Morrisette, striking out seven.

Connolly Top Junior On The Links

Thirteen-year-old Billy Connolly fired an 84 in the Norfolk County Junior Classic at Presidents Golf Course to finish first among Quincy's juniors in the 13 to 14-year-old division.

Connolly finished sixth place overall.

Earlier in the week, Connolly shot an 85 in the New England Junior Open at Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton but was eliminated from match play in a winner-take-all sudden death playoff that ended on the 19th hole.

Connolly's home course is Presidents. He was scheduled to compete in the junior members championship Aug. 8.

Dawn Brown Memorial Golf Tournament Aug. 22

The first annual Dawn Brown Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Aug. 22 at South Shore Country Club, 274 South St., Hingham.

Registration for the tournament will begin at 7 a.m. and the first tee time will be at 8 a.m. An awards dinner will follow at 1:30 p.m. at The Tent in Marina Bay, Quincy.

The event is being held in memory of Brown, 25, who was shot to death by a lone gunman July 10, 1993 in front of her family's home in Wollaston. Police have indicted John Anthony Diaz, a former boyfriend of Brown's sister

DAWN BROWN

Kimberlee, in connection with the crime.

Authorities believe Diaz mistook Brown for her sister when he shot her in the dark night. Diaz remains uncaptured, and police believe he may have fled the country.

A 1985 graduate of North Quincy High School, Brown was studying to be a nurse at the time of her death. Proceeds from the golf tournament will be used for either one or two scholarships to be given annually to NQHS students who plan to pursue a medical career.

Entry fee is $100. Separate tickets for the barbecue dinner at The Tent are $25. For more information, tickets or registration, call Marty Kelley at the 4-River Neighborhood Eatery on Washington Street, Quincy Point at 479-2400.

Babe Ruth

Mahoney, Corner Lead Elks To Title

John Mahoney went 2 for 2 and scored two runs - including the game winner - as the Elks topped Houghs Neck, 3-2, in the Babe Ruth League title game.

Pitcher Rusty Corner also performed superbly for the Elks. He scored one run and knocked in another while working the hill for six and two-third innings of one-run ball. He was replaced by Matt McLoughlin in the final inning with the tying run in scoring position. McLoughlin got the last batter to pop-up to shallow left field where dashing outfielder Ted McGillicuddy sped towards the foul line to make the grab for the game-ending and title-clinching out.

McLoughlin had a strong day at the plate as well, going 2 for 3 with an RBI. Tim Wood nailed a two-bagger and Andrew Byrne had an RBI. Steve Clarke walked twice.

Third baseman Scott Staiti and catcher Eric Wood had fine defensive performances throughout the season and in the hard-fought championship battle.

Houghs Neck hurler Mark Glynn pitched a complete game, allowing just six hits. He was supported by the efforts of J.P. Laukkanen, Dan Nichol and Brandell Pickney.

Bregoli Shines In Iowa AAU Baseball Tournament

Quincy's Chris Bregoli helped lead the New England Mariners 13-year-old AAU team to a fifth place finish among 36 teams at the National AAU Championships in Des Moines, Iowa.

Bregoli went 6 for 11 with five walks and two RBIs as he DH'd and started five games at second base.

He had the game-winning hit in the Mariners' 9-6 win over the California Thunder of Long Beach. The win put the New England squad in the Gold Medal round.

Bregoli made an impressive diving catch at second base in an 11-1 thrashing of Edina, Minn.

Bregoli also saw time on the mound during the tournament. In a 10-4 win over the Pirates of Johnstown, Ohio, Bregoli worked one inning, allowing no runs, one hit and striking out two.

The Mariners beat Raleigh, N.C., 2-1. The Quincy boy drew a walk in his only at-bat. Bregoli was robbed of an extra-base hit in a 5-2 loss to Connecticut - the eventual tournament champion - when the center fielder made a diving catch of his line drive with two men on base. He singled in the Mariners' 7-5 loss to the Virginia Stars.

New England finished the tourney with a record of 7-3.

Connecticut beat the California Yankees, 9-8, in the title match. Sean Burroughs, hero of the 1993 Little League World Series, was roughed up by the champs. He gave up seven runs, including a grand slam.

Bregoli will travel to Hawaii and Australia with the Mariners during the Christmas vacation for a 13-game exhibition tour.

Kelly Oldest Wollaston Golf Club Champ

Paul Kelly lifted the spirits of the senior circuit last week when he became the oldest man to win the Wollaston Golf Course club championship.

The 65-year-old Quincy resident outdueled the last three club champions in match play to take the title. Each opponent boasted youth, strength and vitality but none could equal the wily veteran's composure down the stretch.

In the final match Kelly beat multiple club championship-winner Mike Prendergast in a sudden-death 19th hole. Prendergast saw the title slip away when he bogeyed the downhill par-4 extra hole.

The turning point of the title match came on the 11th hole with Prendergast holding a 1-stroke edge. Kelly hooked two consecutive shots but sank a 60-foot chip shot to take the hole and tie the match.

Both golfers shot 75 through 18.

Kelly beat Bernie Lynch, also in sudden death, in the semifinal match. Kelly was down by four strokes with four holes left to play before tying the match on the 18th. He birdied the 20th to set up the final match against Prendergast.

PAUL KELLY

The senior linksman needed just 18 holes to dispense of defending club champion Joe Gilmore in the opening round of match play. "Babyface" Gilmore is in his 30s.

Kelly has been playing golf for over 50 years. He won his first club championship at Commonwealth Golf Course in Brighton 41 years ago.

Lions Junior League Kings

The Lions were crowned champions of the Junior League after a thrilling 6-5 extra-inning win over Burgin Platner.

Ryan Krueger's two-out, bases-loaded hit in the bottom of the eighth provided the winning margin.

Josh Smith led the eighth with a walk and went to third on a long double by Brian Deputala. With two out Andrew Currie walked to load the bases and set the stage for Krueger's heroics. The game-winner was his third hit of the contest.

Pitcher Danny O'Toole looked strong in the two extra sessions. He notched four strikeouts for the biggest win to date in his young career.

The championship game proved to be a saw-saw battle. Burgin Platner opened the scoring with three runs in the top of the third. A walk, an error, singles by Jesse Winter and Paul Skarzenski, and a double by Brendan Bowes led to the runs.

The Lions bounced back to tie it with three runs in the bottom of the fourth. Singles by Freddie Batts and Kevin Weeks, a well-placed bunt by Dan Dorsey and walks by Smith and Tommy Buckley brought in two runs. Currie notched an RBI on a fielder's choice groundout.

BP regained the lead when Winter (3 for 4) doubled and scored on Bowes' single.

The Lions took a 5-4 lead - their first of the game - when Smith's three-bagger in the fifth plated Krueger and Brandon Sleeth.

In the sixth, Andy Mannix tripled and scored on a groundout by Paul Adams to tie the contest for Burgin Platner and send the game into extra innings.

All-star center fielder Joey MacRitchie forced the game into extra innings with an outstanding running catch in the last of the sixth.

Lions' starting pitcher Currie struck out 10 batters in six innings. Winter was impressive for BP with 12 Ks.

Bowes was the MVP for the Burgin club. The catcher threw out two potential base stealers to go with his three hits and three RBIs. Hurler Sean Adams was valiant on the mound in the final two pressure-packed innings. Andy Heckman, Ryan McMahon and Casey Hills played solid defense.

The first game of the championship series was the Brian Deputala show. He struck out 15 batters and blasted a tremendous shot over the left-center fence to lead the Lions to an 11-1 win.

The Lions finished the season with a league-best record of 22-4.

Quincy High Honors Track Stars

The Quincy High School boys' and girls' spring track, winter track and cross country teams were honored at an awards banquet hosted by coaches John Franceschini, Bob Noble, Ray Papile, Jack Raymer and Sonja Herring.

The Quincy High coaching staff extending their congratulations to all these athletes for a great year.

American League Wins International All-Star Game

The American League outgained the National League, 24-9, in the International League 15-year-old All-Star Game.

John Leonard notched two singles and earned the American League MVP award.

Mike Struzik led the winning attack with a single and a double. John Hanifan, Bill O'Connell, Matt Langille and Chuck Feeley belted out two singles each. Also hitting the ball well were Mark Adams and Chris Koch. Both had doubles.

Fielders Pat McDonagh, Tim Lewis, Mike Marinelli, Kevin Sullivan and Matt Foley kept the National League in check. The top defensive plays were made by Steve Gilda, who had two superb plays at the hot corner, and Jerry Knowles, who made a great catch of a deep shot to right field. Stalking the hill for the AL were Koch, Struzik, Hanifan, Leonard, McDonagh and Feeley.

Mike Martin earned MVP honors for the National League with a double and solid play in the field. John Leuchte's three singles paced the National League attack.

Playing well defensively were John Heim, Rob Blaikie, Dan Collins, Ryan Catarins, Chris Geary, Chuck O'Brien, Jeff Chu, Matt Noonan and Joe Vando.

Colin Kearney, Brad Brooks, Jeurik Samborski,

Vando, Heim and Brad McAuley worked the mound for the National League.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It isn't the things that go in one ear and out the other that hurt, as much as the things that go in one ear and get all mixed up before they slip out the mouth...

A wit once wisely cracked, "Nothing is opened more by mistake than the mouth." It was meant in just but it also has a serious meaning. For instance, can any one honestly say he has never said the wrong thing at the wrong time? Herby, When a faint-pen like that happens, one regrets it. An unthinking slip of the tongue can happen to anyone. It is understandable. However, an outright lie—especially an untrue and unconfirmed rumor spoken behind the back of someone, is not and slip of the tongue. Instead, it is a slippery slide that debases a human mind.

Because malicious gossip can malign, tragically taint or ruin a person's character and reputation, the act is inexcusable. The offended person must truly stretch religious instincts of compassion, forgiveness and understanding of a non-understandable offense. The victim must show considerable courage to believe the accuracy of right will prevail. It takes even more courage to adhere to Ecclesiastes 7:2: "be not quick to anger, for anger lodges in the bosom of fools."

At Union Congregational Rev. John Swanson Has High Goals As New Pastor

By WAYNE
FITZPATRICK

Rev. John Swanson, Coast Guard chaplain and pastor of Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston has brought high hopes and high spirits to his new position.

Rev. Swanson, 37, was installed as permanent pastor of the church on Pentecost Sunday, May 22.

In a recent interview with The Quincy Sun, he outlined his main goals for the church, described his role as a parish minister, and recalled his decision to join the ministry.

He also said he is happy to return to his native city of Quincy and expressed optimism about his new role at Union Congregational.

"I am glad to be back in Quincy and have high hopes for this church," said Rev. Swanson, who was born in West Quincy.

The goals which Rev. Swanson has set for the church are to triple its population, enhance its visibility, and have it become more active in the community. In order to do these things, he said, he will need the help of his congregation as well as other Quincy residents.

"It's going to have to be through the people that I meet these goals," he said, dressed in his light blue uniform.

Rev. Swanson said he wants to see the church become a more important part of people's lives, regardless of their religious or spiritual background.

"I'd like to see the church become a focal point in the community," he said. "I'd like to see a youth center here. I'd like to see a couple of AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) groups. Basically, I want to have the church function as part of the community."

Rev. Swanson said he hopes all types of people will look to his church for help.

"People in the community should feel that the church has an interest in their lives whether they are Congregationalists or not," he said.

'Vacation Bible School' Aug. 22-26 At Salvation Army

The Salvation Army will hold Vacation Bible School for children ages 4 to 14, Monday through Friday, Aug. 22 through Aug. 26, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the corp's office at 6 Baxter St., Quincy Point. "A Week At The

REV. JOHN SWANSON

It is crucial for the church to become involved in people's lives because, according to Rev. Swanson, "this country is in a mess morally."

He also said he plans to work with the city, other churches, community groups and through visibility to help reach his goals, noting that counseling is one of his main duties as chaplain.

"I basically counsel," he said. "You can talk to the chaplain about something you can't talk to someone else about and everything is confidential."

As a chaplain, Rev. Swanson has been able to help many servicemen and women during his 10 years of service. And it is helping others, he said, which makes the job all the more worthwhile.

"I have been able to help a lot of people and that feels good. That is probably one of the most satisfying facets of my ministry," he said.

Rev. Swanson described his choice to join the ministry as a "calling which a person prepares for their whole life whether they realize it or not."

"I never thought I'd be in parish ministry, to be honest," he said. "I actually originally thought I was going to be an active duty Navy chaplain, but God had something different planned."

Rev. Swanson recently returned from a three-week tour of duty with the 3rd Division Marines in Okinawa and received a new marine hairstyle as a souvenir. His wife, Rev. Martha Swanson, is a minister at Christ Evangelical Church in Andover-Newton.

Beach" is the theme for this year's program. Activities each evening will include crafts, Bible stories and games. Snacks will be provided.

Plan To Stimulate Center Retail Activity Approved

The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) Board of Directors has voted to accept a plan aimed at stimulating retail activity in downtown Quincy.

The association has more than 146 retail, service and professional members.

The action taken by the QCBPA board Tuesday paves the way for a $150,000 grant from Atlantic Development Co., a Hingham-based company that worked alongside the board to create a comprehensive program.

Currently, Quincy is losing more than $100 million annually in resident retail dollars to neighboring South Shore shopping outlets. In June, the QCBPA voted not to oppose Atlantic Development's Granite Crossing Shopping Center, a 240,000 square-foot facility proposed for a vacant lot at the city's Southern Artery-Quincy Ave. intersection. The $20 million project is expected to house a Wal-Mart and supermarket, employing area union workers during construction, generating roughly 500 full and part-time jobs and $575,000 in new property taxes.

With the June vote, the QCBPA also established a special committee to work with the developer in an attempt to bring immediate improvements to Quincy's retail sector. The result is the approval of a far-reaching plan, supported by funding from Atlantic Development, pending approval of Granite Crossing by the city. This includes $135,000 to be used by QCBPA for advertising activities during the next three years. Another $15,000 has been pledged for signage in the downtown, as well as at Granite Crossing to direct shoppers to Quincy Center. An educational program for area merchants is also being developed.

"This is going to give us a level of funding that has not been available to QCBPA in the past," said Caryn Smith, owner of Caryn's Corner in Quincy and president of the QCBPA. "Through the use of this revenue we hope to raise the awareness of Quincy Center as a shopping location."

"Once we attract consumers," Smith continued, "it's then the responsibility of individual merchants to ensure the experience in enjoyable. Our relationship with the developer has been pleasurable and we are all very excited about the future of the downtown area."

Long range improvement measures are also underway involving Atlantic Development and The Quincy 2000 Corporation, the city's public-private partnership for economic development. Already, the developer has contributed $30,000 towards demolition work to prepare for a major retailer in Quincy, despite not being involved in the project.

An additional $100,000 will be allocated pending approval of Granite Crossing. The developer has also agreed to assist with permitting for the Court House Square project at the John Hancock parking area, which could run as high as $150,000.

"With the development of the downtown, Quincy hopes to retain some of the hundreds of millions of dollars in retail spending now leaving the city," said Chuck D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000. "A strong anchor store, along with Court House Square—a facility to could accommodate 1000 employees—will make this area more attractive. That translates into much needed jobs, increased shopping, as well as new business for Quincy Center."

In an attempt to further help local retailers, Quincy 2000 has enlisted Quincy College's Division of Continuing Education to develop a program that provides business owners with the skills necessary to succeed in a highly competitive environment. A number of prominent national consultants are expected to speak at the forum as well. The program is receiving the assistance of the QCBPA and Quincy Business Council of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Atlantic Development has also pledged financial support upon approval of Granite Crossing.

"We are extremely pleased with our decision to invest in Quincy," said Donald J. MacKinnon, head of Atlantic Development. "Business groups and owners, city council members and public officials, all have the same goals in mind."

"The focus is to create jobs and enhance the financial outlook of the city. As a result of this cooperative atmosphere that exists, there is no doubt that Quincy will become an even greater force in the South Shore commercial marketplace," MacKinnon added.

CHECK-UPS FOR SCHOOL SPORTS

Before an adult begins an exercise program, there is usually a stern reminder to first get an OK from a personal care physician. This type of caution is sometimes forgotten, however, when it comes to our children. Maybe it is because children seem so naturally healthy and far removed from the health concerns that become more common with age. Whatever the reason, such lack of precaution can open the way for potential disasters. As part of their regular health care, children should get clearance from their doctors to participate in routine school or camp activities as well as to join in specific competitive sports. An up-to-date health history and schedule of immunizations should be a part of such a review process.

P.S. Schools often offer screenings that can identify conditions needing further medical attention. Ask about them!

Adults and children alike can benefit from having a thorough medical exam before embarking on a rigorous training program. For more information on this, or any aspect of health care, call the doctors—myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our office is located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. INVITATION FOR BIDS

INVITATION FOR BIDS

Sealed bids for construction of the Northwest Quincy Drainage Improvements Project Phase 1A for the City of Quincy, Massachusetts will be received at the Offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, Massachusetts until 10:00 AM prevailing time, on Thursday, September 8, 1994 at which time and place sealed bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The scope of work includes construction of approximately 200 l.f. of 12-inch PVC storm drain, 1,500 l.f. of 24-inch PVC storm drain, and the associated appurtenances.

Bid surety in the form of a bid bond, cash, certified check, treasurer's or cashier's check, payable to the City of Quincy, is required in a dollar amount of five percent (5%) of the bid amount.

The Instructions to Bidders, Form of the General Bid, Agreement, Plans, Specifications, Performance and Payment Bonds and other contract documents may be examined at the following:

Weston & Sampson Engineers, Inc.
Peabody, Massachusetts
Department of Public Works
Quincy, Massachusetts

Copies of plans and specifications may be obtained at the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on payment of a non-refundable fee of $60.00, cash or check payable to the City of Quincy, for each set.

Contract Documents and plans will be mailed to prospective bidders upon receipt and receipt of a separate non-refundable check, payable to the City of Quincy in the amount of $15.00 to cover handling and mailing fees.

All prospective bidders must be qualified by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Highway Department, Contract Regulations Division, 10 Park Plaza, Room 7552, Boston, Massachusetts 02116. A copy of the bidder's qualification certificate should be submitted to the City prior to obtaining contract documents and plans. All bids for this project are subject to applicable bidding laws of Massachusetts, including General Laws, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as amended.

Minority Business Enterprise (MBE) and Women's Business Enterprise (WBE) policies of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the City of Quincy are applicable to this contract. The goals for this project are as follows:

1. The Contractor shall maintain on this project a not less than ten (10%) percent ratio of minority employee manhours to total manhours in each job category.

2. A minimum of ten percent (10%) MBE participation and five percent (5%) WBE participation of state-certified MBEs and WBEs. The bidder shall submit completed MBE/WBE forms and WOMWBA certification letters with the bid.

Failure to comply with the requirements of this paragraph may be deemed to render a proposal non-responsive. The bidders attention is called to the requirements and conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract as determined by the Department of Labor and Industries under the provisions of the Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 149, Sections 26-17D, inclusive, as amended.

The selected contractor shall furnish a performance bond and a payment bond in the amount at least equal to one hundred percent (100%) of the contract price as stipulated in Section 0700 GENERAL CONDITIONS of these specifications.

The Bidder agrees that this bid shall be good and may not be withdrawn for a period of 60 days, Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays excluded, after the opening of the bids.

Compliance with the City of Quincy's Ordinance requiring contractors working on city-supported construction projects to hire a certain percentage of Quincy residents is mandatory.

The City reserves the right to waive any informalities or to reject any or all bids if it is deemed in the best interest of the City.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN (Never Known to Fail)
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. K.M.D. 8/11

New Pre-Physical Therapy Program At QHS

The Quincy Center for Technical Education has been awarded funding to implement a Pre-Physical Therapy Program at Quincy High School in September.

The funding was acquired in a collaborative effort with Quincy College.

The program will provide up to 15 seniors with an opportunity to explore careers in physical therapy and sports medicine. The two-period-a-day program will prepare students for employment as physical therapy aides.

It is also intended to encourage students to continue their education by enrolling in a two-year degree program for physical therapy assistants or four or five-year programs in recreation, athletic training and physical therapy.

Interested students may request an application from:

Dr. Angela Avery, Director of Occupational Occupation, Center for Technical Education, 107

Woodward Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Application deadline is Aug. 24.

City Eyeing Appeal

Quincy Loses Lawsuit Over MWRA Rates

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy has lost a legal battle in its fight against Massachusetts Water Resources Authority water and sewer rates, but city officials hope to appeal the decision.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said Suffolk Superior Court Judge Gordon Doerfer has ruled against the city's attempt to change the MWRA's current method of charging its water and sewer rates. The city learned of the judge's decision on Tuesday, he said.

At press time, McGrath said the city was examining various avenues of appeal and would know whether it could challenge the decision by the end of the week.

"We fully intend to explore that (appeal process) and protect the city's interests," he said.

Mayor James Sheets said that while he is disappointed by the judge's decision, he still believes the city will ultimately emerge victorious as far as the MWRA rates are concerned and bring relief to "weary ratepayers."

"We're going to lose some of the battles, but we're very confident in the final analysis that we're going to win the war," said Sheets.

McGrath said that officials from Quincy and from Boston—the other community battling the MWRA in the lawsuit—appeared before Doerfer in Boston for a motion of summary judgement hearing in Boston June 29. He added that Doerfer had previously ruled against an MWRA attempt to have the case thrown out of court last fall.

Motion of summary judgement means that the party filing the lawsuit claims that no facts in the case in dispute, meaning that there is no need for a trial and the judge makes a final decision based on

Site Must Be Cleaned Up First Weld Urges MWRA To Lease Shipyard For Cruise Ship Construction

By LIAM FITZGERALD
Gov. William Weld toured the idle Fore River shipyard in Quincy last week and advised the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to move along on the lease of the shipyard, thereby bringing the date of reopening that much closer for the yard to begin building ships again.

"There's a real opportunity here if we can get the lease signed, since the European yards are so clogged up they can't build any more ships for another five years," Weld said during his Cabinet Day trip to the South Shore. "There's an increase in demand, so this is our opportunity and why not Quincy? There's room right here."

Regency Holdings Inc., a Greek shipbuilding firm that wants to lease a large portion of the yard to build cruise ships, is reportedly close to inking a deal, according to state negotiators.

When the lease is signed, the firm and the yard could be the recipients of $230 million in federal guarantees procured by Rep. Gerry Snudds earlier this summer.

Since the labor issues have been worked out, that leaves the problem of figuring out who is responsible for the site's cleanup, where test have resulted in findings of asbestos, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) and underground oil.

During the tour of the yard led by MWRA executive director Douglas MacDonald, Weld inquired as to who was "dragging anchor" on the lease.

"Is it the MWRA?" Weld asked, chuckling.

Before MacDonald could deny any wrongdoing by the MWRA, Mayor James Sheets entered the conversation.

"Yes they are," Sheets said as he perused the ghost-town atmosphere of the once-proud shipyard. "There's a lot of woodsheds we could take them into, governor."

MacDonald said the agency did not cause the damage, so it should not be up to them to clean up the site. He added that

23 Apply For Board Posts At Quincy College

Twenty-three people have applied for one of 11 available positions on the soon-to-be-formed Quincy College Board of Trustees, according to School Supt. Eugene Creedon.

The superintendent said at press time that applications for the positions have been coming in daily.

"I think we've got quite a healthy group to choose from now," said Creedon, who added that he is confident more applications will be submitted. "Twenty-three outstanding citizens have applied so far."

Deadline to submit applications is Aug. 25.

Quincy College has traditionally been governed by the School Committee, but a governance change was made necessary when the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) ruled last year that the college must change its governance system or risk losing its accreditation.

Officials said they felt the college had grown to a point where an independent board of trustees was necessary for the school to meet NEASC requirements.

In March, the City Council passed Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition calling for a new 13-member board of trustees. The petition was subsequently passed by the state Legislature and signed by Gov. William Weld.

Aug. 24 Last Day To Register For State Primary

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
Unregistered voters in Quincy who want to vote in the Sept. 20th primary election have less than a week to register.

The deadline to register for the state primary is Wednesday, Aug. 24. City Hall will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. to accommodate last-minute would-be voters on the final day of registration.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said he estimates 500 new voters will be added to the city's registered voter rolls before next Wednesday's deadline. Since this election is a non-presidential year, the clerk said he would be happy to receive 500 new voters.

"I will be pleased if we get 500 new voters. Unlike presidential election years when we get thousands of new voters, 500 is good for a non-presidential year," he said.

The most recent records show Quincy has 45,319 registered voters. Of that figure, 27,506 are Democrats, 11,528 are undeclared or unenrolled (formerly Independent); and 6,282 are Republicans. There are also three Libertarians. Election officials say some voters have joined the "United We Stand" party founded by former presidential candidate H. Ross Perot.

There are only a few races on each primary ballot next month. Yet, the primary is generating some interest attested by the fact that mail-in postcard voter registration has topped the 100 marked mid-way through its

SS Elder Services Walk-A-Thon Sept. 18

South Shore Elder Services will hold its annual Walk-A-Thon for the Meals on Wheels Program Sunday, Sept. 18 at 11:30 a.m.

Registration is from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. The walk will begin at the Braintree Town Hall and continue onto the track field of Thayer Academy in Braintree.

Proceeds will be used to provide meals to those elders who are alone on Thanksgiving and Christmas Day.

This year's walk is the kick-off to the Braintree

Multi-Cultural Festival, which will take place from noon to 6 p.m. Events will include international food booths, music, ethnic dancers, crafts, a health fair and more.

For more information, call 848-3910.

2,000 Bricks Available

Second Phase Of 'Walk Of Names' Now Underway

Approximately 2,000 bricks are now available for the second phase of the "Walk of Names" project in front of City Hall Annex in Quincy Center, Mayor James Sheets has announced.

Phase 1 of the project was recently completed. Phase 2 will extend the brick walkways into McIntyre Mall and the area leading to the Quincy Center MBTA Station.

The city has raised the necessary funding for the project through an engraved brick paver program. More than 3,000 individuals, groups and businesses purchased brick pavers for the first phase of the project, and the second phase allows for an additional 2,000 engraved bricks as part of its design.

For each $50 donation to the project, a brick will be personalized with up to two lines of 15 characters each. Historic street lamps are also available for a donation and can be dedicated in honor of a particular group, company or individual.

Construction of Phase 2 is scheduled to begin in the fall, or as soon as all engraved pavers are purchased.

Orders for personalized bricks may be placed by calling 376-3676. Order forms are available at City Hall. For information about donating a lamp post, call the mayor's office at 376-1990.

At Quincy District Court Visit $1 Million For Domestic Violence Programs Unveiled By Cellucci

By LIAM FITZGERALD

At one of his four stops in the Quincy area during the Weld Cabinet Day on the South Shore last week, Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci announced over $1 million in new funding to help in the battle to end domestic violence in the state.

The announcement by Cellucci at Quincy District Court increases the total amount of funding by the state to just over $10 million.

State and city officials in attendance included Secretary of Health and Human Services Charles Baker, Mayor James Sheets, State Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Steve Tobin and Judge Charles Black.

"I make this announcement of increased funding to fight domestic violence with mixed emotions," Cellucci said. "I am greatly saddened by this epidemic, but I am pleased we have set this battle as a key priority of the Weld-Cellucci administration."

Cellucci said the state allocated $4.8 million to the domestic violence cause in 1991. Since then, the state has consistently raised the funding level. Cellucci also noted that the administration has filed a $4.95 million supplemental request to further expand services to fight domestic violence.

"Domestic violence is no longer a silent family issue, wreaking havoc on children and women behind closed doors and it is no longer an issue that does not receive priority funding from those in government entrusted to keep women and children safe," Cellucci said.

Cellucci said the additional funds will double the number of domestic violence specialists at the Department of Social Services to identify and work with families in abusive environments and to increase funding to community battered women's programs like DOVE in Quincy, which serves as a model for other shelters across the state.

The lieutenant governor also called for continued collaboration among all disciplines to effectively fight what he called "one of the most critical social ills facing us today."

According to Cellucci, 29 women and five children were murdered in Massachusetts by their husbands, boyfriends or fathers in 1993. He said hotlines received over 96,000 calls for help around domestic violence last year. Approximately 3,000 women were sheltered in Massachusetts in 1993.

Rep. Tobin, who along with Morrissey commended the continuous dedication of the DOVE employees, said the best thing the public can do to fight domestic violence would be to listen to those with the knowledge and experience who have worked with the victims of domestic violence.

"Just by being here and talking to two people who work at the local DOVE shelter, I learned that what they want to see is a little more funding towards transitional housing, helping women coming out of shelters get set up so they can start to build a home," Tobin said.

Tax Facts When Buying Or Selling Your Home

The IRS says there's good news and bad news for some people buying new homes.

The good news is that a person can frequently postpone taxes on profits realized from the sale of a private home. The bad news is, losses from such sales are not tax deductible.

When buying a new home costing as much as or more than the adjusted sales price of the old home, taxpayers can postpone paying taxes on any gain. The new home generally must be purchased within two years after the sale of the old home.

For tax purposes, the amount realized from the house sale is the selling price of the old home minus selling expenses. Such selling expenses include commissions, advertising and legal fees.

"Fixing-up expenses, such as painting and repairing broken windows, cannot be considered selling expenses but usually can be used in figuring the part of the gain that can be postponed," said Francine Crowley, Boston IRS District Director. The gain from the sale is the amount realized minus the adjusted basis of the old home.

"For these tax purposes, home is defined as: a house, cooperative apartment, condominium, houseboat or mobile home," added Crowley.

More information on the buying and selling of homes can be found in IRS Publication 523, "Selling Your Home," and Publication 530, "Tax Information for First-Time Homeowners."

BREAST CANCER: RATING THE RISKS

When it was recently reported that a woman's risk of developing breast cancer has jumped from one in nine to one in eight, needless to say, millions of women found the news alarming. While the statistics are disturbing, however, a fuller account of just what the numbers mean may help put the situation into perspective. The one-in-eight estimate is a lifetime figure; one out of eight American women will be diagnosed with breast cancer at some point in her lifetime. The statistics are much less grim when broken down into specific age groups. For example, a woman in her 30's has only about a 1-in-230 chance of developing the disease. The best statistic is that the risk of dying from breast cancer is 1 in

28. P.S. Breast cancer is the number one health fear among U.S. women, even though heart disease claims many more lives.

Women can reduce their risk of breast cancer by switching to a diet low in saturated fats, by cutting back on alcohol consumption, and by quitting smoking today. Not So Much Bounce

Michael Cheney and Tim Cahill wrestled one another for this year's City Council presidency mainly because it has long been considered a stepping stone to the mayor's office.

Cheney won the honor when he wooed Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers into his camp to break a 4-to-4 vote deadlock.

But is the City Council presidency really the political springboard to the mayor's office that most people think it is?

Actually that so-called springboard hasn't had that much bounce down through the years.

Of the 44 men and one woman (Patricia Toland) before Cheney to wield the gavel since Quincy became a city in 1889 only 12 have gone on to become mayor.

The 12:

Henry Fairbanks, John Thompson, Charles Bryant, Joseph Whiton, Charles Ross, Thomas Burgin, David McIntosh (Plan E), Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin and James Sheets.

Sixteen others became mayor without winning the City Council presidency first. The most recent was Francis McCauley.

A few of those who served as council presidents but never got to be mayor went on to other political plateaus.

Myron Lane and George Burke both became Norfolk County district attorney. William Jenness, Clifton Baker and Charles Shea were elected state representatives.

(Steve McGrath is now the city solicitor and Pat Toland is assistant city clerk.)

For most of the 44, the high spot of their political careers was being City Council president.

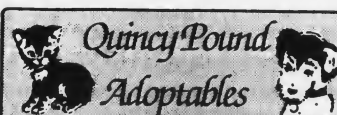

And, as time goes by, their names seem to fade in memory.

Like, for example, Herbert M. Federhen.

His name means little politically to anyone except, maybe, a Quincy history buff.

The oldest warship still afloat is the Constitution, built in 1797.

Lab, female, black with white chest, 2 years, abandoned at the pound.

Shepherd-Lab, male, 1 1/2 years, black & brown.

Boxer cross, female, 1 year, tan, smooth coat.

Boston Terrier Purebred, neutered male, adult, black & white.

Federhen was Quincy's very first City Council president in 1889.

A Quincy "first," but now forgotten. James Sheets is the most recent council president to make it to the mayor's office.

Will Mike Cheney be next? Or will it be someone who hasn't been elected City Council president yet?

Or, someone who hasn't even been elected to the council yet?

SHEETS

SENATOR MICHAEL MORRISSEY had a planned get-together with Rockland voters at Cataloni's Restaurant in that town but couldn't make it because the Senate was still in session.

Former Senator Paul Harold pinched hit for him along with MORRISSEY Morrissey's wife, Joanne. And this might make you feel a little older: it happened to be Morrissey's birthday—his 40th.

Morrissey has opened his campaign headquarters at 87 Penn St., South Quincy. Reason for that location is that it is close to the Expressway and Rte. 3.

Which makes it easier to reach the new North Plymouth District which now includes: all of Quincy, all of Holbrook, three-quarters of Braintree, half of Abington and seven-eighths of Rockland.

It used to be nice and simple: Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, Avon.

And then the boys on Beacon Hill did their little redistricting magic.

TED MCCLELLAND, where are you?

The committee planning a reunion of all 26 living former city councillors along with the nine present members has located all but one.

The missing one is McClelland (real first name Thelophius) who served as Ward 3 councillor from 1972-73.

"We have located everyone else," says former Mayor Frank McCauley, a former councillor and school committee member, who is serving as the historian and statistician for the event which is being planned for the fall.

The committee, incidentally found another former Ward 3 councillor, James McCormack, who was also a state senator, now living in Maryland.

In addition to McCauley, the reunion committee, comprises of Dist. Atty. William Delahunt and former Dist. Atty. George Burke, Joanne Condon Walsh and Leo Kelly, all former councillors.

The committee would like to hear from you if you know where McClelland is living.

Our Policy On Letters To The Editor

The Quincy Sun welcomes letters for publication from our readers.

The letters should be of interest to the Quincy community and should be fairly brief and to the point.

They must be signed by the writer and include a telephone number where the writer may be reached during the day for verification.

Letters should also contain the address of the writer but will be withheld if requested for good reason.

Sorry, but The Sun does not publish anonymous letters.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD VIEW of the old steamboat landing at the end of Houghs Neck was taken in 1911 from the veranda of the Quincy Yacht Club. Steamboat service to this popular summer resort area was available from Boston every few hours and it then connected on to Nantasket. Notice the horse and wagon on the pier which extended out a few hundred feet to reach a deep water channel dredged there in 1901. A public landing for access to the shore is still maintained at this site today but the pier and the old steamboats can only be reached by the public through these old postcards.

Takes Issue With New City Street Map

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Quincy's updated city street map, which also highlights the Quincy Historic Walking Trail, has no access roads from Highways 3-93-128 at South Quincy to Burgin Parkway or to the Quincy Adams MBTA Station garage. Burgin Parkway and Center Street end at the MBTA Station.

The map still has Center Street from the MBTA Station to Independence Avenue into Braintree, and it is no longer an exit. Penn Street ends at Burgin Parkway, not on Center Street. Folsom Street is no longer an exit, it is part of the Crown Colony Office Park.

Being close to the MBTA Station and Highways 3-93-128, my observations on the street map are only in South Quincy.

Keep Quincy Shopping Dollars In Quincy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Quincy 2000, the mayor and many of our business leaders agree that Quincy needs more businesses. We have a great opportunity to welcome one of America's most successful companies to our city. We should support the development of Granite Crossing Shopping Center.

2000 and many local businesses have said it will have a positive effect on business.

Too many of us are leaving the city and spending our money in malls in other towns contributing to their economy while siphoning off dollars from out town. We can stop this by helping the revitalization of Quincy with the Granite Crossing Shopping Center as a major step.

This shopping center will keep Quincy shopping dollars in Quincy, add tax revenues, provide construction jobs and then permanent jobs in the stores.

Let's try to keep this opportunity here for Quincy residents to benefit from and not send it to one of the neighboring towns.

Lack Of Money Closes City Playgrounds Early

The City Council turned down a request by the Park Board for additional funds and the Board immediately shut down the city's playgrounds in order to save $324 in supervisor's salaries.

Foreman Cardarelli was the only employee left in the Park Department and he was transferred to the Highway Department where there were enough funds to pay for the removing equipment from the closed playgrounds.

The Park Board had asked the Council for a supplementary budget of $1,300 to take the playgrounds through to Labor Day.

HOOVER PRAISED

Cong. Richard B. Wigglesworth told a Quincy Rotary Club luncheon that he had nothing but praise for President Herbert Hoover whose reconstruction program, he said, was pulling the nation out of the Depression.

"The nation as a whole," he said, "has yet to appreciate the widespread outlines of the program advanced by the President to meet the onslaught of encircling depression in the difficult days through which we have passed."

GIFT FROM SHIPYARD

A special City Council committee was set up to deal with the administration and rehabilitation of Fore River Field in Quincy Point which was offered to the city by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. as a gift for $1.

The field was expected to be ready for football games in the fall.

FLOUR TRUCK MOBBED

A Red Cross Employment Service Bureau truck with 265 bags of flour for the needy was mobbed for nearly an hour by some 100 men and women on South Walnut St. after a woman protested she had been taken off the list for free flour.

QUINCY-ISMS

The Times of London explained to English readers that James H. (Two Gun) Baker was not a bandit but "an officer on the Quincy police force who, during 10 years of service, has apprehended 33,000 motorists for speeding and other traffic offenses . . . Luke E. Keeley of Milton filed papers to run for the state senate against Sen. John D. Mackay of Quincy, who had never had Democratic opposition for the post . . . Lobsters were 25 cents a pound and oranges two dozen for 25 cents at the Mohican Market, 13-25 Chestnut St. . . . Dr. James H. Bartlett Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Bartlett of 49 Bicknell St., Germantown, was acclaimed for his work with atomic weights . . . Rose Tumquist, secretary to Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, and her sister, Ruth, left for a week's vacation in St. John, N.B. . . . Conductor Louis Cipullo led the Wollaston Legion Band in concert at the Merrymount Acoustic Shell . . . The Veterans Political Association held an organizational meeting and elected Willard Nichols president and reaffirmed its opposition to the re-election of Cong. Wigglesworth . . . The Rev. Michael J. Owens, pastor of St. John's Church, left for Rome to attend the consecration of his cousin, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis J. Spellman, as auxiliary bishop of Boston . . . The luncheon of lobster newburg on toast points and fresh green peas was 50 cents at Howard Johnson's restaurant in the Granite Trust building . . . Austin Leach of 10 Abbey Rd., Quincy Point, won a trip for two to New York in a drawing at the Strand Theater and District Court Judge Kenneth D. Johnson waived the five-day waiting period so he could marry May Fraser of Weymouth and take her to the big city on a wedding trip . . . The City Council overrode Mayor McGrath's veto and approved a clam chlorination plant proposed by E. Granville Green to employ 50 to 75 men at 645 Sea St., Houghs Neck . . . Seat covers for two-passenger cars were $195 at Gofkauf's, 1562 1/2 Hancock St. . . . "Winner Take All," in which James Cagney "trades socks with bruisers and kisses with blondes," was playing at the Strand . . . The City Council took the first steps toward providing three months work for 200 jobless men at $12 a week by setting public hearing dates for assessment of three miles of streets to be resurfaced for $33,700 .

Clarinetist, Pianist To Perform At First Parish Church Saturday

Clarinetist Jonathan Cohler and pianist David Alpher will perform Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The performance will conclude the Presidents Church Summer Music Festival 1994 being presented at the church by Scarborough Productions and its artistic director, Virginia Sindelar. The concerts are made possible in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Arts Council that is administered by the Quincy Arts Council.

Saturday's performance will be "Opera a la Clarinet." It will include works by Schubert, Schumann and other composers.

Cohler, a Boston native, is recognized internationally as a virtuoso clarinetist. He has made several recordings, performed at a number of festivals and toured the United States, Japan and Europe. Cohler is clarinetist and conductor of the Scarborough Chamber Players and assistant conductor of the Youth Philharmonic Orchestra of the New England Conservatory.

Alpher, a resident of Gloucester, is a recording artist and has also performed at many festivals. His compositions are known in the United States, South America and Europe. He was also co-founder of the Rockport Music Festival and its music director for nine years.

The concert will also include historical commentary on 19th century members of the Adams family by Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, director of the Quincy Historical Society.

For tickets or more information, call 328-0677.

Organist To Perform At Bethany Aug. 24

Organist Gregory Flynn will perform Wednesday, Aug. 24 at 12:15 p.m. at Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington Sts., Quincy Center.

The performance will conclude the Mid-Week Concert Series at the church presented by the Friends of Bethany, a group coordinated by Joanne French.

A native of Jacksonville, Ill., Flynn earned a B.A. in music and political science from the University of St. Louis and a number of degrees from the University of Michigan. He has continued to study organ here and abroad and is currently organist and choir director at Bethany.

Flynn's program Aug. 24 will include works by Pachelbel, Paganini and other composers.

A lunch will be available in the Allen Parlor of the church following the concert.

Central Junior High Reunion Sept. 24

The Central Junior High School classes of 1969 and 1970 will hold a "Night to Remember" Reunion Saturday, Sept. 24 from 6 to 10 p.m. at The Ocean Terrace, 333 Victory Rd., Marina Bay.

Cost is $25. Entertainment will include '60s and '70s music and will be provided by Upbeat and D.J. Nancy Rhodes. A Texas-style barbecue will be served.

Reservations must be made in advance. Checks made payable to "Central Reunion" may be mailed to the same c/o Marion Dolbeare, 16 Gladstone St., Quincy, MA 02171.

Paula Ann Langille Accepted Into U.S. Naval Academy

Paula Ann Langille of North Quincy has been accepted into the U.S. Naval Academy.

Langille was one of 14 students nominated by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds in 1994 for appointment to the U.S. Service Academies who were accepted by one or more of the institutions.

Eight of the 14 students, including Langille, were from the South Shore. Two students from Abington, two from Scituate and one apiece from Cohasset, Hanover, and Hingham were also accepted.

"These young people and their families can be very proud," said Studds. "I have every confidence they will succeed in the challenging environment of the academies and go on to become exceptional representatives of our nation."

The academies also include the U.S. Air Force Academy and the U.S.

Military Academy.

The appointees were interviewed in January by members of the congressman's Service Academy Nominee Selection Committee. The names of those students recommended by the committee were then forwarded to the academies, whose final appointments were made on a strictly competitive basis.

Studds said all interested students may apply for nominations for the 1995-96 academic year. To be eligible, a student must be a resident of the 10th Congressional District who has graduated from high school by June 1995. Application deadline is Nov. 1, 1994.

For more information, call Studds' office at 1-800-794-9911.

Quincy High Students Visit N.E. Institute Of Technology

New England Institute of Technology in Warwick, R.I., recently hosted 55 high school students who are part of the Quincy Tech Prep program.

Quincy Tech Prep is a program offered during the summer which allows Quincy High School students to explore career paths by visiting colleges in the region.

Students who participated were allowed to tour New England Tech's 18 career/technical programs, allowing each participant the opportunity to make decisions about career options available to them.

New England Tech is the largest career/technical college in New England.

Luke Donaher In Conservatory Foreign Exchange Program

Wollaston resident Luke Donaher is one of four South Shore Conservatory students traveling to France this August as part of a new foreign exchange program.

Donaher, a percussion student, recently completed South Shore Conservatory's five-week Summer Wind Ensemble. He will be spending his week in France at Le Val D'Oule Sejour Musicale, a month-long summer music camp in La Motte Chalancon in southern France.

Foreign Exchange

Program Coordinator and Jazz Piano Instructor Mark Kross is familiar with the camp, having taught there the past three summers, and feels this experience is a rewarding opportunity for both the Conservatory students and the French students.

Kross says he would like to see his students take from this program an understanding of other cultures, the excitement of traveling and meeting new people and the experience of seeing how others live.

Their itinerary for the week includes rehearsing and performing in a jazz band with the camp students in the morning, and spending most afternoons "exploring the French countryside," according to Kross.

All students taking part are expected here in the fall, probably sometime in late October, and, according to Kross, will need host families to stay with.

Anyone interested in being a host family, or becoming otherwise involved in the exchange program, is encouraged to contact the Conservatory at 749-7565.

Nine Quincy Residents Receive UMass Degrees

Nine Quincy residents recently received undergraduate degrees from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

They are: Carol Callahan, bachelor of science; Joanne Costello, bachelor of fine arts; Franca Devito, bachelor of arts; Kristin Loughlin, bachelor of arts; Thomas McNamara, bachelor of arts; Daniel McLoughlin, bachelor of science; Tara Mellett, bachelor of arts; Gregory Neville, bachelor of science; and Jay Patel, bachelor of science.

Quincy Hospital Co-Coordinator For Cancer Society's Walk-A-Thon

Quincy Hospital has been chosen as a coordinator for the South Shore unit of the American Cancer Society's "Making Strides Against Breast Cancer" Walk-A-Thon.

The annual five mile walk, which will take place Sunday, Sept. 25, at 11 a.m. on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston, is designed to raise funds to help fight breast cancer.

As a co-coordinator of the event, Quincy Hospital will act as a resource center for people interested in participating or in sponsoring walkers. The hospital is providing pledge sheets, buttons and all registration materials. For those signing up at the hospital by Sept. 21, free round-trip bus transportation will be provided by the City of Quincy. Buses will leave from the hospital. Walkers who register before Aug. 26 will receive a free "Quincy Hospital Making Strides Against Breast Cancer" t-shirt.

Proceeds from the walk help support the American Cancer Society's programs which provide advocacy, information and services to women throughout Massachusetts. It also supports free mammograms for low-income and uninsured women through the Neighborhood Breast Cancer Screening Program.

To register or for more information, contact the Quincy Hospital Public Relations Department at 773-6100, ext. 4016.

Chamber To Host Gubernatorial Candidates Breakfast Forum

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce will host a discussion forum with the 1994 Democratic nominees for governor, Sen. Michael Barrett, Rep. Mark Roosevelt and former Sen. George Bachrach, at a 7:44 Breakfast Tuesday, Aug. 23, at 7:44 a.m. at Lombardo's in Randolph.

"Rarely have so many legislative issues been so crucial to how business will be conducted in this community and state. The chamber feels it is imperative for business men and women to learn first-hand the position these candidates are taking on issues prior to the 1994 Democratic nomination," said Chamber President and CEO Ronald Zooleck.

Bachrach of Watertown is an attorney with the Boston-based firm of Brown Rudnick Freed and Gesmer and a teacher at Boston University. He was a member of the State Senate for three terms and has served as a television and radio political analyst.

Barrett, a Cambridge resident, served three terms in the Massachusetts State Senate since 1987. His legislative career has focused on health care, education, the environment and governmental reform.

Roosevelt has been a Massachusetts state representative since 1987. He is chairman of the Legislature's Committee on Education, Arts and Humanities and authored "The Education Reform Act of 1993." He lives in Boston.

John Foley of Spring St., Quincy, has been accepted to Curry College and will begin classes this fall.

Foley graduated from Chamber Board Chairman, Charles R. Simpson Jr., chairman and CEO, Quincy Savings Bank, will introduce the candidates. A question and answer session will follow discussion.

Peter Collins Candidate For County Commission

Peter H. Collins, an attorney and partner in the Quincy law firm of Collins and Collins, announces his candidacy for the office of Norfolk County Commissioner.

Collins, a Democrat and former trial lawyer for Kemper Insurance Company, has practiced law in the city of Quincy since 1986.

A lifelong Milton resident, Collins is a graduate of Boston College High School, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and Suffolk University Law School. He is a member of the Massachusetts Bar Association, the Norfolk County Bar Association and the Quincy Bar Association.

Collins said he believes his background as an attorney and businessman bring unique and essential qualities to the office of County Commissioner.

"As an attorney, I understand the legal ramifications of each decision to be made at the County level," he said.

"As a businessman, I understand fiscal restraint is necessary to relieve overburdened taxpayers," he added.

Collins said his many plans to make county government more effective are the broadening of the Countywide Retired Senior Citizens' Volunteer Program (RSVP) which helps senior citizens volunteer time and talents to their local communities and the County.

"This program is the perfect marriage between seniors who seek responsible, active, productive, meaningful pursuits along with a desire to help their financially burdened communities who dream about the prospect of using these skilled and professional volunteers," he said.

Collins has also

proposed expanding regionalization programs which he said would combine the purchasing power of the County's existing purchasing department, thereby decreasing the cost of essential goods to each community.

Countywide solid waste and conservation programs are also uppermost on his agenda, he said.

Richard MacRoberts New Environmental Services Director At Quincy Hospital

Richard MacRoberts has joined Quincy Hospital as its new director of environmental services.

MacRoberts is responsible for housekeeping, laundry and grounds maintenance services at the hospital and manages a staff of more than 65 employees.

Previously, he worked as operations manager for hospital services at Carney Hospital where he was responsible for daily housekeeping services, training and managing a staff of 100 employees and establishing an effective quality control program.

Prior to his position at Carney Hospital, he directed environmental services programs at Southwood Community Hospital and Pondville Hospital. He also worked as purchasing manager at Cape Cod Hospital.

MacRoberts served in the U.S. Navy as an administrative specialist and received a degree in business administration from Northeastern University.

He is a resident of Plainville.

Dean Morris In UMass Field Experience Program

Dean Morris, son of Barbara and Richard Morris of Washington Court, Quincy Point, is working at Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc. in Middleboro this summer and fall through the Field Experience Program at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

As an analytical research technician, Morris will use advanced techniques such as high pressure liquid chromatography (HPLC) and gas chromatography (GC) in the research and development laboratory.

"The work of our students in state agencies, public service organizations and private industry makes a significant contribution to the state's economy and helps the students learn professional skills that will support their efforts to become productive and responsible citizens," said Jeffrey Silver, associate director of the Field Experience Program at the University's Mather Career Center.

Morris is a member of the Class of 1996 majoring in chemical engineering. He graduated from Quincy High School in 1992.

Amy Huang Recognized By Mt. Auburn Hospital

North Quincy resident Amy Huang recently received a certificate of achievement for her participation in one or more of Mount Auburn Hospital's Employee Education programs of workplace skills, English as a Working Language (EWL), pre-college or accent reduction.

Speakers at a ceremony honoring the students included: Francis P. Lynch, president of the hospital; Carole Bennett, director of Employee Education and Employment; Judy Mulken, career counselor; and teachers involved in the courses.

Students attended structured classes and had the opportunity to attend tutoring sessions with fellow employees who volunteer as mentors.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Don't Be An Easy Mark For A Quick Rip Off

Most thieves are looking for things that are easy to grab and easy to keep or sell, without anyone asking questions. Three rules can reduce your chances of being a victim.

1. Keep track of your belongings. Don't leave them where someone could easily pick them up, like on the front seat of your car or in your yard or your porch.

2. Don't flash your cash or brag about your valuables.

3. Put your name or initials on your property. Use an indelible marker, stickers, nametags, or an engraving tool.

At Home

•Make sure your house or apartment has good deadbolt locks on the front and rear doors. Always lock the door when you go out, even if it's just for a few minutes. Be careful with your house keys. Keep them with you at all times. Never show your name and address on your key ring.

•Don't hike keys outside of your home. Thieves know all the good hiding places.

•Put your bike and any other sports equipment inside at night.

•What if you come home one evening to an empty house and things don't look quite right—a window is broken, a screen ripped or the front door open? Go to a neighbors home and call the police immediately. Never go into your home under these types of situations.

Out and About

•Don't leave your purse or wallet on the counter while you're looking at something in a store.

•Don't dangle or swing your purse by the straps. Try to carry it close to you, especially in crowded stores or streets. Keep a wallet in a side, not back, pocket.

•By wary of anyone that tries to sell you something at a price that sounds too good to be true. It could be stolen or inferior merchandise.

In Your Car

•Try to park in well-lighted areas.

•Never leave the keys in your car.

•Always lock your car, even if it's parked in your driveway.

•Never leave valuables in plain view when leaving your car, even when it's locked. Out of sight out of mind is a very true adage.

In General

•Mark your valuables with an engraver.

•Take pictures of jewelry or other valuables that cannot be marked.

•Record serial numbers of stereos, bicycles and other valuables.

Regional DARE Task Force

Eleven South Shore communities will participate in the formation of a regional DARE (Drug Awareness Resistance Education) Task Force.

Police Chief Francis Mullen made the proposal during last week's Cabinet Day activities held by the administration of Gov. William Weld.

The chief said the purpose of the task force will be "to keep abreast of resources and grants available to the DARE Program." Communities involved in the task force will include Quincy, Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Randolph, Stoughton, Scituate and Weymouth.

State officials attending the event at the Quincy Police Station included Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, Assistant Director of Public Safety Bill Baker and Georgetta Watson, executive director of the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs.

Mayor James Sheets was also in attendance, along with police chiefs and officers from all 11 DARE communities.

Courses At Red Cross

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay South Area Office, 85 Quincy Ave., Quincy, will hold the following courses during the month of September:

•Adult CPR: Tuesday, Sept. 6, 6:15 to 10 p.m. Cost is $37.

•Community CPR (Adult and Infant and Child CPR): Wednesdays, Sept. 7 and 14, 6:15 to 10 p.m. Cost is $50.

•Infant and Child CPR: Saturday, Sept. 10, 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Cost is $45.

•Community CPR (Adult and Infant and Child CPR): Thursdays, Sept. 13 and 20, 6:15 to 10 p.m. Cost is $50.

Pre-registration and prepayment are required for all courses. Books are included. Office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

"Quincy
could do well having Wal-Mart around."

Lisa M. Giuffre, Quincy, Mass

It wasn't all that long ago that Quincy had a thriving retail district. People were working and shopping right here where they lived, and the whole town was prospering. With the proposed new Wal-Mart at Granite Crossing, that pleasant memory could also be our bright future.

A new Wal-Mart in Quincy would help fuel the economy and revitalize our entire community. Quincy shoppers would stay in Quincy to take advantage of Wal-Mart's low prices, great selection and exceptional service. Not only that, but a fully developed Granite Crossing would generate over a half-million dollars in new real estate taxes.

And then there are the jobs. Two hundred construction jobs. Five hundred new permanent jobs, about two hundred of them at Wal-Mart. And 70% of those will be quality, full-time jobs with benefits and profit sharing that provide an excellent opportunity for career advancement.

Put it all together and you have an opportunity that Quincy simply cannot afford to pass up. Support the development at Granite Crossing. And Wal-Mart. Always a good neighbor.

Boston Gas Launches Automated Meter Reading Program

Boston Gas recently launched a new Automated Meter Reading Program in Quincy and other local communities.

The program enables the company to be more efficient in reading customers' meters, provide customers with accurate readings, and eliminate the need for estimate bills. In addition to Quincy, it is being installed in Braintree, Milton, Newton, Revere and Stoneham.

As a result of the program, Boston Gas is able to accurately read more than 26,000 meters a day from a specially equipped company van. After a company service representative installs an Encoder Receiver Transmitter (ERT) on an interior or exterior gas meter, CSR's in a computerized van can drive by and read a meter through a radio signal transmitted by the ERT.

ERT installation takes about 30 minutes and is done at no cost the customer.

Since 92 percent of Boston Gas customers have inside meters, the program alleviates the need for customers to be home for the meter to be read. It also allows Boston Gas to read up to 3,000 meters per hour. Prior to the program, company representatives read 250 a day.

Boston Gas was the first utility company on the East Coast to use the program, which was launched in 1989 after extensive equipment testing was conducted.

Morrissey Thanked For Support On Passage Of Anti-Drunk Driving Law

State Senator Michael Morrissey was recently congratulated by John Gavin, Chairman of the Century Council and former head of the Screen Actor's Guild, for his support in the passage of the state's new anti-drunk driving law which increased the penalties for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

The Century Council actively activated the passage of this new anti-drunk driving law which includes an automatic license suspension provision because it is necessary for the immediate preservation of public safety.

"I know the citizens of the Commonwealth are tired of hearing about people that drink and drive who seriously injure or kill innocent citizens on the roads and highways of Massachusetts," said Morrissey.

"With the passage of this law, the legislature is sending a strong message to the public that if you choose to drink and drive beyond the new legal blood alcohol content level of .08 percent, you face the consequences of more severe penalties, and not merely a slap on the wrist.

"Furthermore, the legislature set the blood alcohol level for offenders under the age of 21 years old at .02 percent, because the legal drinking age is 21 and these people should not be drinking in the first place. The new law also allows the immediate revocation of a youthful offenders license," Morrissey said.

The Century Council is a non-profit organization that is dedicated to reducing alcohol abuse and is supported by concerned liquor companies.

"Every person in today's society realizes the potential and devastating effect that a person driving a vehicle while drunk can have on a family and the entire community if somebody is seriously injured or killed as a result," Morrissey said.

"This law is definitely a step in the right direction to serve as a more serious deterrent to the people that choose to drink and drive on the streets of the Commonwealth. Hopefully the new law will have an immediate positive effect on the number of innocent people injured or killed as a result of drunk drivers."

Susan Williams Awarded Fulbright Research Grant

Susan M. Williams, 124 Essex St., Quincy, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to conduct research on Spanish environmental policy in Madrid, Spain, announce the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board and the U.S. Information Agency.

Williams, a 1990 graduate of North Quincy High School, graduated magna cum laude from Tufts University this spring. She majored in international relations and Spanish there. She is spending the summer working at the Boston Development Center in Braintree.

Williams is one of approximately 2,000 U.S. grantees who will travel abroad for the 1994-95 academic year under the Fulbright Program. Established in 1946 under Congressional legislation introduced by former Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, the program is designed "to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries."

Under the Fulbright Program, some 5,000 grants are awarded each year to American students, teachers and scholars to study, teach, and conduct research around the world, and to foreign nationals to engage in similar activities in the U.S.

Individuals are selected on the basis of academic and professional qualifications, and their ability and willingness to share ideas and experiences with people of diverse cultures.

WE CAN SHOW YOU HOW TO SAVE

Since natural gas is cleaner than other fossil fuels, it's better for the environment. Cleaner fuel also means that the annual maintenance costs are next to nothing with a natural gas heating system. And your system will last longer as well because there are very few moving parts. To find out more, call Boston Gas at 1-800-427-3089 or your local plumbing and heating contractor.

Eight Residents Graduate Police Reserve Academy

Eight local residents recently graduated from the Reserve Intermittent Police Academy run by the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council.

They are:

Sgt. Joseph Smith, Ptl. Arthur Gogan, Ptl. Ronald Ledwell, Ptl. Joseph Linscott, Ptl. Joseph Mullin, Ptl. Robert Shafton, Ptl.

Joseph Thurston, and Ptl. William Toefer.

The volunteer officers completed 96 hours of training in the following subjects: criminal law, motor vehicle law, constitutional law, apprehension and arrest, use of force, use of baton, police ethics and professionalism, report writing, domestic violence, child abuse, handgun retention, oral communications, crisis intervention, vehicle stops, prevention of suicide, drugs accident response, crime scene search, patrol procedures, stress and courtroom testimony.

Each officer will be elevated from basic auxiliary officer to advanced auxiliary officer as a result of completing the course.

School Committee To Form Health, Safety Subcommittee

The School Committee has voted to create a Health and Public Safety Subcommittee.

The subcommittee, proposed in June by committee member Sean Barry, will examine issues such as school lunch policy and nutrition, and other health and safety issues relative to the Quincy Public Schools.

Barry said he developed the proposal after parents and educators expressed a variety of interests in issues of health and safety.

"The time seems right to examine the diverse issues so many folks talk about, including safety concerns, whether or not school lunches include milk from cows fed the synthetic growth hormone, and basic issues like traffic and fire safety," he said.

Barry said citizens at a recent Building Needs Subcommittee meeting at the Beechwood Community Life Center expressed safety concerns for children using school facilities and traveling to and from schools. He added that concerns raised regarding a recent fire at the Sterling Middle School, which was limited to a small area of the basement, prompted him to suggest the School Committee examine safety concerns system-wide.

Barry will serve as chairman of the new subcommittee, which will also include School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond and member Steve Durkin. Barry said Raymond introduced the subcommittee concept a few years ago, and it has been "exceptionally useful" in dividing the School Committee's work.

Subcommittees do not prevent the School Committee from addressing formal issues in regular session, but provide an additional opportunity for members to devote more time and energy to individual issues and then report on developments at regular meetings, Barry said.

Kids Day Saturday At Welcome Young Park

The Atlantic Neighborhood Center will hold a "Wild and Wacky Kids Day" Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Welcome Young Park, Sagamore St., North Quincy.

Registration will be from 9:30 to 10 a.m.

The event is being sponsored by the Manet Health Center, Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers, Sandy's Pet Grooming, Impact Quincy, Wollaston Market, Shuster, Blue Hills Spring Center and Lampert Fruit.

The first 50 people to sign up will receive free T-shirts. In addition, Impact Quincy will offer a T-shirt swap. Those who bring one T-shirt with an ad for drinking or smoking may swap for an Impact Quincy T-shirt.

For more information, call the Atlantic Center at 376-1381.

If You're Thinking About Switching To Natural Gas, See Your Local Dealer.

The plumbing and heating contractors in your town who are listed below can tell you everything you need to know about a new gas heating system. After helping to evaluate your heating needs, they will show you how simple it can be to switch to natural gas.

Morrisette Claims No. 3 Spot In State

By KERRY BYRNE
Morrisette's improbable title run in the American Legion baseball state tournament came to a halt last Thursday with a 3-2 loss to New Bedford at Adams Field.

Making the state playoffs due to an automatic bid as the host team, Morrisette showed they belonged among the state's elite when they finished as the No. 3 team in Massachusetts behind Walpole and New Bedford. Walpole beat New Bedford Friday for the championship. They were the only two teams to beat Morrisette in the playoffs. Morrisette proved to be the tournament's top travel agent - they sent three clubs packing in the eight-team, double-elimination tournament.

The Quincy boys looked sharp in the season ending loss to New Bedford and coach Dave Perdios was pleased with his team's play.

"I feel good about the outcome," said Perdios. "The kids played great, played tough. Especially after that opening game [a 15-0 loss to Walpole]."

Pitcher Mark Cahill was the main reason Morrisette was able to stay close with the heavy-hitting New Bedford club. In only his second start of the season he struck out 11 and allowed just four hits. He also swung the stick well with a triple and a single.

"Cahill was unbelievable," said Perdios. "He pitched great versus Walpole (seven Ks in three and one-third innings) and again today. I was hoping to get five or six innings out of him but he just kept getting better."

Other than Cahill's two hits, Morrisette was unable to mount an attack against New Bedford's top pitcher, Steve Pereira. Only Dave Reinhart, Dan Duncan and Paul Marnikovic had singles for Morrisette.

"We played them tight," said Perdios. "If we executed tonight we would have won. We played excellent defense but we just didn't execute the bunts. You have to play excellent baseball to beat this team."

Down 1-0, Morrisette scored their first run in the second. With two outs Marnikovic singled and came home when three straight walks were issued to Andy Joyce, Brian Hayes and Neil Connolly.

New Bedford scored two more in the third to take a 3-1 lead before Morrisette scored the game's final run in the sixth. Cahill showed tremendous hustle as he turned his 370-foot shot to left center into a triple. He came home when Pereira threw a wild pitch with Marnikovic at the plate.

"They were number three in the state," said Perdios. "People said we backed into it [the tournament]. But this was not an accident. We practiced twice as hard as any team in our Zone. I think we finally realized our potential late in the season."

Questions arose about Morrisette's place in the tournament because they qualified for the sectional playoffs due to two forfeit wins at the end of the regular season. In the second round they were swept by New Bedford in a best-of-three series but received an automatic bid in the state playoffs as the host team.

With their legitimacy in question, Morrisette stepped it up a notch against the top clubs in the state. After the opening game loss to Walpole, Morrisette rebounded with wins over Arlington (3-0), Lynn (7-5) and Clinton (14-8). Each team was PITCHER MARK CAHILL follows through on a pitch against New Bedford. Cahill put on an outstanding show against the loaded New Bedford lineup. The numbers say it all: 11 Ks, four hits and nine innings pitched. It was only his second start of the season.

Walpole Takes Legion Title

It took a double-header, but the American Legion baseball state tournament at Adams Field finally produced a winner late Friday night.

Walpole pounded New Bedford, 13-2, in the day's second game to capture the state Legion championship. New Bedford's 4-2 win in the first game set up the second match in the double-elimination tournament. The double-header was made necessary due to rain cancellations on the tournament's opening day.

The title game was over quickly as Walpole scored four runs in the first inning when the entire lineup came to the plate. The early deficit seemed to take the wind out of the sails of a New Bedford squad which was playing their fourth tournament game in three days and their fifth in as many days.

"They might have lost their edge after that inning," said Walpole coach Bill Tompkins after the championship ceremony. "Once a team gets ahead these things tend to snowball."

Walpole's blizzard of runs continued with three in both the fourth and fifth innings.

New Bedford's lethargic attitude was evidenced in the eighth when pitcher Jim Lefrancois caught Walpole's Gary Degirolamo looking at a third strike. The New Bedford nine stood on the field before being told by the PA announcer that that was the third out. "The inning is over," came the call over the loudspeaker.

New Bedford was down 11-0 in the sixth before they put their first run on the board.

Walpole pounded out 12 hits. Remarkably, only one, a double by Mike Scarlata, was an extra-base hit. Five bases on balls and six New Bedford errors aided the carnage.

Scarlata had two hits and three RBIs in the final contest. Brian Coughlin also had three RBIs. He had one base hit and reached twice on errors. Brian Lambert, Adam Wozniak, J.P. Songin and Jeff Todd each had two singles.

"Scarlata was our top player in the tournament, no question about it," said Tompkins. "He had 13 Ks in one game, 11 the next game. He swung the bat very well and in this game he had the most important hits."

"Lambert was also one of our toughest competitors. He certainly played a big role for us. He was 6-0 on the mound and beat defending champ Sandwich to get us into the playoffs."

For a while, even getting into the playoffs was a question for the champions. At one point in the season they were 9-5, and with a week and a half left in the season they were two games out of the playoff picture. They won 16 of their last 19 games to take the title.

"If someone told me at the beginning of the tournament that we'd be playing for the title I wouldn't have believed them," said Tompkins.

New Bedford and Walpole also met on Wednesday with the champs edging the runners-up, 3-1, behind Scarlata's four-hit performance on the mound.

"Winning that first game against them was the key," said Tompkins.

Sports physicals for North Quincy and Quincy High School freshmen athletes will be held Thursday, August 25 at 8:30 a.m. at the Quincy High School Training Room.

Police Vs. Fire; Officials Vs. Media Koch Memorial Softball Doubleheader Aug. 24

The seventh annual Dick Koch Memorial Softball Doubleheader will be played Wednesday, Aug. 24 at Adams Field, Quincy.

The Quincy Police will play the Quincy Fire at 6:30 p.m. The City Officials face the New Media at 8 p.m. under the lights.

Since the charitable event was founded in 1977 by the late Richard Koch Sr. and renamed in his honor seven years ago, the doubleheader has raised $24,700 for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, including $1500 last year.

Beginning this year, the game will feature a different charity to benefit from the event's proceeds. This year's charity is the Quincy Police Athletic League.

Tickets for the twin-bill are $2 which includes admission to both games and a chance to win prizes in a drawing. Winners will be drawn during the second game of the doubleheader.

Prizes donated by area businesses include:

Two tickets to the Twins-Red Sox game (strike permitting) Saturday, Sept. 17 courtesy of The Quincy Sun; General Cinema movie passes courtesy of WJDA radio; and gift certificates from area restaurants and stores and other items.

Tickets are available at the Mayor's Office at City Hall and the Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center. They will also be available at the gate Wednesday, Aug. 24.

Rosters for the first game were not available at press time.

Tentative lineups for the second game, between the city officials and news media are:

City officials: Mayor James Sheets, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Ron Mariano, Rep. Michael Bellotti, Rep. Steve Tobin, Councillors Tim Cahill, Mike Cheney, Joe LaRia, Larry Chretien, Tom Fabrizio, Chuck Phelan, Bruce Ayers; and School Committeemen Steve Durkin and Dan Raymond.

Also, Executive Secretary Tom Koch, Ray Cattaneo (Park Dept.); Mike Shaheen (Weights and Measures); Jim Timmins (Law Dept.); Lester Gerry (DPW); Richard Meade (Planning); Bob Campbell (Fire Alarm Division); legislative aides Chris Bell, Billy Chaisson, Pat McDermott and Jim Boudreau; and city employees Billy Cochrane and John Cattaneo.

The city officials will be managed by City Clerk Joseph Shea, Councillor Ted DeCristofaro will coach first base.

Playing for the news media will be John Nicholson, Mike Benjamin and Craig Peterson from WJDA; Mike Robinson, Darren Herlihy, Gary Walsh and Jamie Davis of Quincy Community Television; Kerry Byrne and Bob Bosworth of The Quincy Sun; and Jay Pinsonault, Nat Newell and Seth Livingstone of The Patriot Ledger.

Henry Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun, will manage the media.

The game will be taped by Quincy Community TV and aired at a future date. Crime Prevention Officer Bob Hanna and a fire official will broadcast the first game while Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and Quincy Sun Assistant Editor Mike Whalen will call the second game.

Quincy Astros In Tourney Title Game

The Quincy Astros, a group of 10-year-old baseball players, rocketed to the finals of the Braintree Invitational Tourney and upped their record to 8-2 with three straight wins.

The Astros will play either Cedar Grove, Needham or Braintree American in the championship game.

In the semifinal game the Astros beat South Boston, 9-4, behind the two-hit ball of starter Phil McGillicuddy and the outstanding relief work of Tom Hughes. Hughes entered the game with the bases loaded but shut down the Southies boys.

Mike Ryan, Tom Buckley, Keith Austin, Tom Conley and Billy Croke all made outstanding plays in the field.

Austin led the hit parade with three singles. Mike Feetham, Jack Luzzo, Casey Hillis, John Fidalgo, Matt Donovan, Mike Conley, McGillicuddy and Buckley each added hits.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 5-2 loss to the same South Boston team, despite the fine pitching performance of Pat Jaehning. He struck out 11 and gave up only six hits.

The offense was led by Croke's three-hit, two-RBI game.

Luzzo played great defensively. The Astros followed with a 12-4 blowout of an excellent Weymouth club.

Hughes and McGillicuddy were again outstanding on the hill.

The game was highlighted by a nine-run fourth inning in which Feetham, McGillicuddy, Hughes, Croke, Luzzo and Fidalgo laid out six straight hits. The moptopped McGillicuddy had three hits in the contest to pace the offense.

The Astros overcame an early 6-1 deficit to beat Braintree, 13-8, to advance to the semifinal game.

Feetham and McGillicuddy cracked three hits each. Austin, Luzzo and Buckley also had big hits. Donovan and Hillis were impressive in the field.

After the title game the Quincy boys will play in the Wareham Invitational against the top teams from Massachusetts and Rhode Island, including Raynham, New Bedford, West Roxbury Parkway and Lincoln, R.I.

The Astros are managed by Bob Croke. Leo Hughes, Bob Austin, Jim Donovan and Larry Luzzo are his assistants. Aileen Croke is the official team mascot.

eliminated as a result.

After the New Bedford game Perdios had kind words for Cahill, Duncan, Hayes, Reinhardt, Connelly and Pat Bryan, the players who donned a Morrisette uniform for the final time.

"All of our 18-year-olds played an important role in this tournament. From day one they did the job. They may not have played every day but they hung in there and made this season a success. For us to do what we did is incredible."

For Morrisette players Tom Malvesti, Jeff Russell and Joe Biagini, the season-ending loss to New Bedford was doubly hard to take. These three also played for the Quincy High School baseball team which was eliminated from the Div. I state playoffs with a 4-3 loss to New Bedford in June.

Quincy Crushes Brockton, Starts Playoffs Sunday

Liberty Lounge's Lord Muffington's Inn club prepared for the upcoming South Shore Sunday Morning Softball League playoffs with 10 straight wins to close out the season.

Quincy swept a doubleheader against the Brockton Cobras this week to lock up a third place finish and prevent the Cobras from winning their second division title in a row.

In the opening contest Bob Hennelly tossed a four-hit, complete-game shutout as Quincy won, 11-0. Brockton had not been blanked before in seven years of play.

Hennelly's arm and two great outfield assists by Al Freeman prevented Brockton from moving a man past second base.

Rob Cannella and Mike Bates had two hits each to pace the offense. Paul Cedrone, Rich Jackman, Joe Godfrey, Bob Cheveroli and Freeman all had RBI singles.

Chuck Sullivan, John McManus, Tom Spillane, Dave Brolin, George Martell, Chris Byrne and Spike Fitzsimmons all played well.

Quincy punished Brockton in the day's second outing, 21-5.

It again marked a dubious milestone for the Brockton boys - they had never before fallen victim to the 15-run slaughter rule.

Brockton started strong with an early 5-0 lead before Quincy stepped it up a notch with 21 unanswered runs.

Cannella opened Quincy's offense in the first with an RBI single. Spillane followed with a two-run roundtripper.

In the second inning, Quincy destroyed the alleged Brockton defense when they sent 17 men to the plate and scored 11 runs.

Freeman led the attack with a grand slam while Cheveroli cracked two bleacher-headers in the one inning. The first was a solo shot and the second a three-run blast. Spillane unleashed a two-run dinger.

Cedrone, Sullivan, Godfrey, Hennelly, Jackman, Fitzsimmons, McManus and Cannella all had singles in the decisive inning.

Bates put an end to the carnage in the fifth with a three-run homer that brought the slaughter rule into effect.

Chuck Sullivan was the winning pitcher in game two.

The Lord Muffington club plays sixth place Pembroke in round 1 of the playoffs Sunday at 9 a.m. at Quincy's Fore River Field. It will be a best-of-three set.

The League's final standings:

Norwell, 22-6; Brockton, 21-7; Quincy (Lord Muffington's), 19-9; Middleboro, 19-9; Hanson, 18-10; Pembroke, 7-21; Braintree, 5-23; Quincy (Derbes Bros.), 1-27.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Let them strike!

As a young boy baseball held a spell over me, as it does over many little boys. In those heartbreaking days of the mid to late 70s I followed the Red Sox religiously. Gold Dust Twins Jim Rice and Fred Lynn, the Rooster Rick Burleson, and a gritty third baseman known for chasing foul balls into the dugout, Butch Hobson, these were my heroes.

As I grew, tastes changed. Hockey remained a favorite. Football became a passion. For a short while during the Bird Era I worshipped the parquet. Baseball fell by the wayside.

But this summer, on steamy afternoons and seabreezy nights, I rediscovered the magic of America's pastime. Baseball fans, true baseball fans, have long had an affinity for their sport that I could not comprehend. Now I can.

And it is not because of Matt Williams, Frank Thomas and Jeff Bagwell, but because of Pat Donovan, Dan Duncan and Mike Caporale, not to mention the scores of other kids from our high school, American Legion and Babe Ruth teams, who I watched patrol the diamond at Adams Field this summer.

They played with enthusiasm. They played with skill. They played with a desire to perform well that money cannot buy.

So let them strike.

When the leaves fall and the snows come, baseball will be forgotten. But in the spring baseball will again cast its spell, and boys and young men will be there to play it. As sure as a 6-4-3 double play, they will crack line drives, dive into third base and shag fly balls, regardless of whether anyone else is paid millions to do so.

Broken bats, bloodied bodies and shattered dreams littered Adams Field last Monday night following a fight after the New Bedford-Lynn game in the American Legion state baseball tournament.

Just kidding. This never happened, but there was one unfortunate incident following that game and it involved not the players but the fans.

There were no injuries, perhaps not even any punches thrown, but from what I could gather at the post-game taunting, a few fans from New Bedford stood on the Lynn side of the grandstand during the game and bad-mouthed the Lynn fans and players.

What happened from there, I don't know. What I do know is that for about 20 minutes after the game people from both sides milled about the field's entrance, yelling back and forth, and saying, for the most part, the incredibly dumb things you usually only hear at a maternity ward or political rally. Now, neither town is known for the dazzling array of rocket scientists and Mensa members they produce on a regular basis, so their pinheaded witticisms should not have been a surprise.

My personal favorite came from a long-haired, black-jacketed Lynn fan: "New Bedford has more crack houses than we do!"

Yeah, you tell 'em, tough guy. This guy must be a brain surgeon. Maybe he did a lobotomy. On himself.

After brilliant and enlightening epithets such as these were tossed back and forth like a beachball for what each side deemed a proper amount of time, both groups turned on the people from Quincy and the American Legion running the event. This, like anytime the herd mentality takes over, led to the night's stupidest question.

"Why'd you let them on our side of the stadium?" a fan from Lynn said.

Ahem. Excuse me. What are they supposed to do? Fingerprint everyone who comes to the game then issue ID cards limiting each person to one side of the field? What is this a Liverpool-Juventus soccer match?

How about this, we erect an impenetrable electrified fence in the middle of the grandstand area, shackle everyone who comes in, stop selling booze within a 10-mile radius three hours before gametime, post cameras with a direct feed to FBI headquarters in Washington, and, to make sure there's really no trouble, we line Army Ranger sharpshooters around the field with orders to shoot on sight the first person who makes eye contact with a fan from the opposing team. I think this would solve the problem.

Or people could just, I don't know, grow up?

Former North Quincy High quarterback Liam Higgins will play football this year for Hofstra University in New York.

In his senior year at NQ, Higgins led the Red Raiders to an undefeated season and a 14-8 win over Arlington in the Div. IB Super Bowl. In the final game Higgins threw for 254 yards and two touchdowns despite off-and-on blizzard-like conditions. His first scoring strike was a 73-yarder to Brian Raftery. The other went 3 yards to Dave Reinhart. He also completed a two-point conversion to Pat Shea.

Higgins spent the past year at Worcester Academy.

John Santos To Box In Ireland

Eleven-year-old John Santos of Quincy jetted to Dublin, Ireland Tuesday night to take part in a boxing tournament with other members of the Boston Irish Youth Boxing Club.

Santos and the Boston strongboys will battle members of the Sacred Heart Amateur Boxing Club of Dublin.

The 75-pound pugilist has boxed in the Junior Olympics and fights in Coventry, R.I. every Friday.

He has won numerous trophies and tournaments, including a victory in the prestigious St. Patrick's Day Boxing tournament in South Boston.

Santos will spend two weeks displaying his boxing skills in Eire. He will stay with host families in the Irish capital.

The Quincy boy has been in the ring for three years.

Santos is also a star on the gridiron. He played for the Houghs Neck Manets of the Quincy Youth Football League and was named one of their top defensive players last season.

His older brother Tim plays football for Quincy High School. Another brother, Tom, will try out as a wide receiver on the Quincy High freshman football team.

Baylis To Join N.C. State Wolfpack

Michael Baylis of Quincy will become a member of the Wolfpack this fall when he attends North Carolina State University on a baseball scholarship.

Baylis played for the Quincy youth leagues, Morrisette Legion Post, Boston College High School and Massasoit Community College.

He was the MVP of the Massasoit club that won the 1993 National Championship in Tennessee.

He played on the Morrisette squad that won the American Legion state championship in 1992.

Baylis currently plays for the Quincy Sheriffs.

Annual Pool Party At Lincoln-Hancock

The Quincy Recreation Department will present its 19th annual pool show at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School Friday at 1 p.m.

Babe Ruth Tournament Continues At Adams Field

The Quincy 15-year-old Babe Ruth all-star team lost to Canton, 4-2, Sunday in the first round of the second annual Ray Cattaneo Tournament.

The game was called in the seventh inning due to rain.

Quincy was scheduled to play South Shore Diner Tuesday night in the double-elimination tournament. If they win that game the Quincy boys play South Boston Wednesday night (Aug. 17).

Quincy played superbly but was not able to overcome Canton's timely walks and base hits. They also hurt themselves by leaving several men stranded in the contest.

Third baseman Bobby

Walsh and catcher Jon Ryan scored the runs for Quincy. Eric Wood's deep drive to left center knocked in Walsh in the second inning. A Mike Doyle shot scored Ryan.

Walsh and shortstop Andrew Byrne made excellent defensive plays. The gangly third baseman dove towards the bag and grabbed a hard grounder to rob a Canton batter of a base hit. Byrne made two backhand stops and long throws to first for outs.

Mark Glynn showed off his rifle arm with strong throws from center field to help keep runners at bay. Ryan displayed exceptional skill behind the plate. He got the body in front of several tough-to-handle balls. He also combined with Wood for an impressive pick-off play at first base midway through the game.

Mike Travers and Doyle worked the mound for half a game each for Quincy.

Eric Goodrich, Brian Beaton, Mike Russo and Rob Winter also played well for Quincy.

The Cattaneo tournament features eight teams from throughout eastern Mass. Games will be played every night this week at Adams Field. Other first-round games in the tournament:

South Boston topped Bourne, 7-2.

Milton edged Dennis-Yarmouth, 7-6.

Weymouth beat South Shore Diner, 3-2.

Dennis-Yarmouth nipped Bourne, 4-3.

Skating Clinic Starts Aug. 22

Quincy High School hockey coach Bob Sylvia will hold his 19th annual Power Skating Clinic from Aug. 22-26 at the Rockland Rink. It is open to all youth hockey players.

SELDOM-USED TIP

People who exercise regularly often advise more sedentary types to "use it or lose it," the implication being that the body's health degenerates with disuse. The same may be said of an automobile. All too many car owners mistakenly believe that their cars need not adhere to regular maintenance schedules because they are used so little. The fact is, however, that the various lubricants found in a car lose their protective qualities with non-use. They are likely to deteriorate by virtue of condensation buildup or accumulations of unburned hydrocarbons, varnish, or acids. These latter contaminants will pit and rust metal if they are not boiled, burned, or heated away. Following a regular service schedule, no matter how frequently a car is used, will help prevent wear and mechanical

Eugene L. Ronayne, 67

Former Quincy Teacher, Vice Principal; Boston Police Patrolman For 17 Years

A funeral Mass for Eugene L. Ronayne, of Abington, a retired Quincy elementary school assistant principal, was celebrated Monday in St. Helen's Church, Norwell.

Mr. Ronayne died Aug. 12 at home after a brief illness.

He worked 17 years as a Boston police patrolman in the city's North End section before joining the Quincy School system as an elementary school teacher in 1964. He started at the former Lincoln School in South Quincy, became an assistant principal at the former Quincy Elementary School, and went to the Atherton Hough School where he remained as assistant principal until his retirement in 1988.

In 1975, he wrote to Quincy, Ill. and suggested the two cities establish a pen pal program. It developed into a bicentennial exchange trip in 1976. More recently, he supported the assistance Quincy, Mass. gave to Quincy, Ill. during the severe flooding there.

Born in Boston, he grew up in East Boston, the son of a Boston police officer. He was also a direct descendant of Confederate Gen. Ronayne Cleburne, who was at times second in command to Gen. Robert E. Lee.

At age 17, he joined the Navy and served with the Seabees on Saipan in the Pacific, where he helped build runways. After the war, he went to Boston College, where he ran on the track team and earned a degree in marketing. He earned his master's degree from the University of Massachusetts in Boston in 1974.

Mr. Ronayne spent a lot of time at the Dedham jail helping inmates learn their General Equivalency Diploma.

He enjoyed reading and swimming as well as long bicycle rides with his wife, Gladys (Dorney) Ronayne.

A resident of Abington for six years, he previously lived in Braintree for 20 years.

He was a member of the National Education Association, the Massachusetts Teachers Association, and the Norfolk County Retired Teachers Association.

Mr. Ronayne is also survived by two sons, Robert F. Ronayne of Quincy and Michael D. Ronayne of Lufkin, Texas; three daughters, Eileen Casey of Norwell and Kathleen Haapaoja of Clinton, N.J., and Francine Ronayne of Fairfax, Va.; two sisters, Eileen McCarthy of West Melbourne, Fla. and Margaret Sweetney of Cape Cod; and nine grandchildren.

Burial was in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Herbert J. Steele, 77

Former Milk Co. Route Foreman

A funeral Mass for Herbert J. Steele, 77, of Quincy, was celebrated Aug. 12 in St. John the Baptist Church.

Mr. Steele died Aug. 9 in Quincy Hospital.

A former route foreman at the White Brothers Milk Co.'s North Quincy facility, he had earlier operated his own gasoline station in East Milton.

A Navy veteran of World War II, he served with the Navy's 33rd Seabees in the Pacific. Aboard ship he worked the desalinization plant, and ashore he was involved with the unit's construction projects.

He was a member of the Morrisette American Legion Post and the Teamsters Union.

Born in Dorchester, he grew up in Houghs Neck and was a 1934 graduate of Quincy High School. He lived briefly in Milton before moving back to Quincy.

He is survived by his wife, Anne (Smith) Steele; two sons, Herbert J. Steele and Michael J. Steele, both of Quincy; two daughters, Karen Munsen of New York and Claire Goguen of Rockland; three brothers, Earl Steele of Quincy, Edwin Steele of Rockland and Louis Steele of Milton; five sisters, Bertha Steele of Quincy and Helen Steele, Ethel Steele, Dorothy Steele and Evelyn MacDonald, all of Milton; and two grandchildren.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We wouldn't be human if we, at some time or another, did not disagree with another person. We are all individuals; we have our own personal ideas and beliefs; our thoughts of right and wrong ... And we all know, this can and does lead to quarrels and arguments. And, yes, they can be small or they can be "hundreders."

According to this "tale" this is how early Indians resolved their quarrels—

"Burying the hatchet" is an old expression, said to have originated from an Indian custom. They believed that evil spirits in the air caused people to quarrel and put hatred in their hearts. Therefore, whenever a dispute was settled between the parties involved, the hatchet, the symbol for hatred, was placed where it could have no power. At the burying of the hatchet, those quarrelling would stand over the hole and talk about their grievances, pacifying their souls that they buried their grievances with the hatchet. This is superstition, of course, but the Indians firmly believed that it ended all personal troubles between them.

We are always happy to hear from our readers concerning the articles presented here ...

Weld Urges MWRA To Lease Shipyard For Cruise Ship Construction

ratepayers would likely have to foot the bill for any clean-up operation. State environmental officials have said all along that it's the MWRA's responsibility to clean the shipyard.

Sheets, MacDonald, Secretary of Economic Affairs Trudy Cox and state economic officials met last Friday in Boston to try to work out the remaining issues.

Among the local and state officials who joined Weld at the shipyard were Secretary of Economic Affairs Gloria Larson, State Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Steve Tobin and Ward 6 City Councilor Bruce Ayers.

Sheets was adamant that those involved must find a resolution and begin work on restoring the shipyard to its former status, that is, start building ships again.

"This is the first choice, period," Mayor Sheets said about where the ships would be built. "I'm fully convinced there's a market for four ships. This is the best opportunity to bring ship to the United States and we have to take advantage of it."

In related news last week, a divided House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee approved a shipbuilding bill introduced by Studds earlier this summer that would bolster American shipyards by providing incentives for new cruise ship construction by foreign companies.

The measure passed by a 14-7 vote, but still has a way to go before becoming law. It not moves to the House Committee on Natural Resources for consideration, as time is running out for final action in this session.

License Granted For Italian Festival With Stipulations

By LISA CONNELL

The city Licensing Board voted Tuesday to re-issue the license for the annual South Quincy Italian Festival, but with the stipulation that the festival end at 9 p.m., earlier than in past years.

The vote was 4-0, a unanimous decision. Building Inspector and Licensing Board Vice Chairman Matthias Mulvey was not able to attend Tuesday's meeting.

Two additional police details will be added to cover the last four hours of the festival, to be held Saturday, Sept. 10.

Official hours of the event are 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Alcohol will not be served after 8:15 p.m. Musical activities will cease at 8:45 p.m.

The festival's hours mark a compromise worked out with Board member and Police Chief Francis Mullen, Ward 4 Councilor Thomas Fabrizio and festival committee members Kathy Plant, Don and Debra Bowes and John Baldano.

The board had previously considered rolling the event's hours back to 7 p.m., with no alcohol served after 6:30 p.m. At their Aug. 2 meeting, License Board Chairman and City Clerk Joseph Shea announced that he had received a petition, circulated by the Bowes', with several hundred Quincy residential signatures in support of the original 11 p.m. closing time.

At that meeting, the board voted to continue discussion on the matter until Tuesday.

Last year, the festival's memory was marred by an incident involving indecent assault and battery on a child under age 14, according to City Liquor Inspector Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy.

A subject was arrested and tried in court. The trial was continued without a finding, for three years, said Laracy.

Held since the mid-eighties, the festival is held at the intersection of Liberty, Brook and Water Sts.

Fabrizio proposed that the cost of two additional police details for the later hours of the festival, be paid jointly by the festival committee and by himself.

Four to five other area volunteers will police the area, said Fabrizio.

Festival committee members will be identified by the wearing of "STAFF" t-shirts.

"Toward's dark is when the potential for problems comes up. It's [the festival] is a tradition. I wouldn't want any negative connotations put on it. I think we can address the problems the Chief [Mullen] spoke of earlier," said Fabrizio.

Mullen proposed a closing time of 8 p.m., but festival committee members lobbied for a later hour.

"A handful shouldn't ruin it for everyone else's time. We wanted later hours for the people who work during the day and can't come earlier," said Festival Committee Chairman Kathy Plant.

Don Bowes, noting the family-like atmosphere of the celebration, said that the vendors would be hurt the most by the earlier closing time.

"I welcome everybody here and I'm willing to listen," said Mullen. "Our problem is not with the people in South Quincy. I've talked with a lot of older and younger people, like yourselves. A lot of people told me they didn't attend because of some of the element of the youth element coming in."

"The good people never ruin anything; it's always another smaller element...We don't have the luxury of just ordering police to events; we may not be able to get extra police officers there. Like a manager, I have to work that out."

"Also, instead of 7 p.m., everyone compromise and go to eight o'clock; the adults can still do what they want to do but there will be better control over the kids. I'm trying to take into consideration the city and South Quincy," he said.

"How can we all collectively police this?" Mullen asked.

"Now that the past incident has been brought to light, maybe something can be worked out to solve it," said Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallabue.

"It's not just one incident. It's a group of youths who go from place to place. They probably don't even live there," said Mullen.

Plant said that with several thousand people attending the event, she can't be everywhere at once.

Board member and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman suggested a closing time of 9 p.m.

Mullen reminded the board that the incident happened at 9 p.m. last year.

"I don't want to arm the place either and put 40 or 50 police officers there. It's a family area and a festival and it's supposed to be festive," said Mullen.

After a brief discussion, the Board set the festival hours to 9 p.m.

Said Gorman to the festival committee members, "You have to have your game together. You know who the troublemakers are and it's up to you to keep an eye out and ask for police help if you need it."

Aug. 24 Last Day To Register For Primary

second month.

"It's a quiet year for a state primary election. I'm encouraged by the postcard registration. I think as we move forward and people get used to it (mail registration), we'll see better results," Shea said.

According to the city's election office, approximately 130 new voters have registered in Quincy by mail. An average of 10 to 12 postcard registrations have been received daily since the motor-voter registration law took effect July 1, city election officials report.

Shea said he believes the majority of the new registered voters are residents who have turned 18 years old since the last November's election. Most of the other new registered voters are voters who have moved to Quincy and have transferred their registration to the city.

Mail-in voter registration forms, printed by the Secretary of State's office, are available in the James R. McIntyre Government Center (Old City Hall) and the Thomas Crane Public Library branches.

To register by mail, citizens should fill out the form, sign it under the penalties of perjury, and mail or deliver it to Quincy City Hall or the state's Election Office.

Once the form is received, the clerk's office or state election office sends the voter a notice acknowledging receipt, and adds the person's name to the voting list.

Voters can also use the form to change their name and/or address; as well as join, change or leave a party.

To register, one must be a U.S. citizen; be a Massachusetts resident; and be at least 18 years old on or before the next election, which is Sept. 20.

Shea said the mail-in registration has received a boost from Sen. Michael Morrissey. Morrissey, who is being challenged by Bernard Walsh of Braintree in the Democratic state primary, has distributed over 1000 voter postcards to graduating high school seniors in his district as well as senior citizens.

Morrissey mailed the postcards to recent graduates of Quincy, North Quincy, Abington and Norwell high schools. He also circulates the cards in person at senior citizen functions.

"It's helped in a quiet year," Shea said. "As people get more familiar with it, it will help even more."

Other groups, including unions like the AFL-CIO, plan to conduct voter registration drives using the postcards. "Outreach is the key to the new motor-voter law," Shea added.

A handful of races, including one local contest, will be featured in the state primary next month. On the Democratic ballot will be races for county commissioner, governor's council, and state senate. The Republican ballot features three state-wide contests only: U.S. senator, attorney general and secretary of state.

Unregistered voters who miss next Wednesday's deadline will have another chance to register and cast a ballot in the general election Nov. 8. The deadline to register for the state final election is Tuesday, Oct. 11.

Traffic, Parking Improve At Marina Bay

By LISA CONNELL
City Clerk and License Board Chairman Joseph Shea reported at Tuesday's Board meeting that traffic and parking problems at Marina Bay have greatly improved over the last few months due to better traffic monitoring.

Ward 6 Councilor Bruce Ayers confirmed later that efforts taken by Marina Bay official Richard Economou have helped to decrease problems such as excessive speeding throughout the area.

Shea, Ayers, residential abutters and Marina Bay condominium owners will iron out a definitive plan to control traffic and events within the complex over the fall months.

Ayers said he plans to have such a plan ready for approval by November.

"This will give us a headstart over what problems need to be ironed out," said Ayers. "I want to be sure that the area residents have the services they need; that involves the right preparation and planning."

Both Shea and Ayers intimated that events involving last-minute preparation before the License Board, such as carnivals, may become a thing of the past. Both said more careful preparation would go on at the site to avoid past problems of overcrowding caused by lack of definitive parking.

At Cabinet Meeting

Weld-Cellucci Praise Local Officials Here

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Following a day of touring the communities of the South Shore last week during Cabinet Day, Gov. William Weld and Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci concluded the day with an informal meeting in the new City Hall.

Before the meeting began, however, Gov. Weld signed into law a proposal that will allow expansion of the parking area for Quincy Youth Hockey as Arena Director Beverly Reinhardt looked on.

The governor and lieutenant governor opened the meeting by recalling their personal highlights of the day and complimented what Mayor Sheets has done for the city.

"Things are really popping in Quincy," Weld said. "The future looks bright here. There's a lot of economic development going on here that should result in a bright financial future in Quincy.

"With the firm yet gentle hand of Mayor Sheets, things appear to be heading in the right direction for this city."

Gov. Weld mentioned that the clam-digging expedition in Hingham wearing hip boots in the deep black mud with Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Cox was one of many highlights on the day for him.

Cellucci noted the announcement of $1 million more in the fight to end domestic violence as his favorite of the Cabinet Day in Quincy experience.

"This city, with Mayor Sheets, Judge Charles Black and the district court have helped fight to reduce domestic violence in Quincy," Cellucci said. "We're trying to replicate what they do across the whole state. There's been some progress but to totally abolish domestic violence, we need to change people's attitudes towards violence. We all have to express our outrage that we won't tolerate it."

The governor then turned the floor over to his staff which had joined the Quincy city officials in touring the city.

Secretary of Health and Human Services Charles Baker was pleased to announce that the wait time for those in need of adoption has been cut from 5 years to two-and-a-half in the last few years.

Baker also said that through the hard work by the Department of Social Services and Commissioner Lorraine Carli, adoptions have increased 100 percent over the last two years.

Following the speakers from the cabinet, Mayor James Sheets, State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Steve Tobin were asked to give their feelings on the day and what it did for the South Shore and Quincy in particular.

"The best part of the whole thing is that the lines of communication are open," Sheets said. "And communication generates action, which in turn results in change."

"What the day shows is that there is a broad-based commitment to the well-being of the people of the South Shore. We are clearly and closely tied by one simple factor - providing the best economic environment for people to live in. Regardless of our backgrounds or political ideas, we strive to reach a common goal - sustaining the present quality of life."

Morrissey noted how the members of the Quincy legislature were able to show Gov. Weld, Lt. Gov. Cellucci and their staff all the dedicated work they do for the citizens of Quincy.

"This day gives us in the legislature an opportunity to showcase what we've been doing to help the community," Morrissey said. "It's nice to work with such great city officials, from the Mayor on down, we work together to help the citizens of Quincy."

Tobin spoke about the good impression he and the other city officials hope to have had on the governor and his staff, particularly their devotion to maintaining the quality of life those in Quincy currently enjoy.

"After today, the next time you discuss Quincy, you'll think of the city, our Mayor Sheets and see our city councilors and the sturdy government we have in place here," Tobin said. "We share the desire to help our constituents, like Mayor Sheets mentioned, despite differences in political beliefs and backgrounds. We have the same concerns, which include maintaining this quality of life for everyone."

After all the speakers who were called upon were finished, Gov. Weld opened the floor to questions and comments from the general public in attendance.

Quincy Loses Lawsuit Over MWRA Rates

what is presented at the hearing, according to McGrath.

McGrath has said in the past that the reason the suit was filed in June 1993 is because of the MWRA's practice of basing its water and sewer rates on population rather than actual water usage. Officials in a number of communities believe that methodology benefits some cities and towns and places an unfair burden on others.

It is unclear exactly what information Doerfer based his decision on, McGrath said. He added that it could possibly have to do with the fact that the MWRA Advisory Board recently voted to accept a new rate system, although that system has not yet been implemented.

"He (Doerfer) may think that (new system) will take care of everything, but we don't," he said.

McGrath said several issues Quincy brought up at the June 29 hearing seemed to be ignored by the judge's decision.

"I am surprised (by the decision) in that some of the arguments that were made by the city aren't even addressed," he said.

Specifically, McGrath said the statute or enabling act of the MWRA—which was passed in 1984—requires that a number of factors be taken into consideration when the sewer and water rates are charged to a community. Among those factors, McGrath said, are the community's conservation practices, its contributions to the MWRA system, and others.

McGrath noted that Quincy will try to have Doerfer's decision overturned in a higher court regardless of whether Boston decides to join the appeal or not.

He added that a separate, federal lawsuit over the water and sewer rates involving the Town of Weymouth and other local communities has yet to be filed. McGrath said even if the federal suit does go to court, the city at this time has no plans to be part of it.

Sheets said he feels the city's lawsuit, if nothing else, has helped expedite the MWRA's decision to adopt a new rate system.

"The suit helped push the rate methodology a lot faster," he said. "It's been very successful in that sense."

Kathleen Mitchell Attends Library Reference Conference

Kathleen Mitchell, library media specialist at the Sterling Middle School, was one of 50 librarians who recently attended the Massachusetts Science Reference Institute held at Simmons College.

The three-day conference was held to help librarians upgrade their skills in providing quality reference assistance to children and teens studying science.

The conference, sponsored by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, featured lectures and demonstrations from MIT, the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics, the Massachusetts Audubon Society, and the New England Science Center.

23 Apply For Board Posts At Quincy College

Eleven of the 13 board members will be appointed Aug. 30 by a five-member selection council that includes School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, City Council President Michael Cheney, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, School Committee member Ronald Mariano and college trustee Richard Hart Jr.

The other two board members will be a city councillor and a School Committee member. Fabrizio will represent the City Council, while Raymond has said he will wait until the end of the month to choose the School Committee representative.

According to the home-rule petition, at least one member of the board of trustees must be a Quincy College graduate and not more than four members can live outside of the city.

Raymond has said applicants will be allowed to make two-minute presentations before the selection council Aug. 29 at 6 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex. The board members will be chosen the next evening at the same time and place, he said.

Creedon said Tuesday that applicants have both mailed and hand-delivered applications to his office. He added that some have also asked about what the actual duties of the board members will be, which is "understandable" since the School Committee governed the college for so long.

"They (board members) may find in the beginning they have to meet more often until they get themselves settled," he said.

City May Award Parking Contract Next Week

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday a decision on the city's parking system contract should be reached next week.

The Sun reported last week that three firms have bid on the contract. Those companies are: Metropolitan Parking Systems Inc. of Quincy, the current owner of the contract; Kinney Systems Inc. of Boston, which had the contract before Metropolitan and Fitz-Inn Auto Parks Inc., also of Boston.

Sheets said Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon will make a recommendation to the mayor after discussing it with other members of the city's parking committee.

Committee members include Gillon, Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader, Planning Director Richard Meade and Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton.

Some committee members have been on vacation, which has caused a minor delay in the contract decision, Sheets said.

The city's parking system consists of two Quincy Center parking areas: the Hancock Parking Lot and the Ross Parking Garage.

License Board Briefs

The Licensing Board took the following action at its meeting on Tuesday:

- Granted a request from Joseph Lombardi for the transfer of the all alcohol retail package goods store license from Margaret McGrath, administratrix of the estate of James McGrath, Kellic Liquors of Quincy, Inc., 301 Quincy Ave.

- Granted a request from Wings Express, 1610 Hancock St. (Robert Welch and David Peel) for a common victualer license.

- Granted a request from Winter-Spring Pizza,

41 Safford St. (Arelcia Guzellestiren) for a common victualer license.

- Voted to continue a request from D'Angelo's/Pizza Hut, 270 Hancock St., (Michael Jones) for a common victualer license.

- Granted a request from G.J. Coddington's, President's Plaza (George Cook) for an extension of premises for a public meeting of Quincy 2000 and the Atlantic Development Corporation to discuss the issue of Wal-Mart at The Falls complex, Thursday (today) at 5 p.m.

- Granted a request from the Jewish War Veterans, Quincy Post #193 (David Minkofsky) for a permit to sell poppies in front of Stop & Shop, Shaws, Roxie's and Bradlees Oct. 3, 4, 5, 11, 12 and 13.

- Granted a request from the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. (Edward Fitzgerald) for a permit to hold an "Old-Time Family Day Picnic and Concert" on the grounds of the Adams Academy Saturday, Sept. 3, from 2 to 5 p.m.

- Granted a request from the North Quincy High School Hockey Team (Nancy Morrissey Stone) for a permit to conduct a canning drive Dec. 28, 29, 30 and 31.

Joseph Pulera Honored For Contributions To New Computer System

Joseph Pulera of Quincy was honored recently for his contributions to the development of a computer system which won top honors in a world-wide competition.

Pulera, an employee of the state Department of Environmental Protection, was recognized by the DEP for his role in the evolution of the Environmental Protection Integrated Computer System (EPICS), which took top honors in the Government and Non-Profit Category of the 1994 Computerworld Smithsonian Awards Program.

EPICS is an advanced information superhighway designed to help Massachusetts environmental agencies protect the state's natural resources by more effectively inspecting regulated facilities and encouraging companies to reduce their use of toxic chemicals. It stores a wealth of information in a single database to which environmental regulators in all regions of the state have easy access. The system was designed by management information experts within the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) and the DEP, and was built by Electronic Data Systems.

The award and the EPICS applications were recently showcased at the National Governors Association Conference in Boston, and will also be included in a permanent exhibit at the Smithsonian Institution.

Park Dedicated In His Memory

Arthur Boyson Remembered

By LISA CONNELL

President of the Adams Shore Association in the 1940s and 50s, Arthur Boyson believed in giving something back to the neighborhood in which he lived and raised his children.

He noticed that a large tract of land in that area was vacant and would make the perfect site for a children's park and playground.

According to current Adams Shore Association member William Hall, Boyson worked with city officials at the time, and his efforts resulted in the land being taken from its original owners via eminent domain.

The park was built and was called Heron Road Park.

Hall, who was Boyson's neighbor for many years, checked into the history of Heron Road Park, after Boyson told him on several occasions that he had helped establish the site.

After he learned more about Boyson's efforts to benefit the neighborhood, Hall consulted Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson about renaming the playground in honor of Boyson.

Kolson, working with the City Park and Recreation Commission, was instrumental in changing the name of the playground, said Hall.

In order to update the playground with new equipment, the Adams Shore Association held several fundraisers. Over the course of two years, they raised $8,000 and the city chipped in an additional $12,000, according to Hall.

The playground was recently renamed the Arthur Boyson Playground.

Representing the Boyson clan were: daughter Claire and her husband Richard Saulnier; their daughter, Barbara Pourghasemi, and her son Abraham, 2; son Arthur Boyson Jr. and his wife Alice; their daughter, Karen Standley, and her son Alexander Standley, 4 months; Arthur Boyson Jr.'s son, Scott Boyson, his wife Norma, and their children, Eric, 4, and Alyssa, 2; and John Boyson, the third child of Arthur Boyson Jr. and wife Alice.

Arthur Boyson died in 1992, at age 92. His wife, Elizabeth, died last year at age 89.

Boyson worked at the Fore River Shipyard when it was owned by Bethlehem Steel, said Hall. He was instrumental in starting a union among shipyard workers, according to Hall.

Cahill, DeCristofaro Come Out In Favor

2 Council Members Support Wal-Mart

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Two city councillors have expressed support of a proposed Wal-Mart store and shopping center in Quincy Point despite the fact that the city's legal department might ask them not to vote on the project.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill have both told The Quincy Sun that they are in favor of the project.

DeCristofaro, whose ward includes the proposed Wal-Mart location near The Falls condominium complex, said he feels the project would benefit the city.

Related Story On Page 25

"I'm a ward councillor, but I'm also a city councillor," he said. "I have to be concerned about how it affects the whole city, not just the people who live near there. Overall, for the whole city, I think it's a plus."

DeCristofaro said he made his decision after studying "packets of information" on the project. He also noted that the City Council generally votes the same as the Planning Board, which gave the project a favorable recommendation last week--on such issues.

"Usually the vote of the Planning Board is enough (for the City Council to approve such a project), and they've (the Planning Board) done a good study," he said.

The board gave 16 pages of recommended conditions for approving the project to the developer last week. Planning Director Richard Meade said in his "25-plus years" with the city, he cannot remember the City Council rejecting a project after it received Planning

TED DECRISTOFARO

Board approval.

Cahill said he, also, believes the project would have a positive impact on Quincy because it will bring the city increased tax revenues, improvements to nearby roadways and the availability of a new place for residents to shop.

"It will be good for the whole city," he said.

Cahill said the tax money will help the city pay off the nearly $11 million in bonds for city projects the City Council recently approved by a 8-1 vote. Cahill was the only councillor to vote in

A Boston police officer from North Quincy who was shot by a prisoner last Sunday was hospitalized in good condition Tuesday. Patrolman William J. Cullinane Jr., 33, of 5 Russell St., was shot in the Roxbury Area B Station

Police Officer Shot By Prisoner Recovering

Booking Room at 1:50 p.m. by Juan Garcia, 19, of Roxbury. Garcia was subsequently shot in the left forearm by Officer Stephen Fahey, and at press time both men remained in good condition in Boston City Hospital.

Police said Garcia asked Cullinane to loosen his handcuffs, complaining that they were too tight. When Cullinane went to help him, Garcia grabbed the officer's 9mm handgun after a struggle and fired it several times, also hitting another prisoner, 27-year-old Powell Louis of Roxbury, in the right arm. Louis was taken to Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston where he was in satisfactory condition at press time.

Garcia and Louis, who were arrested in separate incidents, were handcuffed to a wall, rather than placed in a cell, because they showed signs of psychiatric problems.

The bullet that struck Cullinane passed through his right arm and into his right shoulder. Officials said there was no damage to his lungs.

Officials said Cullinane was not operated on when he was taken to the hospital and at press time there were no plans to operate. Doctors were observing Cullinane for internal injuries or complications from the wound and were unsure if the bullet was still in his body.

An eight-year veteran of the Boston Police Department, Cullinane grew up in Boston's South End. He moved to North Quincy four years ago and lives with his wife, Judith, a nurse who is expecting their second child; and their 3-year-old son William III.

Morrissey Urges MDC To Acquire Kent's Site For Open Space

Sen. Michael Morrissey has asked the commissioner of the MDC to purchase the former site of Kent's Carpetland on Quincy Shore Dr. and make it open space.

The 12,989 square-foot parcel had been the site of Kent's Carpetland until the store was heavily damaged in a fire in June. The structural remains were razed Tuesday.

The land, located at 729-733 Quincy Shore Dr. is assessed at $124,500. The property is being listed by Key Realty on Washington St. in Quincy for $125,000.

The owner of record is Edward E. McAndrews and Thomas J. Rypkems, Trustees Quincy Shore Realty Trust.

In his letter dated Tuesday, Morrissey urged MDC Commissioner Ilyas Bhatti to make the land acquisition a priority.

"I believe that the purchase of this property by the Metropolitan District Commission would be in the best interest of the neighbors, the city of Quincy and the state and that the MDC should make the purchase of this property a priority.

"This parcel is directly across the street from Wollaston Beach and its purchase would fit in perfectly with the MDC's 'Back to the Beach' campaign and offers a unique opportunity to extend the so-called green belt to Quincy Shore Dr.," Morrissey said.

State Rep. Michael

Bellotti and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan said they support Morrissey's initiative because it falls within their objective to keep harmony in the neighborhood.

"I think it's a perfect opportunity for the MDC and state to take advantage of what was not a good situation and make it into a positive situation by acquiring the only open space which is available along the boulevard. This would tie in perfectly with 'Back to the Beach' campaign and I'll be working to make this a reality," Bellotti said.

Phelan agreed. "I think to have the site become open space would be consistent with the feelings of the neighborhood. I'll work with Senator Morrissey to press upon the MDC that it's a golden opportunity for them to expand their open space along Wollaston Beach," Phelan said.

Open space acquisitions from private property are a rare occurrence, Morrissey noted.

"In my 18 years as a legislator, I can remember only one other instance where such an opportunity arose which was almost 20 years ago and is now the site of the MDC bathhouse on Quincy Shore Dr. There are no other parcels available on Quincy Shore Dr. which could be acquired for open space," Morrissey said.

"Quincy Shore Dr. is completely and heavily developed," the senator continued, "and we will not have this chance again. I urge you to take action on this parcel so that we may take advantage of this unique opportunity to increase the amount of open space along Wollaston Beach."

Library Project Receives Setback

Plans to improve handicapped accessibility at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center have received a temporary setback.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin said the library's recent invitation for bids on the accessibility project attracted only one offer from a Marshfield contractor with an estimated cost nearly twice the amount as architects had predicted. As a result, the library will solicit more bids, she said.

McLaughlin said architects for Stahl Associates of Boston had told library officials that improvements to the library's front door and walkway and construction of a ramp to the door would cost $170,200. A recent bond package passed by the City Council had that amount earmarked for the library improvements, she noted.

However, A.W. Paine

Co. of Marshfield, the lone general contracting firm that bid on the project, came up with a figure of $326,065 to complete the work. McLaughlin said a number of discrepancies, including the costs of the ramp and material for the 11,000-square-foot walkway, caused the difference in the two amounts.

McLaughlin said she hopes to have the work done by the end of December.

MDA Lock-Up At Sons Of Italy Aug. 31

The Muscular Dystrophy Association will hold its second annual Quincy Lock-Up to benefit MDA Wednesday, Aug. 31 at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St.

Among the Quincy business people getting locked up will be Phyllis Berlucci of the Quincy Animal Shelter, Bob Bosworth of The Quincy Sun, Roger Brousseau of the Quincy Neighborhood Club, Jayne Borden and Pat Murphy of Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Bill Foley Jr. of Foley Chrysler-Plymouth, and others.

Bail is set at $500. In the event that a participating "jailbird" has not raised the required bail, they will have the opportunity to use cellular phones, donated by Cellular One, to obtain more donations. During the Lock-Up, lunch will be provided by Lazzarino's Restaurant of Quincy.

Funds raised will benefit thousands of children and adults in the Greater Boston area who are affected by any one of the 40 neuromuscular diseases which the association covers. MDA provides much needed patient services and medical equipment and supports extensive research programs.

Participants will be transported to and from the Sons of Italy by Alfred's Limousine Service of Milton and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department. For more information, call 461-0310.

ADJUSTING TO LIFE WITH DIABETES

"Shock" is the word that describes how many people react to the news that they or someone they love has been diagnosed with diabetes. There is so much to learn about, so much to worry about. "Shock" is also the label given to an insulin reaction in which a diabetic's blood sugar drops to dangerously low levels, due to either too much insulin in the system or lack of food. Fortunately, learning to live with diabetes, including what to do to prevent or cope with insulin shock, has become a much less frightening task thanks to advances in self-testing of blood glucose levels. A number of small, portable blood glucose meters are available to provide fast, highly accurate glucose readings anywhere, anytime.

P.S. Self-testing of blood glucose levels is the greatest advance in managing diabetes since insulin was discovered in 1921.

Diabetics can make a real difference in the quality of their lives by making sure to exercise regularly, to eat healthfully, and to keep monitoring their blood sugar levels throughout the day. If you have further questions about this, or on how to help prevent heart disease, feel free to call either myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE (472-2550). We place strong emphasis on caring for the patient, rather than simply treating the disease. Office hours are by appointment. We have ample parking at our office, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Frank And The Prank

As mayor of Quincy from 1982 to 1989, Frank McCauley projected an image of a no-nonsense, stern, penny-pinching Jack Benny-like chief executive and maybe a little short on a sense of humor.

But those who really know him will tell you that might be the public Frank McCauley. But the private one is a fun one.

His sense of humor was in evidence the other day as he and his wife, Sandra, celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary at a reception at the Quincy Neighborhood Club attended by 95 guests.

FRANK

SANDRA

For the occasion, McCauley, who is now Executive Director of the State Retirement Department, had The Sun do a special Page One for him (a surprise to Sandra) which was distributed at the reception.

Around a photo of Frank and Sandra was a tongue-in-check article written by him.

The headline read: "Frank And Sandra McCauley Celebrate 40th Wedding Anniversary." With it were boxed sub-heads: "We never thought it would last."—Frank's boyhood friends. "Neither did we"—Sandra's girlhood chums. "Our mother deserves a medal"—Frank and Sandra's children.

Excerpts from the amusing article:

"Frank and Sandra McCauley recently hosted a reception for family and friends on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary. The cost of the gala celebration was paid for out of their children's inheritance fund.

"The McCauleys were married on Friday, Aug. 13, 1954 at Quincy City Hall by City Clerk Donald P. Crane. They did not have a church wedding because Frank, a Catholic, and Sandra, a Protestant, could not agree on which church to get married. "We had some real battles over that issue," Sandra recalled.

"Mrs. McCauley, the former Sandra MacKinnon, a homemaker for the past 40 years, is the owner and proprietor of Sandra's Day Care and Bay Sitting Service (Ed. note: eight grandchildren), a truly non-profit operation."

"She is a former trustee of the Quincy Historical Society and a present member of the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, a position from which she constantly badgers Mayor James Sheets for increased funding for library services.

"Asked to reflect and comment on her 40-year marriage, Sandra said: "It's been a long, hard road, but I think the worst is behind me."

"Sandra noted that over the past 40 years, she has often remembered the advice her father gave her as a young girl: Never marry an Irishman."

"In response to questions about the qualities that she most admires in her husband, Sandra unhesitatingly answered, "His patience and thoughtfulness. Frank particularly enjoys having his eight grandchildren, ages 5 and under, spend an entire day at our home. Despite all the noise and chaos, Frank never complains and he actually cries when they go home in the evening."

"Sandra also proudly noted that when they built their new home on Manet Avenue in 1969, Frank insisted on installing expensive thermoplane windows throughout the house."

"He did not want me climbing a ladder twice a year to put and take down the storm windows as I had to do at our home on Medway Street."

Sandra also noted:

"During the winter months, Frank insists on going out in the cold the night before a snowstorm to move our cars to the end of the driveway so that in the morning I won't have to shovel the entire length of both of our driveways."

Well, as you can see, McCauley does have a pretty good sense of humor. But you know he really can't be the tightwad he likes to have you think he is.

He's going to have The Sun Page One framed to give to Sandra. And he told her he'll even buy the frame.

(For a more traditional account of their 40th wedding anniversary, see Page 7).

FORMER STATE SENATOR Paul Harold's Furnace Brook Parkway home this summer has taken on the appearance of a United Nations mini-headquarters.

HAROLD

He so far has hosted guests from three continents:

A newly elected member of the Columbian Senate, a law professor from Cape Town South Africa; teachers from Belfast and Galway and Richard Haslam, former county manager of Limerick, Ireland.

Harold held a cookout for members of the Quincy City Council to meet Haslam who is also a teaching colleague of Harold's at the University of Cork in the School of Public Administration.

MILESTONE: Muriel Goudy, one of Quincy High School's all-time popular teachers, must have found the Fountain of Youth. She's celebrating her—hard to believe—89th birthday. A real young 89.

MURIEL

She's still as bubbly, full of enthusiasm and as interested in young people as she was back in the 1940's when she was trying to drill some proper English into me. (I had a crush on her then and still do).

She was, to those of us lucky enough to be in her classroom, not only an outstanding teacher but a good friend. She always found the time to help you if you needed extra help and to encourage and steer you in the right career direction.

She always was what a teacher should be—dedicated with a capital "D."

Happy birthday to a grand lady.

QUINCY POET Anna Toma Anderson has four poems in "Our World's Favorite Poems" published by the National Library of Poetry. Anna was an early contributor to "Poet's Corner" in The Quincy Sun.

Her four poems, "Life's Harmony", "Kindness", "Divine and Infinite Love" and "A Star Is Born" are dedicated to her late husband, George Anderson, who had restaurants and was politically active in the 1950's.

Says Granite Crossing Satisfies Zoning, Other Requirements

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

There they go again. The anti-Wal-Mart group seems content on continuing their relentless campaign of making false and misleading statements in an effort to prevent Quincy from receiving the many jobs and benefits associated with the Granite Crossing Shopping Center.

In her Aug. 11 letter to The Quincy Sun, Sylvia Mignon wants the Planning Board to advise the Quincy City Council to forego the Granite Crossing Shopping Center, its 200 union construction jobs, 500 permanent store jobs, and $575,000 dollars in annual tax revenue because of her concerns for other projects that might some day develop in Quincy Point.

Ms. Mignon begins her argument by referencing sections of the Zoning Ordinance that apply to the Board of Appeals, which we are not before. Although we can demonstrate that we meet the Board of Appeals criteria, which does not apply, Ms. Mignon should be referencing the Planning Board and City Council criteria which we clearly conform to (see not at the end of this letter). If Mignon were concerned about the impact of future development in the Quincy Point area, she would endorse the $1 million dollar roadway improvement plan we are proposing.

Atlantic Development understands the need to improve the existing roadway infrastructure and that is one of our primary reasons for spending countless hours working with city and state officials coordinating these improvements.

Mignon argues that Quincy Point cannot sustain a fully operational shipyard, a maritime museum, and a shopping center. Although she leads the opposition to economic development in Quincy, Mignon is not a longtime resident of Quincy. She may not be aware of the days when Quincy's shipyard was among the most productive in the world, and employed over 30,000 people. Nor does Mignon remember Ace Auto, the auto salvage yard that also operated in Quincy Point. Indeed, she probably does not appreciate the fact that Atlantic Development plans to clean up the mess that was left behind.

As stated earlier, we will be improving the existing roadway conditions to benefit all of Quincy Point, including items such as fully rebuilding the intersection on East and West Howard Sts., directly benefitting the shipyard and maritime museum.

The planning board unanimously approved Atlantic Development's proposal to improve Falls Boulevard because it ameliorated dangerous and annoying traffic conditions and ensured that none of the shopping center's traffic will pass the Falls driveway. The plan was developed with significant input from the Falls Condominium Association. The argument that the parcel is not suitable for retail development is completely unrealistic. The site's past use includes an auto salvage yard and rock crushing yard, and its entrance is at a major 4-way intersection. Maybe that is why the land recently sold for additional condominium development abutting the Falls and Granite Crossing rose in value in only a few months. The buyer obviously knows that prospective residents will appreciate the convenience of living near a high-quality retail shopping center.

Mignon continues to misrepresent and exaggerate the number of cars that will travel to Granite Crossing. She alleges that 16,000 new car trips will be made. Contrary to what Mignon suggests, Falls Boulevard is not a quiet country lane. In fact, the boulevard was originally constructed to service approximately seventy acres of vacant land zoned for commercial uses. The peak period for customers will be Saturday when up to 8,000 customers are expected between the supermarket and Wal-Mart. All other days the volumes are projected at less than that. None of the vehicles pass the Falls driveway. In addition, Mignon makes the specious argument that Wal-Mart will destroy retail sales at local shops.

Finally, in their attempt to stop jobs and retail development in Quincy, the anti-Wal-Mart group has resorted to using scare tactics in their advertising efforts. Let me briefly recap several of their glaring inaccuracies.

"They say 16,000 new vehicle trips every Saturday and Sunday. The truth: up to 8,000 customers only on peak Saturdays."

"They say Wal-Mart is a 'warehouse style retail' store. The truth: Granite Crossing's Wal-Mart will be an attractively designed community retail center, barely visible from the road or from the Falls Condominiums. The Wal-Mart store will be their special New England design recently used in North Adams, Mass., to blend in with the character of Quincy. In addition, the supermarket is being designed by John Shekely, a local architect noted for his good taste. Shekely has designed many of Quincy's more attractive

When All Else Fails, Try Prayer

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

President Clinton suddenly has found religion in the wake of the resounding defeat of his ineffective crime bill. In speaking to a church congregation, the president has revealed that it is God's will that the crime bill be passed.

Would that our president, who has ruthlessly misused the power of this executive order to promote death to the unborn, also recognize the will of God in preventing the very real crime of abortion.

Prayers are always needed. But let us pray first for all the little innocents who have been tossed into eternity before they had a chance to live out in this world the purpose for which they were created.

Half Million Grant To Develop Vo-Tech School

The School Committee accepted the offer of the American Institute of Research to seek a half million dollars grant to help Quincy develop and evaluate an experimental curriculum for the planned $5 million vocational technical school.

Aug. 25-31,
1964

30 Years Ago

Under the proposal, the institute and the city would work together over a five year period to plan the curriculum with the $500,000 grant paying the salaries of research scientists, travel, educational consultants, materials and services.

Quincy would retain final control of the curriculum, School Supt. Robert E. Pruitt assured the School Committee.

CONVENTION FIGHT

Mrs. Ida R. Lyons of Quincy, secretary of the Massachusetts delegation, emerged as a key figure in the bitter floor fight over the credentials of rival delegations from Mississippi at the Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Lyons, a member of the convention's credentials committee, said she hoped an arrangement could be worked out which would recognize the position of the predominantly Negro Freedom Party group while not alienating the "duly-elected" white delegation.

CLAM POLLUTION

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash directed Shellfish Constable Carmelo Morreale to inspect the clam-digging areas on the Quincy shore line daily and prepare weekly reports on conditions for the Health Department.

"Good clams are nutritious, savory and digestible and are an important addition to the diet," said Dr. Ash. "But man has made shellfish a danger to himself by polluting the water in which shellfish live."

Josephine Collins St. Coletta Day School Volunteer Of The Year

By LIAM FITZGERALD

After 22 years of volunteer service at the St. Coletta Day School for multi-handicapped, moderately to severely developmentally delayed students, Josephine Collins finally got what she deserved - the "Community Volunteer of the Year" Award.

"I enjoy what I'm doing. It's for the kids," Collins said. "Everyone there is a hard worker and gives it their best effort to make sure everything runs smoothly."

Collins, who was presented the award by St. Coletta Day School Director Lawrence Lambros at a recent gathering, deflected some of the credit to the many others who help out at the school.

"Everyone who helps out gives of their time and effort to help others," Collins said. "They all do a great job, a real team effort is put forth."

Collins said she got involved when a friend invited her to join her one day.

"I had never gone before, but I had just lost my husband, and the lady next door asked me to go with her," Collins said. "St. Coletta's was the first place I went to, and I've been there ever since. It's been wonderful."

Her co-workers at the Braintree day school are quick to note how valuable she is to making sure everything runs as planned every time bingo is held, on Wednesday evenings, Saturday afternoons and evenings.

"She's always willing to help," Tony Sheeper, who JOSEPHINE COLLINS recently won the "Community Volunteer of the Year" Award from St. Coletta Day School in Braintree. Presenting the award is Lawrence Lambros, director of the day school.

runs the bingo Collins faithfully attends, said, "Whatever you ask her to do, she'll do it. She's a very dependable and reliable person."

Sheeper, who has worked the bingo for 14 years, said Collins is loved by all who know her at the school.

"Everyone knows her, and knows they can depend on her to be there when they need her," Sheeper said. "She definitely deserved the award. No doubt about it."

Collins, who has lived in the same house in Quincy all her life, said she rarely misses an afternoon or evening of bingo, though she notes she was unable to attend a recent bingo due to a prior engagement - her 57th High School Reunion at Quincy High School.

In addition to the volunteer work Collins does at St. Coletta's, she works three hours a day, five days a week, to "feed the little darlings" in the Quincy Public Schools.

"I like people, and I seem to get along with many of them," Collins said. "It's enough to get me up and out of bed and moving around, I guess."

She said she will continue to volunteer her time and effort to helping others, because, as she says, "they needed help, and I was able to give it to them. I wouldn't do it if I didn't love it. And I'll keep doing it until I can't do it anymore."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman:

'Protecting Quincy's Citizens Comes First'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. What made you first decide to become a firefighter? I know you had relatives, including your father, who were in your profession.

A. My father was a member of the Quincy Fire Department for 43 years, and 20 as chief. And I had an uncle on my mother's side that was a captain of the Boston Fire Department for 42 years. And I grew up right in back of the fire station, so that was always a place to go, and develop friendships. And (through) the excitement of the apparatus going out, (and) going to fires with my father, I developed a yearning to be on the department, and be part of it.

Q. What kind of training is involved in becoming a firefighter?

A. Well, when I came on it was a three-week drill school. Prior to your coming on, they would put you on a three-week day shift from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. And then you'd go into a group, and during that time they'd put you through various in-service trainings.

But today, due to liabilities, you don't do it that way anymore. Now you put them in a drill school first, and through eight weeks. And the new criteria will be an 11-week course.

Q. It's pretty rigorous training, isn't it? There's a lot more than just learning how to hook up a hose and putting water on a fire.

A. Oh, yes. The fire service in the last 30 years has progressed into E.M.S. (emergency medical service). They now have hazardous materials they have to deal with. We just finished a class of defibrillator training for the whole department; we put them through a 40-hour course on hazardous material run by the International Firefighters Association.

The chemicals you are now deriving from fires are very hazardous to your health. The old adage of, "the guy who went in with the mask was the big hero" today is "the guy who doesn't go in with the mask is in serious trouble" because of chemicals derived from the burning of plastics and other by-products of materials that are out there today.

So consequently, a firefighter has to have a good working knowledge of all these materials; he has to have a good knowledge of building construction. Today, you have very complex fire protection systems such as sprinklers and all that, and a fellow really has to be on his toes. Not that they weren't on their toes years ago; it's just that the deal of the fire service has broadened so much to what it was 30, 40 years ago.

Q. There are different kinds of fires, aren't there?

A. That's right. Today you have fires from plastics, fires from chemicals, oil fires, electrical fires. A lot of the hazards of these fires were not known to the older-type firefighters; consequently, many of them died due to the fact that they didn't have the proper equipment. Today, we're making leaps and bounds in the fire service in the type of equipment that is being issued to the firefighter to make his job a safer job.

Q. What does a firefighter do besides fight fires? There's that stereotype of saving a cat that's stuck in a tree, etc.

A. (Smiles). You know, the image of the firefighter sitting around playing checkers and all that, those days are gone. Because every day when a firefighter comes in today, we put a film on of the latest techniques of fighting fires, the latest techniques in E.M.S. and all that. We recently did a tunnel training course. Every day there's something coming in the fire service that's making a dramatic change.

Q. I imagine there have been some Quincy firefighters killed in the line of duty.

A. Yes, over the years there have been several killed. One fellow that stands out is Patsy DeGrego; he was thrown off the back of Engine One and went under the wheels in front of Quincy High School on Coddington Street on an icy day. We had another, George MacDonald, who was making a rescue FIRE CHIEF Thomas Gorman says numerous technological advances have helped make the firefighting profession more efficient than it was when he first joined the Quincy Fire Department 31 years ago. "Everyday there's something coming in the fire service that's making a dramatic change," he says.

FULL NAME: Thomas Francis Gorman Jr.

AGE: 56

ADDRESS: Peann's Hill

OCCUPATION: chief of the Quincy Fire Department since 1991. Previously served as acting chief, 1990-91 and deputy chief, 1983-90 (including a brief period as acting chief in 1988); overall, has been with the department 31 years

EDUCATION: graduated from Quincy High School, 1956; received associate's degree in fire science from Massasoit Community College, 1980 FAMILY: married to the former Sarah O'Neill. They have two children: Thomas III of Quincy and George of Quincy and died of a heart attack. We had Lt. Ed McAdams, who was assisting at a fire in Wollaston and died as a result of a heart attack.

The job is a very strenuous job, and if you do have any medical deficiencies or ailments, they show up very quickly at fires and under stressful conditions.

Q. What's the worst fire you've seen in Quincy?

A. Well, they're all tough and each fire is unique in its own way. I think the one of the greatest magnitude that I can remember is the Kincaide fire (the former Kincaide's furniture store in Quincy Center). That was a situation where when we arrived, the heavy fire was knocked down quickly, but the fire had gained such headway into the open voids in the building that in a short time it took that whole building. Even with the efforts of over 40 firefighters to get ahead of it, it made such headway. And due to the size of the building, it had a potential of extending into the rest of the buildings along Quincy Square. But we were able to contain the fire within that one building. I would say that's the most spectacular fire we've had within recent years.

Q. Was anybody seriously hurt in that fire?

A. Fortunately, we walked away from that fire with relatively few minor injuries.

Q. There was also a house fire in January 1991 in Hough Neck that killed two children and their aunt.

A. Those are the tragic fires; those are the fires that never leave your mind. That fire was a great loss to the family; it was something that they'll never forget and the firefighters will never forget. It was a fire that started, not through carelessness, it just started because of an electric heater that got too close to a bed. Consequently, the fire made perfect headway very rapidly; from all indications, there was a delay in an alarm to the fire department which compounded the situation and consequently, we lost three people.

Q. On a lighter note, maybe you could recount how you first became chief.

A. Well, in 1988 I took over as acting chief under (then) Mayor (Francis) McCauley, and then Deputy Chief O'Connell took over as chief. In 1990, he chose to go back to being a deputy, and Mayor (James) Sheets asked me to take over the department again. In 1991, I was appointed permanent chief after a Civil Service exam.

It's been very challenging job; the fire chief's job is very challenging. Today you have the union to deal with, and the union is a great thing because it's got many firefighters' benefits. But today you have to sit down and negotiate with them before you can mandate things; you have to sit down at the bargaining table and negotiate things that before were just automatic under the old chiefs.

Q. The chief's job must have more desk work than what you did in the past. You probably don't get to many fires these days.

A. That's correct. I only go out on serious fires or fires that require my attention. It is a lot of paperwork, and a lot of talking to people; over the last few years I've worked on the (MWRA) sludge plant (at the Fore River shipyard) which has been plagued with certain problems—fire-related and other safety issues. We have a tunnel project now in Quincy, and we're working on that; we have another tunnel project that's going to enter the city from Deer Island to Nut Island. All these things require my attention to make sure they're done correctly.

I do have a good team around me that I can rely on: Deputy Chief Paul Cuddy out of Fire Prevention, Bob Campbell, the superintendent of Fire Alarm; and my office help. All are important key factors, as all the firefighters are. The fire department runs, but it needs everybody to make it run, and if you don't have everybody working, then it makes my job even harder.

But it is a very paper-oriented job, and a very people-oriented job; you have to deal with people all the time and review projects which come into the city which are an important part of the job.

Q. You're also on the city's License Board.

A. That's correct. Originally, the board was made up of three members: the fire chief, the police chief and the city clerk. In 1949, that was changed; my father was chairman of the board at that time and he felt the board should be updated with other key personnel in the city. And it was expanded to five from three; added at that time were the building inspector and the health inspector.

Q. Do you miss the excitement of fighting the fires?

A. There's no question about it. When the trucks are going out the door, I wish I'm going with them (smiles). Once you become a firefighter, it gets in your blood. If I ever hear about a fire in another city or town nearby, I'll make sure that I get there, because it's a learning experience. One thing in the fire service that you learn every day is the day that you think you know everything, that's the day to leave the job.

Q. You and Police Chief Francis Mullen are among the highest paid city officials in Quincy (each earns $69,500 annually), and even earn more than the mayor ($62,500). How does that make you feel? Proud? Uncomfortable?

A. (Smiles). Well, I feel that because the duties I have and the duties Chief Mullen has, both of us deserve what we get. We're here 24 hours a day, and when there's a situation that arises, we're the ones that everybody looks to, to be a fire, a riot, a hurricane or anything. It's the fire chief and the police chief that maintain the safety of the city, and I believe I'm worth every penny of it (smiles). If I didn't, then I should quit the job. But I feel as though I give my all to this city.

Chief Mullen and I have a lot of responsibility. We have everybody's lives in the City of Quincy on our line, and the protection of the citizens of Quincy, I believe, comes first.

Municipal Dumpsters Must Be Enclosed By Sept. 1

All municipal buildings will have to have their dumpsters fenced in by a gate or some kind of enclosure by Sept. 1.

The City Council last March amended a city ordinance passed two years ago requiring all commercial buildings to keep their dumpsters enclosed to also include schools and all other municipal buildings.

The municipal dumpsters will also have to be kept on a cement bay of some kind similar to the ones underneath dumpsters at commercial facilities.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, who introduced the amendment, said the school dumpsters are particularly important because children play around them. He added that the municipal dumpsters should probably have been enclosed before the com-

Steve Williams Candidate For State Representative

Steve Williams has announced his candidacy for the Second Norfolk State Representative seat.

He issued a call for change and a challenge to those present to get involved with the political process.

"The time has come for a change in representation for the City of Quincy. The time has come to bring new ideas and energy to the State House," Williams told a gathering at Flanagan's in Quincy Center.

A Republican and a political newcomer, Williams said he would fight for the strict punishment of criminals, including passage of a comprehensive death penalty, and for the reform of the current welfare system.

"The recent House vote to override the governor's veto of 'welfare reform' showed that the present office holders don't want real change. This was a loophole-ridden status-quo plan. My vote gladly would have been with the governor to force the legislature to forge the real reform plan the public demands," Williams said.

Two members of the campaign staff were introduced by Williams. J. Weston Crowley will manage Williams' campaign and Michael W. McCue will act as communications director.

Beechwood Recital Aug. 30

The Beechwood Music School will hold a Summer Student Recital of its piano and voice students Tuesday, Aug. 30 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Beechwood Community Life Center, 225 Fenn St., Wollaston.

The Beechwood Music School is Quincy's non-profit professional music school, staffed with conservatory-trained musician educators.

The school offers private and class lessons on all instruments plus voice and dance.

The school is supported through tuition revenues, the National Endowment for the Arts, the Quincy Arts Council, the Massachusetts Cultural Council, and community contributions.

buildings, including the recent addition to the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., across from the Thomas Crane Library.

"They say Granite Crossing will cause 'irreparable damage to the natural environment.' The truth: the undeveloped contaminated parcel is currently strewn with the debris left behind by Ace Auto and the rock crushing operation. Atlantic Development will be required to meet environmental standards when it cleans up the rubble and gravel left behind and replaces it with an attractive single story shopping center.

"They say 'wetlands impact.' The truth: there is no work proposed to any wetlands. Additionally, the storm water run-off from the site will be captured by an existing and more than adequate detention basin that is already in place.

"They say 'gear grinding 18 wheeler climbing Falls Boulevard.' The truth: the Planning Board has unanimously approved our design changes to Falls Blvd. that will divert truck traffic away from the condominiums and into Granite Crossing, such that none of the vehicles will pass by the Falls driveway. These design changes were developed with input from the Falls Condominium Association.

"They say 'millions of lost sales for existing Quincy small businesses.'"

The truth: Granite Crossing and Wal-Mart will attract more shoppers to Quincy and stem the annual $146 million dollar retail sales outflow caused by Quincy's lack of sufficient retail shopping centers.

During the past several months, it has become clear that the overwhelming majority of Quincy business leaders and residents support Granite Crossing. I truly hope we can work together to ensure that Quincy receives the many benefits and jobs associated with this exciting new project.

Note: Mignon used Article I Section 15.2 of the Quincy Zoning Ordinances which does not apply to the Planned Unit Development (PUD) that Atlantic Development has applied for. The appropriate sections of the Quincy Zoning Ordinance include Article III Section 31.2 (a) and 31.2 (c), each of which we conform to and have demonstrated time and time again. It is important to realize that Mignon refers to the wrong sections of the ordinances.

Granite Crossing clearly satisfies the applicable provisions Quincy's zoning requirements as well as the criteria that Mignon specifically makes reference to in her letter - even though these conditions do not apply to PUD Special Permits.

Studds To Speak At Education Foundation Brunch

The Quincy Foundation for Excellence in Education will host its fourth annual brunch on Sunday, Sept. 18 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Ocean Terrace, Marina Bay.

Guest speaker Cong. Gerry Studds will speak on education and its challenges.

The Foundation is a not-for-profit corporation, dedicated to raising funds for programs, ideas and services for the promotion of excellence in education in Quincy public schools. In the past three years, the organization has awarded mini-grants totaling over $7,000 to nearly two dozen teachers throughout the Quincy public school system for projects as diverse as establishing a Foreign Language Honor Society to starting a "homework center."

This year the foundation will host a number of teachers who were awarded mini-grants at the end of the 1993-94 school year. Teachers will be hand to describe their projects, and how they intend to use the grant money for the benefit of Quincy's public school children.

The brunch will feature food and a prize drawing.

Tickets are $20 per person. For tickets, write

Quincy Foundation for Excellence in Education, c/o Sharon Jarvie, 71 Beach St., Wollaston, MA 02170.

Checks should be made payable to Quincy Foundation for Excellence in Education, Inc. Donations are tax-deductible.

A limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

The Summerfest Concert Series at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre off Southern Artery, now in its 12th season, has become something of a tradition for many Quincy residents.

Summerfest '94 will conclude another successful year in a grand way when the 45-piece U.S. Air Force Band of Liberty from Hanscom Air Force Base comes to the amphitheatre Wednesday, Aug. 31 from 7 to 9 p.m. In the event of rain, the show will be held in the auditorium at North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock St.

For City Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who since 1983 has served as president of the Quincy-South Shore Cultural Commission—which launched the series that same year—Summerfest is a way for people to put aside their troubles for a Wednesday evening and just relax.

"It's become a traditional thing," said LaRaia, who noted that this year's nine-week series has enjoyed crowds of more than 400 people per show. "It breaks up the week for people who aren't on vacation."

LaRaia said he originally came up with the idea for the series in 1982 while campaigning for the office of Norfolk County clerk of courts. He was particularly impressed, he said, by a similar series held in the Town of Norwood.

"It impressed me to see all these people just convening in front of Town Hall on a Wednesday evening," he said. "It seemed to be a very relaxed atmosphere. I was surprised that a city like Quincy, as big as it is, didn't have a similar program."

A member of the City Council at the time,

ACTRESS RUTH GORDON waves to the crowd from the stage of the amphitheatre named for her. With her is Mrs. Louise LaRaia. The occasion was Ruth Gordon Day, Nov. 10, 1984 which was her last visit to Quincy. She died in 1985 at her Martha's Vineyard home. She was 88.

LaRaia asked then-Mayor Frank McCauley if the city might appropriate $3,000 to help get the series off its feet. McCauley said yes, and the rest is history.

"It was risky," said LaRaia. "There was not much cultural activity in the city at the time."

The Cultural Commission reimbursed the $3,000 a year later when it installed iron railings throughout the amphitheatre, which was still under construction. Since then, the city has not had to help fund the free concert series, which is supported by the Quincy Arts Council and private donations from area businesses and individuals.

For the first two years, the series was held on the front lawn of City Hall. In 1985, it was moved to the amphitheatre. While the Cultural Commission relied on a number of volunteers to help prepare the amphitheatre for Summerfest, LaRaia singled out the late John Bonomi, a West Quincy carpenter, as being particularly helpful during that time.

LaRaia said Wednesday evenings were chosen because it was decided the series, like the one in Norwood, should not have to compete with weekend entertainment.

"Wednesday is not a competitive evening," he said. "And it's a lull in the week."

Initially, LaRaia said, the Cultural Commission had to tap a variety of sources to find entertainment for the series. Today, however, groups contact LaRaia asking if they may participate.

The talent usually reflects a wide musical spectrum. Summerfest '94 acts have performed Irish folk music, "Big Band" tunes and a variety of music from the 1950s, '60s and '70s.

LaRaia said the series has reached a point where he feels confident it will remain a success whenever he decides to step down as Cultural Commission president.

"I can't believe it's been 12 years," he said wistfully. "But I think there's enough interest in the arts now that if I passed it on (to someone else), it would be able to continue."

He added that he takes pride in the fact that he and the others involved were able to elevate it to a consistent level of success.

"I enjoy it, very much so," he said. "We've been able to put the amphitheatre to a really positive use. I feel very satisfied with what we've accomplished."

“Wal-Mart will draw people back to Quincy.”

Tony Agnitti, Quincy Businessman

It wasn't all that long ago that Quincy had a thriving retail district. People were working and shopping right here where they lived, and the whole city was prospering. With the proposed new Wal-Mart at Granite Crossing, that pleasant memory could also be our bright future.

A new Wal-Mart in Quincy would help fuel the economy and revitalize our entire community. Quincy shoppers would stay in Quincy to take advantage of Wal-Mart's low prices, great selection and exceptional service. Not only that, but a fully developed Granite Crossing would generate over a half-million dollars in new real estate taxes.

And then there are the jobs. Two hundred construction jobs. Five hundred new permanent jobs, about two hundred of them at Wal-Mart. And 70% of those will be quality, full-time jobs with benefits and profit sharing that provide an excellent opportunity for career advancement.

Put it all together and you have an opportunity that Quincy simply cannot afford to pass up. Support the development at Granite Crossing.

And Wal-Mart. Always a good neighbor.

Adams Site Offering Free Tours Today

The Adams National Historic Site will suspend its usual $2 entrance fee for the entire day today (Thursday).

The site is joining other National Parks around the country in celebrating the establishment of the National Park Service on Aug. 25, 1916.

Tours of the entire Adams Site will be conducted every hour on a first come, first serve basis from the National Park Service Visitor Center at 1250 Hancock St. (Presidents Place), Quincy Center. A trolley-bus shuttle service is available to connect the Adams National Historic Site free of charge.

The National Park Service was created as an agency within the Department of the Interior when President Woodrow Wilson signed an "organic act" on Aug. 25, 1916. Originally charged with protecting, conserving, promoting and regulating the uses of 40 National Parks in a way that left them "unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations," the National Park Service now manages 357 areas and over 80 million acres.

The Adams National Historic Site was established as a unit of the National Park Service on Dec. 9, 1946 when by an Act of Congress, the Secretary of the Interior accepted the "Old House," with all its furnishings and accompanying estate, through a deed of gift, from the Adams Memorial Society.

In 1979, the John Adams and John Quincy Adams Birthplaces, the oldest presidential birthplaces in the country, were added to the park boundary. In 1993, the Adams National Historic Site opened its Visitor Center and, by cooperative agreement with United First Parish Church, offers interpretative tours of the crypts of the Presidents and the First Ladies.

The Adams National Historic Site commemorates the lives and achievements of the Adams family including the second and sixth U.S. presidents, John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their descendants. For more information, call 770-1175.

Quincy Couple's Son On Navy Ship Enforcing Haiti Embargo

(Special To The Quincy Sun)

Navy Fireman William Lydon, son of William and Mary Lydon of Quincy, is one of more than 3,000 Navy men and women and 2,000 Marines who patrol the waters just miles off the coast of Haiti.

Lydon is a damage controlman onboard USS Spartanburg County, a tank landing ship homeported in Norfolk, Va. The mission of the ship is to transport and land amphibious vehicles and Marines during an amphibious assault.

Lydon and the rest of the crew, which includes a Marine contingent, have spent the last four weeks steaming the Caribbean off Haiti as part of a four-ship amphibious ready group. The ARG augments combined forces assigned to enforce United Nations Security Council sanctions aimed at restoring democracy to Haiti.

The ARG provides additional amphibious non-combatant evacuation operation capable forces. "We are here standing by," Lydon said, "ready if needed." There are 12 Navy ships currently supporting Operation Support Democracy.

The Sailors and Marines departed Norfolk and Morehead City, N.C., more than a month ago. Lydon and the crew of

WILLIAM LYDON

USS Spartanburg County began their current mission just two weeks after they returned from a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean Sea and Indian Ocean.

Lydon's job is to prevent and combat any fires and damage aboard the ship. He also trains his shipmates in damage control techniques.

Lydon entered the Navy in 1991, following graduation from Quincy High School.

Lydon, 29, says he's happy with his accomplishments in the Navy thus far. "I've gotten a sense of accomplishment from the Navy because it has helped me grow up."

ROBERT GIBBONS of Quincy (center) was recently inducted as an honorary member into the Suffolk University Sigma Lambda chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the national political science honor society. With him are Dr. John C. Berg, professor of government and Dr. Agnes S. Bain, professor and chairperson of the government department at Suffolk.

Hospital Incontinence Group Meeting Sept. 12

Quincy Hospital's new Incontinence Support Group for women meets on the second Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the hospital's Education Center, not on the second Wednesday as recently indicated.

The first meeting of the group will take place on Monday, Sept. 12. For more information contact Pat McCall at 774-1864.

Quincy, North Begin Football Practice Today

The Quincy High and North Quincy High football teams began practice today (Thursday) in preparation for the 1994 season.

Conditioning practices will be held through Saturday. The ever-dreaded double sessions begin Monday and last until next Friday.

The Presidents (7-3) boasted the better record last season but it is the Red Raiders (6-4) who hold their heads high due to their 14-7 win on Thanksgiving. Both teams finished with 5-3 records in the Old Colony League.

It was North Quincy's third consecutive Turkey Day win.

North Quincy began last season in defense of their 1992 Super Bowl title, but were disappointed after a 1-4 start. They gelled late, however, with five consecutive wins to end the season. The Presidents entered the Thanksgiving classic with five straight wins of their own, including a 42-28 win at Barnstable that knocked the Cape team out of the Super Bowl picture.

NQ begins the new season Friday, Sept. 16 under the lights at Stoughton High School. The Presidents play the following afternoon at Marshfield High.

The 1994 North Quincy and Quincy teams will feature two of the best runners in the Old Colony League. Red Raider Sean Nee and President Sam Brown will be the top men for their respective offenses. Nee is one of the most dangerous backs in recent history at North Quincy. He is small, but fast, quick and frighteningly agile. Brown is the polar opposite. Massive and bruising, he has no need to step around anyone. Both players will likely lead their team in rushing and scoring this season.

Wide receiver/running back Derrick Epps will be North Quincy's other top offensive threat. The Presidents will be keyed by a large and experienced offensive line to open holes for Brown. The OL returns four of five starters from last year's squad.

Complete previews of both teams and the expectations of NQ coach Ken McPhee and Quincy coach Jack Raymer will appear in upcoming weeks.

Both schools have an interesting schedule change this season. For the past several years Plymouth North and Plymouth South High Schools fielded a combined football team, the Plymouth High Eagles. The MIAA recently ruled against the joint teams and beginning this season the Quincy schools will play Plymouth South which remains in the Old Colony League. Plymouth North moves to the Atlantic Coast League.

With the change it is unlikely that the Plymouth squad will repeat as OCL champions.

The Presidents have one other significant change in their schedule. Gone are the Matignon Warriors who were buried by Quincy, 36-6, in the fifth week of the season last year. In their place are the New Bedford Whalers, the defending Div. 1B Super Bowl champions. The game, which will be played at Veterans Memorial Stadium Oct. 14, could prove to be one of the biggest in Eastern Mass. football this season.

St. John's Golf Winners

Parishioners and friends of the St. John the Baptist Church recently held their second annual golf outing at Presidents Golf Course.

The winning mixed team included Bob Kelley, Jan Kelley, Rick Devaney and Ken Gately, finished at 14-under-par. Members of the winning men's team at 13-under-par were Jeff Sweeney, Eric McLaughlin, Ed Gilfoyle and Joe O'Donnell. The winning women's team of Sheila McIntyre, Joan Matthews, Helen Duffy and Tippy Marella finished at plus-4.

A consolation prize went the team of Bill

Manning, Mary Kirby, Chet Giggs and Richie Comeau.

Devaney was closest to the pin on the 18th hole. Billy Degan was closest to the line on the 12th.

A steak bake and awards banquet followed at the church hall.

Degan Road Race Sept. 18

The second annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will take place Sunday, Sept. 18 at 10 a.m.

The race is held in honor of Degan, a former Quincy resident and deputy in the United States Marshal Service killed in the line of duty in Aug. 1992.

The 10K road race begins and ends at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Also featured will be a 5K run/fun walk for those not up to the 10K challenge.

Over 300 runners are already registered and law enforcement officials and military personnel from around the nation will participate. Race officials anticipate over 1,500 runners will take part.

Mayor James Sheets will start the race and Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci have expressed a desire to participate.

According to race chairperson Karen Degan, William felt very strongly about drug abuse, education, sports and the community, therefore the beneficiaries of this year's race will be the Quincy DARE program and the U.S. Marine Corps Charities.

Free refreshments will be provided and a raffle will be held for all participants and their families.

Other family activities will also be held.

People interested in racing or helping with the event can contact a committee member at 499-7993.

LaBrequette's Baseball Model Wins Best Of Show Award

A 3-D model commemorating the 125th anniversary of Major League Baseball created by participants from the LaBrequette playground was the winner of the Quincy Recreation's annual Arts and Crafts display.

The best of show award was made after the public voted on 21 projects from each of the city's playgrounds.

The creations were on display for two days at McIntyre Mall.

Four other playgrounds were recognized for their artistic talents. They are:

•Fenno St. park, model of the playground, second place.

•Pollard playground, model of the historic Adams Houses, third.

•Palmer Park, model of Wollaston Beach, fourth.

•Faxon Park, creator of "Striker the Soccer Dog," fifth.

Recreation Director Barry Welch congratulated all the participants and thanked all those who voted on the playgrounds' works of art.

He also thanked the following sponsors for donating prizes for the top entries: Baskin Robbins, Friendly's, Green Taxi, Napoli Pizza and Sub Shops, Papa Gino's, Purdy's Homemade Ice Cream Parlor, Brigham's Ice Cream in Braintree and the Quincy Police Drug Unit.

Participants who worked on the LaBrequette

FAXON PARK'S creation of "Striker the Soccer Dog" took fifth place in the Quincy Recreation Department's annual Arts and Crafts display contest.

playground project were Jill McInnis, Jen Conley, Laurie Oaks, Bill Viere, Jill Leth, Nic Alden, John Galligan, John Katsarikas, Mark Hawes, Mike Conley, Christina Conley, Mark Dunn, Mike Sullivan, Dan Dorsey, Erin Morrell, Jessie Cashins, and recreation leaders Kim Marsden, Steve Barrett and Wayne Weikel.

Fenno Street's project was created by Ali Haddad, Betsy Stone, Kelly Scott, Mary Sullivan, Steve Marella, Kevin Walsh, Caitlin Powers, Ryan Barrett, Chris Carthas, Sarah Shea, Kristin Greene, and recreation leader Jen Richmond, Jeremy Gott and Mark Walsh.

Recreation leaders Debbie Russell and Pat Clifford along with Jackie Goguen, Jeff Russell, Mark Robertson, John Lee, Dennis Pollard, Mike Finer, and Jack Daley crafted Pollard Park's display project.

ADAMS BIRTHPLACE MODEL crafted by the Pollard Playground finished third in the Quincy Recreation Department's annual Arts and Crafts display contest.

PALMER PLAYGROUND'S MODEL of Wollaston Beach finished fourth in the Quincy Recreation Department's annual Arts and Crafts display contest.

Recreation Tennis Tournament Sept. 8

The Quincy Recreation Department and Continental Cablevision will co-sponsor the city's 24th annual tennis tournament.

The Quincy tournament is open to all Quincy residents and will take place at the Vo-Tech courts week nights and weekends beginning Thursday, Sept. 8.

Events are Men 50 and over, Men 35 and over, Men's Singles, Men's Doubles, Mixed Doubles, Women 35 and over, Women's Singles, Women's Doubles, Boys 16 and under, and Girls 16 and under.

A consolation event for the first round losers in the Women's and Men's Singles will also be held.

The event will be overseen by longtime director and past tournament champion John Franceschini.

Applications are available at the Recreation Department, City Hall or Continental Cablevision, or by calling 376-1394.

Friday, Sept. 2 is the application deadline.

Morrisette Baseball Banquet Friday

The Morrisette Post American Legion baseball team will hold their annual banquet Friday night, Aug. 26, at 7:30 at their home post in West Quincy.

The banquet will celebrate the conclusion of Morrisette's 50th baseball season, a season in which the club finished the No. 3 team in Massachusetts.

Former National Commander John "Jake" Comer will be the guest speaker.

Among the honorees will be players Mark

Cahill, Dan Duncan, Brian Hayes, Dave Reinhart, Neil Connelly and Pat Bryan, each of whom played their final game for Morrisette.

Morrisette finished the season with a loss to state runner-up New Bedford. They compiled a 20-10-1 record during regular season and tournament play. Seven of their losses came to New Bedford, state champion Canton, and Milton, Morrisette's longtime nemesis and the team that tied for the best record in Zone 6 (East) play this season.

Admission to the banquet is $15. For those wishing to attend call Frank Osborne at 773-5436.

Ponkapoag "Blind Partners" Golf Winners

On Tuesday, Aug. 16, a "Blind Partners" tournament was played by the Ladies Division of the Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton.

The winners were: 1st team - Kay Iredale and Nancy Kelley; 2nd team - Martha Padden and Peg Hoy; 3rd team - Mary Michaels and Florence

Koffman; 3rd team - Mary Lou Burke and Marilyn Radovsky; 3rd team -

Charlotte Dickie and Edith Dion.

Softball

Quincy Pummels Pembroke, Faces Brockton

What happens when a softball team belts over 60 hits in one game?

You generally beat your opponent like a stray dog.

That's what happened when Quincy's Liberty Lounge Lord Muffington's team beat Pembroke's J&R Jaguars, 34-1, to close out a doubleheader sweep and extend their winning streak to 12 straight.

Quincy won the first game, 18-6.

The wins placed the Quincy club in the semifinals of the South Shore Sunday Morning Softball League.

Quincy took no time in the laying waste to the Jaguars in the day's second contest. In the first inning they sent 18 men to the plate and scored 14 runs. In the fourth 15 more Quincy batters came to bat and 10 came home. After four innings the score was 28-0.

Spike Fitzsimmons (5 for 5) and Al Freeman (5 for 5) were Quincy's top batsmen. Paul Cedrone, Joe Godfrey and Tom Spillane each went 4 for 5. Winning pitcher Dave Brolin recorded six RBIs on a 3 for 4 effort. Mike Bates also went 3 for 4. With two hits each were Chuck Sullivan, Rich Jackman, John McManus and Bob Cheveroli.

Pembroke scored their only run in the fifth inning. Quincy residents John and Joe Gleba played well for Pembroke in the losing effort.

In the first game, Cedrone led the offensive effort with two hits and four RBIs, including a long two-run dinger. Fitzsimmons went 3 for 3 and Bates had three solid hits. Godfrey had a perfect day, going 1 for 1 with three bases on balls. Johnny-come-lately George Martell went 1 for 1.

Freeman, Spillane, Sullivan and Jackman each cracked two hits.

Sullivan earned the win on the mound for Quincy. With solid outings were Rob Cannella, Cheveroli, Brolin and McManus.

Quincy takes on Brockton Aug. 28 in the semifinals at West Jr. High in Brockton. The Liberty Lounge squad won the season series 3-1 and outscored Brockton, 45-19.

The winner will battle the winner of the Middleboro-Norwell series for the League title.

Hand-Made Crafts A Speciality Customer Satisfaction Number One Priority At Roseann's Floral Shop

By LIAM FITZGERALD

For the last five years, Roseann's Floral and Handcraft Shop, 1089 Hancock St., has provided the Quincy community with great gift ideas, a place to sell their handwork, and most importantly, kind, courteous service that leads to more business from satisfied customers.

"That's our number one priority," Roseann Flavin, the store's owner since its opening in 1989, said. "Serving the customer comes before anything else. We've found that when people come in here for the first time, they keep coming back."

Flavin, who said she got the idea of starting a floral shop after seeing one in North Conway, N.H., believes that her success derives from the fact that there are not many stores in the area quite like hers.

"We're a unique, one-of-a-kind place," Flavin said. "Maybe that's why we've been so successful. There really isn't any store like this in the surrounding area. Everything here is hand made, nothing is done by machine. That's appealing to people of all age groups."

Originally just a floral shop, Flavin expanded the store to include a handicraft area in November, 1992, where local artisans and those from New England and elsewhere can rent space to showcase their talents.

A few of the noteworthy items for sale include handmade dolls, dollhouses, handcarved jewelry, stuffed animals and clocks with designs in the background that include pictures of former President John F. Kennedy, New England Patriots helmets, Boston Red Sox logos and the branches of military service.

The shop also sells gift boxes for every occasion and hand-knit items such as shirts, afghans, and blankets. Fresh flowers are also available nearly every day, Flavin said.

There are walls in the store where an artists' work hangs, along with places in the back where the handicraft is separated by designer and one can pick and choose what catches their eye.

Besides offering an array of floral and handicraft items in the area, Flavin provides a place where local artisans can showcase their work by renting space in her store.

"We try to give the artisans equal time in the front of the store if we can, to showcase their work," Flavin said. "That way, it gives the artist the chance to have their work bought without having to sell it themselves."

"Otherwise they would not have the opportunity to sell their items," Flavin said. "We serve that purpose by renting out space to people as far away as the Adirondacks in New York, a husband and wife team who build wooden birdhouses and feel that they appeal to people around this area."

Flavin said art shows usually charge $50-$60 per table each day of the show, which many artists can't afford. Also, the artists must be present to promote their work to the public.

"At our place, they can rent space for up to a month at that price, and don't have to be around to sell it," Flavin said. "That's the best part for them. Those tables cost too much for most artists to afford. It costs less here in a month then it does for a day at a craft show."

Flavin said the fall is usually a busy time for her and her five part-time employees, two of which work on floral design while the remaining three take care of the retail portion of the business.

"Our best business is usually in the fall, from September to December, because a lot of people buy gifts here for the holidays," Flavin said. "Our down time comes after the holidays, but picks up right around springtime."

This summer has been a little slower than last year, Flavin said, but business usually picks up as the summer winds down.

"The heat may have kept some away, but we're looking forward to a successful fall season," Flavin said.

While many businesses discover they need to remodel their place of business to create more space, Flavin reported she has more than enough room to handle the amount of crafters who rent space in her store.

"The space we've had is sufficient enough to hold the items of 80 crafters and artisans in the area right now," Flavin said. "There's room here to hold about 100 crafters, so I don't see us remodeling in the near future."

Flavin said she never ran a business like this before, but that she has always been interested in arts and crafts, especially flowers.

"I do flowers myself," Flavin said. That's my craft. Before this addition came into the picture, we ran a little consignment, but nothing like we do now."

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Sympathy is two hearts tugging at one load."

- Charles H. Parkhurst

SCOTT DEWARE

A farmer was out plowing his field one spring morning. The spring team had just occurred and there were many muddy valleys in the field. Through one particularly wet place, his tractor became stuck in the mud. The harder he tried, the deeper he became stuck. Finally, he walked over to his neighbor's to ask for help. The neighbor came over and looked at the situation. He shook his head, and then said, "It doesn't look good, but I tell you what, I'll give it a try pulling you out. But if we can't get it out, I'll come off in the mud with you."

Although we may not all be farmers we do experience getting "stuck in the mud" from time to time. And chances are we probably know someone who is stuck right now. Have you tried "mud sitting with a friend"? ... It may be the best thing you can do ...

Revenue, Volume Up At Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds Barry Hannon has released his year-end report for FY94.

The report shows increased volume and increased revenue for the year.

"Volume was up 34 percent over Fiscal Year 1992 and our receipts exceeded our expenditures in an amount in excess of $2 million. This profit is paid back to the county to defray the cost of other county functions like the jail, hospital, and the agricultural school," Hannon said. "In the last five years, we have shown constant increases in the volume of recordings which translate into more revenues received and greater surplus.

"Registry fees have not increased in 13 years, while the Land Court section, which accounts for about 20 percent of the land in the county, did receive an increase in 1992. Our expenditures have remained quite stable over the years setting the stage for us to become a very profitable arm of government."

Barry said the Registry saw even larger increases in volume in the middle and late 1980s due to increased sales.

"The real estate boom of the '80s will likely not be repeated for many years and maybe never," said Hannon. "The recent increase in sales of real estate has helped our volume but it was the large numbers of mortgage refinancing that produced our record volumes and revenues of the past two fiscal years. Lower mortgage rates, which have now stabilized, encouraged thousands of home owners to refinance their homes in 1993 and 1994."

The volume of recordings at the Registry of Deeds has more than tripled over the last decade, Barry said. Yet despite that increase, the numbers of employees at the Registry has remained steady in that time.

"The advent of computerization and the ability of our staff has enabled us to handle this heavy work load with greater efficiency than ever before," said Barry. "The reason for the increased volumes are many: The development of large condominium complexes has had a major impact on our recording system. Where once there was one deed and mortgage on a parcel of land there can be hundreds of deeds and mortgages and other documents as required by the condominium statutes. Land development and new subdivisions, particularly in the western part of Norfolk County, have made large demands on our work.

"The increased mobility of the population, where people change jobs and move more frequently, also tends to increase our work load. Conservation authorities and other municipal agencies are requiring more documents which affect property in their communities to be recorded. The home equity loan has become a frequently used tool of home owners.

"All of these factors and others continue to make an impact at the Registry of Deeds."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is located in Dedham and serves the 27 towns and the City of Quincy which comprise the county.

Items Donated For Auction To Benefit Cerebral Palsy

Items are being donated for the fourth annual auction to benefit Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore Oct. 21 at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quincy.

Auction committee Chairman Don Uvanitte said that auction items are being donated by a large number of businesses, particularly restaurants and hotels from all over New England.

"Anyone interested in contributing an item, a gift certificate or a service to our auction can contact me or call the Cerebral Palsy office in Quincy," Uvanitte said.

Some of the items donated for the auction include: Dinner and Show for 10 at Averof's in Cambridge; a platter from Barry's Deli; an autographed basketball from the Celtics; a hockey puck autographed by Russ Courtnall of the Dallas Stars; a three month membership at Fitcorp in North Quincy; a $40 gift certificate from Hart's Turkey Farm in Merideth, N.H.; two $50 gift certificates from Kennedy Carpet; two $50 gift certificates from the South Shore YMCA; and two $100 gift certificates from Talbots," Uvanitte said.

The auction is co-sponsored by The Quincy Sun, WJDA-AM and Continental Cablevision.

"We are lucky enough to have an outstanding committee whose members are really working hard to make this year's event a great success," said Uvanitte, "and I hope people set aside the evening of Oct. 21 to have a great time and get some great buys at the auction!"

opposition. Cahill also said he feels the Wal-Mart traffic will be appropriately separated from cars going to The Falls. He added that the improvements to the roadways and other changes at the project site will help beautify the area and will ultimately increase property values at The Falls in a way that more condominiums would not.

"The quickest way to decrease property values at the condominiums is to build more condos," said Cahill. "When that (Wal-Mart) project is done, they'll (Falls residents) have a better value for what they own. It will not just be a shopping center, it will be a vibrant retail space with a lot of trees."

"The developer has made a significant mitigation package, and I think we'd be crazy not to take it. I honestly think this will increase the value of the condos, and if I didn't believe that, I don't think I could vote for this project."

Cahill said he believes the project will provide an opportunity for senior citizens at the 1000 Southern Artery senior complex and other area residents to do more shopping.

"It's not just a Falls issue," he said.

He added that having a Wal-Mart store in Quincy Point would also bring more shoppers through Quincy Center and should ultimately benefit the city's downtown business district. Opponents of the project have suggested that the project would have the opposite effect on the downtown.

"We can't stop progress," said Cahill. "People have to adapt. If people run their business right, there's no way Wal-Mart will hurt their business. I don't think building this or not building this will affect the downtown."

"We have to send a message to business that we want people to invest in this city. If the project works, we should welcome it with open arms."

The City Council must vote on the project by Sept. 27.

In order for the project to be approved, six of the nine City Council members must vote in favor. However, there is a possibility that Cahill and DeCristofaro may be asked not to vote by the city's law department.

When the five-member Planning Board gave its approval to the project last week, it did so by a unanimous vote of 4-0. Board member Nicholas Verenis abstained from the vote because he did not attend the board's public hearing on the issue.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said there is "some case law that seems to suggest" that City Council members who miss a public hearing on such a project should do the same. McGrath would not go into further specifics about the case law.

Cahill and DeCristofaro both missed the council's public hearing on Wal-Mart June 8, although Cahill was in attendance at two continuations of the hearing June 20 and 29. DeCristofaro, who has still not fully recovered his strength from a heart attack and stroke he suffered in March, did not attend the hearing at all.

McGrath said he will submit a legal opinion on whether the two councilors should vote on Wal-Mart by late September. While he refused to speculate on what that opinion will be, he did not rule out the possibility that he might suggest that the two abstain from the vote, or that their votes might be legally challenged by proponents or opponents of the project in the future.

McGrath stressed that city councilors may vote regardless of what his legal opinion is. He added that whether all nine or only seven councilors vote on Wal-Mart, the project still requires six votes to be approved.

DeCristofaro said he is uncertain if his health will permit him to be in attendance when the City Council votes on the project. However, he said that if he does attend he will vote regardless of McGrath's recommendation.

"I've read enough about it," he said. "I've stayed on top on things."

Cahill said he also, will vote for the project even if the solicitor advises against it. He said the fact that he attended two of three dates for the public hearing as well as three additional neighborhood meetings should give him the right to state his position.

"I intend to vote," he said. "I feel comfortable that my vote counts. And if someone disagrees with me, let the courts decide."

Atlantic Development Corp. of Hingham has proposed construction of a shopping center to be known as Granite Crossing at the Quincy Point site. Plans call for a 135,000-square-foot Wal-Mart store, a 60,000 to 75,000-square-foot supermarket, and possibly another 15,000-square-foot retail store if the supermarket does not fill the full 75,000 square feet.

Proponents of the project say the project will create 200 construction jobs, 500 permanent jobs, traffic improvements to Falls Boulevard and a minimum $600,000 in tax revenue for the city. In addition, the developer has offered a $600,000 mitigation package to the condominium owners.

Opponents of the project have said it will bring down property values at The Falls and have a harmful effect on Quincy's downtown shopping district by pulling shoppers away from Quincy Center.

Results of a study by Byrne-McKinney Associates of Boston revealed earlier this week show that values could fall on 12 of the 120 units at The Falls that would have a view of the shopping center but that the others would show no decrease. City Council President Michael Cheney said a special permit he plans to draft will require Atlantic Development Corp. to make up any financial loss to the owners of the 12 affected condominiums.

However, Sylvia Migon--a Falls resident and one of the leaders of "We're Against the Wal," the project's primary opponent--said compensating her for the $7,175 loss on her condominium will not be enough. She said the issue is not about money but about quality of life.

"There is no compensation for noise, and there is no compensation for safety factors," she said. "There's my child, whose tricycle should not have to compete with 18-wheelers. These are things that cannot be mitigated."

Independent Study Finds:

Granite Crossing: No Significant Negative Impact On Falls Condos

An independent economic impact study commissioned by the Quincy Planning Board shows that the Granite Crossing Shopping Center will have no significant negative impact on The Falls Condominiums.

The report found no negative impact on Falls condominium property values associated with general proximity or immediate adjacency to the Granite Crossing Shopping Center. It also found no negative impact on property values due to a shared access roadway.

Of the 120 units at the Falls, only 12 condominium units will have a view of the retail center. The analysis, performed by Byrne McKinney & Associates, Inc. of Boston, identified that only those 12 units will have a slight impact.

Eight two-story units on the third and fourth floors in buildings E and H will be affected. The second floor of four additional units will have limited retail views. The eight units on the third and fourth floor will drop seven percent in value, and the four additional units will drop less, since only the second-story will have some view. The total loss in value for all 12 units is $70,747.

The report did not consider the effect of a $600,000 mitigation package that has been negotiated between Atlantic Development and the Falls Condominium Association. Atlantic Development is considering to compensate the 12 condominium owners by offering to move them to identical units in one of the planned buildings nearby which will not have a view of the community retail center.

The Byrne McKinney & Associates study considered four potential areas of impact on condominium values: general proximity, immediate adjacency, shared access roadway and view impact.

The study found that general proximity to community retail centers does not have a negative impact on residential condominium values if the retail project is properly developed. In the case of the Falls Condominiums, Byrne McKinney & Associates found that general proximity to Granite Crossing Shopping Center would have no impact on condominium values because of mitigation measures taken by Atlantic Development.

The study indicated that there would be no impact on condominium values due to a shared access roadway serving Granite Crossing and the Falls because of more than $1 million in roadway improvements to Falls Boulevard, Quincy Ave., and the Southern Artery corridors. The report also found that direct abutting units would suffer no impact on their value because of landscape and roadway improvements that will be made by Atlantic Development.

Donald J. MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development, said:

"We are pleased that the study performed by Byrne McKinney & Associates confirms what we have been saying all along, that Granite Crossing will not have a negative economic impact on the nearby community."

Although Atlantic Development has no legal obligation to compensate property owners for view impacts, since the study found that a small number of condominium owners would experience a seven percent drop in property value, we are prepared to enhance our mitigation package by offering to move those individual unit owners to a new condominium without a direct view of the retail center.

"It is important to note that their study did not even consider the beneficial impact of the $600,000 mitigation package we have negotiated with the Falls Condominium Association. Indeed, we believe this package will more than offset the $70,747 view impact and will greatly enhance residential property values in the Falls."

Quincy Woman Leaving Funeral Killed In Crash

Obituary, Page 23

A 20-year-old North Quincy woman was killed in an automobile accident in Malden last Friday while driving home from her great-aunt's funeral.

Karin Murphy, a 1992 graduate of North Quincy High School and a resident of 109 Faxon Rd., was driving her family's 1994 Ford Taurus when the car was broadsided by a van not more than 20 feet from the gravesite. She died later in the day at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Police said Murphy was driving the car because she had felt her mother was too upset to do so after the funeral. She was thrown from the car and apparently was not wearing a seat belt.

Her mother, Catherine Murphy, 50, blacked out during the accident and sustained a broken thumb. She was sitting next to her daughter in the front seat. Karin's 11-year-old sister Maureen suffered cuts from flying glass but escaped more serious injury because she was wearing a seat belt.

Police said the van struck Murphy's car as she was exiting Holy Cross Cemetery onto Lynn Street. Nicholas Morelli, 62, of Everett, the driver of the Dodge Ram Wagon, was not injured and has not been charged, authorities said.

Police believe Morelli was driving within the 40 m.p.h. speed limit and had the right-of-way. Murphy's mother said Karin was going through and intersection and had stopped briefly even though there was no stop sign.

Authorities said the van was driving down a public street which bisects the old and new cemeteries.

One week before she died, Murphy was accepted at the University of Massachusetts at Boston. She planned to become a psychiatrist or social worker.

Murphy spent a year at Burdett School in Boston and got a certificate in accounting with a 3.4 grade-point average. She had also worked as a mail handler at the U.S. Post Office in East Boston.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy. Burial will be in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Cerebral palsy of the South Shore has a variety of volunteer opportunities available to area residents.

The organization has a crucial need for people who would like to type or use a word processor at the Cerebral Palsy office, 105 Adams St.

"We are involved in a large number of significant projects including a Community Needs Assessment, our Annual Auction, and our Adult Recreation Program, and need administrative help to run those programs" said Matt LaBarre, Director of Development.

The organization, which provides therapeutic, psychological, educational, social and recreational programs and services to disabled children and adults in Metropolitan Boston, the South Shore, Southeastern Ma., the Cape and the islands also needs volunteers to help run the Adult Recreation program.

"Our program runs every Wednesday evening during the school year at the Lincoln Hancock School here in Quincy," LaBarre said. "But volunteers don't have to commit to help every week, perhaps just once or twice per month."

Anyone interested in volunteering should contact LaBarre at 479-7443.

Officials Hail $2M Newport Ave. Grant

City and state officials have hailed Gov. William Weld's announcement of a $2 million grant to reconstruct parts of Newport Avenue.

Weld made the announcement last Friday during a ceremony at the State Street Bank property in North Quincy, accompanied by state Transportation Undersecretary Patrick Moynihan. It was the governor's sixth visit to the city this year.

"This roadway is used a lot, and parts of it are like a roller coaster," said Weld. "The $2 million grant will help improve the road, the block and traffic signals, which is going to bring even more office jobs into the neighborhood."

Moynihan agreed, adding that he was particularly pleased at being able to help the City of Presidents.

"Quincy is one of the communities that is renowned in the transportation area," he said.

Mayor James Sheets said he was very excited about the grant.

"Newport Avenue was not built to carry the volume of traffic it has," said the mayor. "This grant is a tremendous step forward. It will help beautify the entrance to the city and help the companies here that have been the backbone of job growth."

"I know of no governor who has been more helpful to the economic development of Quincy than Bill Weld."

Other local officials in attendance agreed.

"A lot happens on Newport Avenue, and I think it's a great project to move forward," said Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"It's probably the most important transportation need we have in the city," said Rep. Michael Bellotti. "I'm very happy."

"I just think this is a great example of what can be accomplished when state and local government work together in the private sector," said Ward 3 City Councillor Lawrence Chretien, whose ward will be the site of the reconstruction.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, whose ward includes part of North Quincy, opted not to speak publicly since the work will be done in Chretien's ward. However, after the ceremony he said that he,

Possible Annual Profit Of $185,000 For City

Kinney To Return As Manager Of Parking System

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Barring unforeseen complications, Kinney Systems Inc. of Boston will become the new manager of Quincy's parking system, a deal that could mean an estimated $185,000 annual profit for the city.

City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon said that the city's parking operations recommendation committee voted Tuesday to negotiate with Kinney, one of three firms vying for the parking contract. The committee includes Gillon, Planning Commissioner Richard Meade, Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton and Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets.

Kinney held the five-year contract before Metropolitan Parking Systems

Inc. of Quincy, one of the two other companies that bid on the contract. The other was Fitz-Inn Auto Parks Inc. of Boston.

Metropolitan's contract with the city, which began in 1989, expired last July 1 but was extended until a decision was made about the new manager of the parking system, which includes two Quincy Center parking areas: the Hancock Parking Lot and the Ross Parking Garage.

Gillon said although Sheets had to approve the committee's decision to hire Kinney Systems, he did not foresee any problems. At press time, the mayor confirmed that notion.

"It's the best financial package for the city, so we'll try and make it go," said Sheets.

According to Gillon, two others have been briefed on the decision: Purchasing Agent/Parking Clerk Michael McFarland and Quincy Center Business and Professional Association President Caryn Smith. Both agreed with 11 Positions Available

87 Apply For Quincy College Board Of Trustees

Eighty-seven candidates have applied for 11 positions on the new Quincy College Board of Trustees.

A five-man appointing council was scheduled to select the 11 board members Tuesday evening just hours after The Sun went to press. The board must be in place by today (Thursday).

Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a 13-member board of trustees as the new governing authority of the college was approved by the City Council, state Legislature and Gov. William Weld earlier this year.

Traditionally, the college has been governed by the School Committee, but a governance change became necessary after the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) voted that the college must bring its governance system up-to-date with other colleges of comparable size or risk losing its accreditation.

The NEASC felt the college had outgrown its right to be governed by the city's School Committee.

The five-man appointing council included School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, City Council President Michael Cheney, School Committee member Ronald Mariano, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and college trustee Richard Hart Jr.

The appointing council was to select 11 of the 13 board members. The others must be a School Committee member and a city councillor. In addition, at least one of the 13 board members must be a Quincy College graduate.

Fabrizio was chosen to represent the City Council. At press time, it was unknown who the School Committee member would be.

Raymond and Hart are both seeking seats on the new board. However, they said Monday night they would not nominate themselves, and added that they would not vote on themselves if nominated by other members of the appointing council.

Fifty of the 87 applicants gave two-minute presentations before the appointing council Monday night. The presentations were optional, however, and all 87 applicants were still being

DeCristofaro Still Pushing For Bridge Deprivatization

Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro is continuing to push for the deprivatization of the operation of the Fore River bridge.

DeCristofaro, in a recent letter to state Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes, said he is still concerned about the safety of the bridge, particularly after a July 3 accident on the bridge in which two of 12 passengers on an MBTA bus were injured.

In a letter dated Aug. 8, Kerasiotes had told DeCristofaro that public safety is the state's number one concern. The secretary's letter was written in response to concerns DeCristofaro had expressed in a letter to Gov. William Weld dated July 11.

While DeCristofaro had charged that the deprivatization of the bridge was an example of the Weld Administration sacrificing savings in exchange for the safety of Massachusetts citizens, Kerasiotes insisted this was not the case.

"Since the privatization of highway maintenance began two years ago, the Massachusetts Highway Department (MassHighway) has taken several steps to improve the safety of drawbridge operations," Kerasiotes wrote. "For example, the privatization contracts contain strict training standards and a certification process for all private operators. No private operator is allowed to operate a drawbridge without MassHighway first certifying that the operator has satisfactorily completed the training program.

"Prior to privatization, there were no training standards for drawbridge operators. In addition, the private contractor was given incentives to hire MassHighway drawbridge operators who were displaced as a result of privatization."

Although Kerasiotes admitted in the letter that "sick leave and overtime abuses on Massachusetts drawbridges has been eliminated as a result of privatization," he added that "the safety and convenience of the public is this Administration's primary concern."

DeCristofaro, however, responded in his letter dated Aug. 18 that he is still concerned that privatization was a key factor in the July 3 accident, adding that many experienced bridge operators were lost under the new system.

"I believe a mistake was made on July 3 which caused the gate to open prematurely and slam into the side of an MBTA bus," DeCristofaro wrote. "I believe this mistake would not have been made with experienced people on duty. If the gate had ever hit a vehicle smaller than a bus, there would have been certain fatalities."

"The motoring public is certainly entitled to the safest possible conditions and the highest standards of operation on all bridges and highways. Let's not wait until there is another serious accident. It is my wish that those with prior experience and knowledge of this heavily-traveled bridge be brought back to operate it. I still do not think this was a suitable area for privatization."

On July 3, an MBTA bus allegedly stopped on the wrong spot on the Weymouth side of the bridge, and the bridge operator evidently waved it forward as the arm of the bridge barrier swung against the road.

The bus struck the barrier, injuring two passengers. The two received medical attention for their injuries, and one sustained a broken leg.

An investigation by the Weymouth Police Department found that the accident may have been caused by human error on the part of the bridge operator.

YOUR NAME WILL GO DOWN IN HISTORY

The City of Quincy is expanding the brick plaza and "Walk of Names" at Constitution Common...located at the entrance to City Hall. For a limited time, you can guarantee that your name...or the name of someone you love...will go down in history. And you'll help improve everyone's Downtown.

Over 3,000 individuals, businesses and organizations have already donated to the "Walk of Names"...and their engraved bricks have become part of Quincy's history.

Phase 2 of the project is now underway. For each $50 donation, a brick will be engraved and included in the design of the walkways. Each personalized brick comes with a special certificate for you to frame or present as a gift.

To place your brick order, call 376-3676
or pick up an order form at City Hall.

Quantity is limited. Bricks dedicated on a first come, first served basis. Each $50 donation includes one brick engraved with 2 lines, each 15 characters long. A third line may be added for an additional $20. Ask about purchasing groupings of bricks.

Ross Parkway Project To Be Completed By Spring

Planned improvements to the Ross Parkway could be done by late fall or early next spring, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

The project will be funded by $50,000 earmarked for the work in Sheets' nearly $11 million bond package passed recently by the City Council. Sheets said plans call for improvements to sidewalks, lighting and the Ross Parking Garage as well as the possible addition of benches and plantings to the area.

The mayor said he hopes the project will help "get some retail growth" into the area.

A committee of local officials has been formed to oversee the project. It includes Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Executive Secretary Thomas Koch, Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association President Caryn Smith, and Department of Public Works Programs Manager Michael Wheelwright and/or Operations Manager Lester Gerry.

Mader said not every committee member attends every committee meeting. Attendance is determined by what facet of the project is discussed, she said.

Mader also said he is not sure whether an R.F.P. (request for proposals) for the project will have to be sent out for bids, noting that the city may be able to do some of the work itself.

"If we can do it in-house, we will," she said.

Sheets said Quincy is limited to the $50,000 as far as the project is concerned and will use no other city funds.

'Walk Of Names' Dedication Sept. 11

Mayor James Sheets announced that the official dedication of the "Walk of Names" project in front of City Hall Annex will take place Sunday, Sept. 11 from 1 to 3 p.m.

Sheets said he is grateful for the support of the many citizens and businesses who contributed to the success of the project. "The Walk of Names" was funded mainly through the sale of personalized dark red brick pavers.

"Your participation through the sponsorship of a brick paver has made this project a reality," Sheets wrote in a letter to project sponsors.

Sheets said the project has received a number of compliments.

"People are very impressed with its simplistic beauty and historic character," he said. "We believe it fits well with an historic location that experienced the life of men like John Adams and John Hancock, and women like Abigail Adams and Louise Catharine Adams."

Phase I of the project was recently completed and bricks for the second phase are now on sale. For more information, call the mayor's office at 376-1990.

2 Planning Board Public Hearings Sept. 14

The Quincy Planning Board will hold two public hearings Wednesday, Sept. 14 in the second floor Conference Room at Quincy City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The first hearing, to be held at 7 p.m., will concern a definitive subdivision entitled "Eagle Summit" filed by Shea Realty Ltd. The land being subdivided is located off Turning Mill Lane, Malvesti Way, Eagle Terrace and Wren Terrace.

The second hearing, to be held at 7:30 p.m., will concern a proposed change in zoning from Residence A to Open at property located at 16 Landers Rd. as well as 901-911 Quincy Shore Drive/160-166 Rice Rd.

Information on both subjects may be examined at the office of the Department of Planning and Community Development at City Hall Annex Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

MBTA Discount Cards For Elderly, Disabled

The MBTA will offer reduced-fare identification cards for the elderly and disabled Friday, Sept. 9 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Senior Drop-In Center, 24 High School Ave.

With a Senior Citizen ID Card or Transportation Access Pass, passengers may at all times ride T subways for 20 cents, local T buses for 15 cents and express or zoned buses, commuter rail and commuter boat for half fare.

To obtain an MBTA Senior Citizen ID card, individuals must bring proof that they are at least 65 years old. A 50 cent cash fee is required. Senior citizens who already have the card do not have to apply again because the card does not expire.

Persons with disabilities desiring a reduced-fare Transportation Access Pass must be approved previously by the MBTA and must bring their notification of approval with them. A $3 fee is required.

To be approved, an application must be completed and signed by a licensed health care professional such as a physician, psychologist or social worker (Level III). Completed application forms must be returned to Senior and Access Pass Office for review, after which applicants will be sent notification of approval or denial. Applicants are asked to allow 14 days for review.

For more information about the reduced MBTA fares, call 722-5438 (TDD for the hearing impaired 722-5854) or by writing to MBTA Senior and Access Pass Office, Downtown Crossing Concourse, 7 Chauncy St., Boston, MA 02111.

VITAMIN E AND HEART DISEASE

With the conflicting reports on this or that food and its possible effect on cancer, it's tempting to stop paying attention to the news entirely. Still, reports about the possible role of vitamin E in beating heart disease is promising. Researchers have found that vitamin E may act as an antioxidant, blocking the chemical reaction that may be responsible for converting cholesterol into a form that clogs the arteries. However, individuals should not start taking vitamin E supplements without consulting their doctors. Although a link has been discovered, the cause and effect of vitamin E on reduction of heart disease has not been proven, and the long-term effects of vitamin E supplementation are still unknown. Stay tuned!

P.S. Three things that have been proven to fight heart disease are regular exercise, healthful eating, and not smoking.

In Japan, where vitamin E-rich seafood is an important component of the national diet, heart disease rates are extremely low. If you'd like more information on this topic, or on how to help prevent heart disease, feel free to call either myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at COMPLAHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE (472-2550). We place strong emphasis on caring for the patient than simply treating the disease. Office hours are by appointment. We have ample parking at our office, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Weld And Sheets

Sometimes it seems like Gov. William Weld is spending as much time in Quincy as he is in the State House.

And it is beginning to give rise to political speculation about the strong friendship that has developed between him and Mayor James Sheets.

WELD

SHEETS

Weld was in town again last Friday bringing with him a $2 million grant to rebuild bumpy Newport Avenue Extension between Hancock and West Squantum Sts.

On hand again to greet him and accept the ceremonial $2 million check was a smiling Sheets.

It was Weld's sixth visit to Quincy this year and each time he has brought a gift or promise to help a planned Quincy project.

Just the week before, he and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci were all over the city.

Weld toured the idle Fore River Shipyard and urged the MWRA to lease the yard for cruise ship construction. He was then at the Procter and Gamble plant encouraging prospective owner James Ricci who proposes to produce soybean-based bio-diesel fuel there when P & G shuts down next month.

Cellucci stopped off at Quincy District Court to announce over $1 million in new funding to fight domestic violence.

Weld later signed the papers to allow expansion of the parking area at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Then he and Cellucci wound up the busy day with a nine-secretary cabinet meeting at City Hall where Sheets was openly praised.

"Things are really popping in Quincy," Weld said. "The future looks bright here. There's a lot of economic development going on here that should result in a bright future in Quincy."

"With the firm yet gentle hand of Mayor Sheets, things appear to be heading in the right direction for this city."

In earlier trips here, Weld threw his support to locating a Quincy Center commuter rail station and construction of the proposed Quincy Center Concourse.

He and Sheets have become close friends although in a way, they are a political odd couple—Weld a Republican, and Sheets a Democrat.

Some political observers think Weld is wooing Quincy support for this fall's gubernatorial election.

Weld carried the state against John Silber four years ago, but lost Quincy. Silber got 51 percent (18,626) to Weld's 45 percent (16,602) of the city's vote.

It's no secret that this time he wants to win Quincy and show everyone—including the powers on the national level, that he can win in a Democratic stronghold.

Meanwhile there's speculation that if Weld is re-elected this year he might offer a top level appointment to Sheets for whom he obviously has great respect.

And, of course, if he did and Sheets accepted, it would throw next year's Quincy mayoral election scene into a political free-for-all.

Never a dull moment in politics.

□

EARLY START: Christine Cedrone already has bumper stickers in circulation as a candidate for School Committee in next year's city election.

CEDRONE

Cedrone and Sean Barry hooked up in a historical battle for a School Committee seat in 1993 when they tied in a recount with 5,734 votes each.

Barry got the final nod in a 9-to-4 vote at a joint convention of the City Council and School Committee.

Cedrone, a Republican, was recently named to the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners by Gov. William Weld, succeeding Rosemary Wahlberg, a Democrat.

IN A RECENT column we noted that there were 45 City Council presidents before Michael Cheney and only 12 of them went on to become mayor.

But, says old friend John Quinlan, we overlooked one: Leo E. Mullin who was Ward 2 councillor from 1933 to 1935.

Mullin became city council president in 1935. When Mayor Charles Ross left office before the end of his term, Mullin served as acting mayor for 16 weeks. A special mayoral election was called that year and Mullin was one of five candidates for the vacant office.

He and Thomas Burgin were nominated in the preliminary election in May, 1935. Burgin won the final election in June by 4900 votes.

Mullin, who went on to become city auditor, died in 1972 at age 79.

His 16 weeks as acting mayor has to be one of the longest in the city's history but not good enough to win the mayor's office on his own.

Red Line Service From NQ To JFK/UMass Stations Suspended Over Weekend

MBTA Red Line service from North Quincy to JFK/UMass stations will be suspended over the long holiday weekend to allow track work on the Red Line's Anderson Bridge over the Neponset River.

According to MBTA General Manager John J. Haley Jr., all work on the bridge is scheduled around the clock Labor Day weekend, beginning Friday, Sept. 2 at 8:30 p.m. and ending late Monday evening, Sept. 5.

"The nature of the work is the repositioning and underpinning of a trestle and the slight elevation of the approaching track on both sides of the river. Similar work was undertaken Memorial Day weekend," Haley said.

While service is suspended, shuttle buses will be provided from North Quincy to JFK/UMass stations. For schedule information, call 722-3200.

Normal train service on the Braintree branch of the Red Line will resume at 5:16 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 6, Haley said.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A very old postcard view of the intersection of Billings Road and Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs. The streets are unpaved and three of the corners had no buildings at the time of this photo. The building on the left is home today of Atlas Hardware and across the street the smaller building is the site of the Hancock Flower Shop. The name of Norfolk Downs was adopted in 1892 after a contest was held by the land company which was developing the old farms of the Massachusetts Fields area into house lots. There is no record of any historical or significant meaning to the name other than "going up to the Downs" is a memory treasured by those who went there. Except for the address this postcard was written in a language foreign to English.

Suggests New Plaque For Della Chiesa Center

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I noted in The Quincy Sun June 30 that the name of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center will be on the school building, replacing the sign, "Lincoln School 1892-1992."

If the letters on the new sign are the same size as the present Lincoln School, they will be legible from the street. The new sign should also state, in smaller letters, the function of the school: Early Childhood Center.

The present wood sign outside the school building is very attractive for a Childhood Center, but leaving out the word "school" will make strangers assume the building is a daycare center with a large fenced playground.

Inside the school at the entrance, in my opinion, there should be a historical plaque on Amelio Della Chiesa, the old Lincoln School and the history of the location of the building, which was part of the farm of two U.S. Presidents: John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

Historical items are easy to forget, but a plaque on the wall would be a good reminder.

Keep Tobacco Control Program Fully Funded

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Question One is in the news—once again.

When voters rallied to support the Question One referendum two years ago, their intention was this: an increase in the state excise tax on cigarettes would be used to address the problems and devastating effects of smoking in this state.

Despite the clear intent of the referendum, this year the state Senate voted to cut the tobacco control program's budget for 1995 and divert $19 million for purposes other than tobacco control.

Although the Governor and the state House of Representatives favored fully funding the program for 1995, the Senate voted to reduce funds substantially.

Soon the legislature will vote on a supplemental budget. That budget contains an amendment to restore the $19 million which the Senate voted to divert. Passing that amendment is crucial to the health of our citizens.

The Lung Association—whose goal is to reduce cigarette smoking urges people in every community to contact their legislators—both in the state Senate and House—to let them know the people of Massachusetts want to keep the tobacco control programs fully funded.

Unless we all let our legislators know the depth of our feelings, tobacco related illnesses and lung disease will continue to be a leading cause of death and disease in this state and in the country.

Quincy Taxpayers Will Be The Winners

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I have been following the news about the Wal-Mart development all summer. As time has gone on it has become clear to me that Quincy taxpayers will be the big winners if this project is allowed to go through.

The benefits are many. The most obvious and talked about are the construction jobs and the 500 permanent jobs. These are jobs for Quincy residents for years to come. They will be jobs for teenagers, part-time jobs for mothers and seniors who do not want to or can't work full-time. Also, there will be several manager jobs for those who want them.

I hope the City Council does not let this project go to Braintree. Now is the time to take action and get this construction started.

Della Chiesa Orders Sale Of Westacres

By PAUL D. HAROLD

In a letter to the Quincy Housing Authority, Mayor Della Chiesa ordered the sale of Westacres, the veteran's housing on West St.

The mayor noted that under the law, once the construction mortgage was paid off, the units had to be sold at fair market value. The housing was built in 1947 at a cost of $400,000.

Q.H.A. executive director Girard White reserved comment on the mayor's letter until the meeting of the housing board later in the week. He said, however, if the units are sold, preference would be given to veterans.

OPPOSITION TO MENTAL HEALTH CLINIC

Some 487 residents of Fumace Brook Parkway and Hospital Hill signed petitions opposing plans to construct a mental health clinic in their neighborhoods. The original site on Fumace Brook Parkway generated so much opposition that a Hospital Hill location was proposed. That site met equal opposition.

At a meeting of the city council this week, all councillors in attendance voiced their opposition to a clinic at either location. Speaking in support of the plan were Dr. Charles Djerf, Rep. Joseph Brett, School Committeeman Frank Anselmo and Dr. Nelson Saphir of Squantum.

Q.H.S. FOOTBALL LINEUP

Quincy High School football coach Hank Conroy outlined potential starters for the new season. He estimated that 90-100 players would try out for the team when school opens this week.

Ralph Cedrone and Paul Grasso were given the best chance of replacing Larry Kelcourse and Steve Craig who graduated last year. Brad Melville would take tackle Dan Raymond's spot, who's now at Holy Cross. At 265 pounds, Peter Kolson was slotted as the other tackle.

The back line would include veteran players Jim Rendle and Mike Jordan, with star juniors identified as Jim Pettit, Greg Craig and Paul Jenkins.

CURRY AWARDED PURPLE HEART

Marine Corporal Robert Curry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Curry of Quincy St. was awarded the Purple Heart while serving in Vietnam.

The medal was given for wounds received in combat at La Chau Village complex, nine miles southwest of the Da Nang Airfield.

Sheets, 18 Other Mayors Form Southeastern Mass. And Atlantic Canada Assn.

Mayor James Sheets and 18 other mayors from southeastern Massachusetts and Canada recently signed a resolution creating the Southeastern Massachusetts and Atlantic Canada Association.

The event took place during Sheets' recent trip to a mayors' conference in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The resolution was signed by Sheets, Mayor Rosemary Tierney of New Bedford, Mayor Robert Nunes of Taunton and 16

Canadian mayors. Mayor John Mitchell of New Bedford was also supposed to sign the petition but left the conference early after being called away on an emergency.

Sheets said the purpose of the association will be to promote trade and tourism in both the southeastern Massachusetts and Atlantic Canada regions.

While the mayors originally had discussed including all of Massachusetts in the association, it was decided that the conference will initially include only cities and towns in the southeastern region of the state.

Sheets said Mayor Winifred Farwell of Brockton was unable to attend the Canadian conference but is expected to be a part of the new group. He added that the association plans to meet annually in the spring will do so next year somewhere in Massachusetts.

New Hat And Coat Ban To Take Effect At QHS

A new policy regarding the wearing of outerwear and hats will go into effect as students return to Quincy High School next week, said Quincy High School spokesman Lou Venturelli.

The rule, initiated by the Faculty Senate, requires that students lock up their hats and coats prior to the starting their school day at 8 a.m.

Previously, school rules forbid wearing hats and coats only in classrooms. This allowed students to wear coats and hats to and from class, in the cafeteria, and elsewhere, according to Venturelli.

Officials said this created problems when the rule was not uniformly enforced by teachers.

According to Venturelli, the new rule met many obstacles prior to being passed by the school council in the spring last academic year.

Pre-Natal Exercise Program

The South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy, will start a pre-natal exercise program Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Classes are set for Tuesday and Thursdays, from 7 to 8 p.m. Registration is underway.

This is a medically approved exercise program for pregnant women from the first through third trimester.

"Students' ideas were petitioned through the student council and 'locker insecurity' and heating issues were seen as major obstacles by the Senate," Venturelli said.

"The locker situation was remedied by the school committee's funding of internal combination locks.

"With the Parent's Advisory Council's approval, the rule passed on the second attempt through the school council," said Venturelli.

The first try was put on hold until the effectiveness of the lockers could be determined. The heating problems of the school remain a concern and could jeopardize the effectiveness of the new policy, according to Venturelli.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
 Crime Prevention Officer
 Quincy Police Department

Alcohol Is Number One*

*Alcohol is the number one drug of choice for teens.

*Alcohol-related car crashes are the number one killer of teens in the United States.

*Alcohol is the number one drug problem in America.

If you think it can't happen to you, look around. Check your school's yearbooks for the last 10 years. How many have been dedicated to a student who was killed in a drunk driving crash?

Ask your friends how many people they know that have had bad things happen to them when they were drinking. You don't even have to be the one doing the drinking—most teenage passenger deaths are the result of alcohol-impaired teenage drivers.

How Does Alcohol Affect You?

*You see double, speech slurs, you lose your sense of direction.

*Alcohol loosens inhibitions; you make bad judgments that can result in car accidents, unwanted pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, or rape.

*A significant proportion of violent crimes and vandalism among and by youth, involve alcohol.

*Using alcohol can cost you your freedom. You can be grounded by parents, lose your driver's license, or even end up in jail.

Be Aware of Advertising

Take a good look at how the alcohol industry is trying to convince people to use their products.

*Wine coolers are displayed in stores next to fruit drinks. Maybe they don't think you'll notice the difference between a fruit drink and one with alcohol.

*Different brands of beer and other alcohol beverages are slipped into the movies you watch. They think if you see your favorite actor drinking it, you will too.

*The models on the beer commercials are always young, thin, and beautiful. But alcohol has plenty of empty calories and little nutritional value. Drinking it will not make you younger or more beautiful.

*Advertisements feature celebrities and sports figures. But drinking will not make you famous or athletic.

*Alcohol advertisers are now trying to be more responsible by telling you not to drink and drive. But drunk driving is not the only way alcohol can affect your life. Advertisers hope you won't stop and think when you see their ads. Don't be conned. Use your best judgment and learn the facts.

NEXT WEEK: More Facts About Alcohol.

“I think that Wal-Mart
most definitely is an asset to the community.”

Paula Barron,
Mortgage Loan Originator
Quincy, Mass

Let's face it. Times are tough everywhere. Factories and plants have closed. People are out of work. Businesses struggle to survive. But now, we have a chance to help turn things around with the proposed new Wal-Mart at Granite Crossing.

The shopping center at Granite Crossing will mean a lot to Quincy. And the first thing it will mean is jobs. Two hundred construction jobs. Five hundred new permanent jobs, about two hundred of them at Wal-Mart. And 70% of those will be quality, full-time jobs with benefits and profit-sharing eligibility that provide an excellent opportunity for career advancement.

Wal-Mart will keep Quincy shoppers right here in Quincy to take advantage of their low prices, great selection and exceptional service. Not only that, a fully developed Granite Crossing would generate over a half-million dollars in new real estate taxes.

Put it all together and you have an opportunity that Quincy simply cannot afford to pass up. Support the development at Granite Crossing. And Wal-Mart. Always a good neighbor.

QUINCY CENTER

United States Naval & Shipbuilding Museum Executive Director William MacMullen has spent this week assisting the Department of Navy in the establishment of a museum at the Naval Air Warfare Center, Weapon Division, in California.

MacMullen arrived at the center on Monday. He was expected to return to Quincy today (Thursday) or Friday.

As executive director of the USNSM, MacMullen has lead the effort to establish the museum which will open next spring in the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. The museum recently secured funding from the Bank of Boston to bring the heavy cruiser U.S.S. Salem from the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard to Quincy next month.

"We are happy for Bill and proud that our efforts have been recognized by the Navy," said Museum operations coordinator Don Timmins.

Mayor James Sheets, chairman of the USNSM Board of Directors, said, "William MacMullen is now considered one of the foremost authorities on private/non-profit military museums."

The Department of the Navy is looking for ways to improve its museum system, especially with regard to financial alternatives and funding. The USNSM is the first of its kind in the country to be established without federal, state or municipal funding.

We'd Like To Thank The 2,613 People Who Have Made This Operation A Success.

At South Shore Hospital, our mission is to deliver more than quality health care. We like to call what we do health caring. And this not-so-subtle difference is the direct result of 2,613 dedicated people who work around the clock to assure we're here when you and your family need us most.

It takes lots of different people to make our operation a success. Physicians, nurses, technicians, and therapists. Clinicians, pharmacists, technologists, aides, patient registration personnel and social workers. Homemakers, transcriptionists, educators, nutritionists and clerical staff.

Engineers, attendants, secretaries, and security personnel. Environmental service, finance, human resources.

information systems and maintenance staff. Fund raisers, site and materials personnel all helped by hundreds of volunteers. And the list goes on.

So whether it's acute or outpatient care in the hospital, or health care provided by our visiting nurses in the comfort of your home, the caring people who are South Shore Hospital are here for you, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Even on Labor Day.

Happy Labor Day To All Who Work For Your Good Health.

Rev. John Banks Named Bethany Pastor Emeritus

Rev. John D. Banks was named Pastor Emeritus at the conclusion of last Sunday's worship service at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center.

Rev. Banks, who served as senior minister at Bethany from 1954 to 1980, had been invited earlier in the year to preach the sermon at the service.

The presentation of the framed citation was made by Diaconate Chairman William MacDonald, joining Rev. Banks in accepting the honor was his wife, Billie, a former North Quincy High School English teacher who retired in 1980.

Constance Hodgkins, wife of present interim minister Rev. George Hodgkins, presented Mrs. Banks with a floral arrangement of roses. Also participating in the service as liturgist was Rev. Arthur

REV. JOHN BANKS

Curtis, who served as an associate minister during part of Rev. Banks' tenure.

During the service, a hymn with lyrics written by Rev. Banks and music by the late Agnes Allen, organist emeritus who served Bethany as organist and choir director for 53 years, was sung. The hymn won a second prize in a 1956 hymn-writing contest.

Rev. and Mrs. Banks now live in Chapel Hill, N.C.

RELIGION

Anointing Of The Sick At Most Blessed Sacrament

A celebration of the Sacrament of the Anointing of the Sick and Elderly will be held Sunday, Sept. 18 at 2 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Hall, Darrow St., Houghts Neck.

The event is being held by Most Blessed Sacrament Church. The afternoon will consist of the celebration of Mass with music and an Anointing Service followed by a hot buffet.

The sacrament is intended to bring salvation, comfort and consolation to those with physical ailments or afflictions as well as those over age 60 and their families.

The hall is handicapped accessible. Transportation will be provided if necessary. Professional caregivers at the Mass will assist those who need help.

All are welcome. For more information, call Eileen Menz at 472-3735.

Bethany Congregational

Rev. George Hodgkins, interim minister, will preach on "Come And See" at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center.

The Sacrament of Holy Communion will be served.

Scripture reader will be Vivian Miller. Music will be by Ione Lockwood, mezzo soprano with Gregory Flynn, organist. Greeters will be David and Helen MacIntosh. Diaconate members William MacDonald, Sylvia Hoesepian, Jean Ross and Wendell Cosgrove will assist in the service of Holy Communion.

A fellowship hour hosted by Marion MacPherson and Gwen Freiberg in the Allen Parlor will follow the service. Child care will be provided.

The church's Outreach Committee will sponsor a 12-hour vigil of prayer in the church chapel at 18 Spear St. Wednesday, Sept. 7 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

New Hours To Take Effect St. Joseph's Parish School Reopens Sept. 7

St. Joseph's Parish School in Quincy Point will open its doors for its 67th year Wednesday, Sept. 7 with new school hours.

The school, which holds classes for students in Grades Pre-K through 8, will be open Monday through Friday from 8:05 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. The reason for the change, according to Principal Lisa Mirasolo, is because all students will attend school for a full day on Tuesdays.

Besides the core academic curricula, St. Joseph's also employs specialists in the areas of art, music, physical education, and computer science. Extracurricular activities include choir, girls' and boys' basketball, cheerleading and student government.

The school has also taken on a partnership with Blue Cross/Blue Shield which sponsors Junior Achievement for Grades K-8. The volunteers from Blue Cross/Blue Shield have taken on projects with the students from building a city to playing the stock market.

CASPAR, a drug and alcohol education curriculum, is also presented to students in Grades K-8. Other safety programs such as DARE, Stranger Danger, and bicycle safety are presented to students by the Quincy Police Department. In addition, the MBTA has presented a program on riding the T safely.

Over the summer, the school lunchroom has undergone major renovations and has almost been doubled in space. The stove and cabinets have been replaced, and the window where the students pick up hot lunches on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays has been lowered to accommodate them.

The school will also continue to offer its After School Care Program which runs until 5:30 p.m. every school day. Students participating in the program take part in activities such as cooking, arts and crafts, outdoor games, and indoor games in the gym during inclement weather. Under teacher supervision, the students are also allowed to do their homework.

Overseas Experience To Help North Teams

A number of returning starters and experience playing abroad should help improve the North Quincy High boys' and girls' soccer teams this season.

Girls' coach Karen Howard returns several key players from last year's 4-11-1 squad. Included in that group is junior forward Annie Bergen who honed her skills over the summer against some of the top European girls in tournaments in Denmark and England.

In Denmark's Dana Cup, the biggest women's soccer tournament in the world, her team won the tourney title. She duplicated that feat again, and again, playing for two different age groups in an English tournament sponsored by rock singer Elton John. In all she spent 17 days in Europe.

"We expect big things from Annie," said Howard. "She played against some of the top competition in the world and returns as our top scorer from last year."

Bergen also played on the Metro Team in the Bay State Games.

Other players Howard will be counting on are junior classmates Liz Fitzpatrick (midfield), Kelly Keegan (sweeper), and Kristen Kelley (defense). Each girl played on the state district soccer team this year.

"Liz is very strong and improving and Kelly did an excellent job playing her first year as sweeper. Kristen will also do well," said Howard.

Keegan and senior Nancy DiStasio will be the captains of the squad. DiStasio transferred from Archbishop Williams and played for the Red Raiders last season.

"How many people come out and how many people come back will be the determining factor for our team this year," said the coach.

The North girls open their season at Plymouth South Friday, Sept. 9. Last year the combined Plymouth team beat the Red Raiders by just one goal so they hope to come out on top against the South squad.

They host Falmouth Tuesday, Sept. 13 at 3:30 p.m.

Coach Jim Johnston's boys' team also features a veteran of foreign competition. Senior keeper Tom Meade spent his junior year studying and playing in Argentina.

"I expect playing in Argentina would improve his game immensely," said Johnston.

"We're looking to do better this year. We have a very young team but many of them have come up through the Quincy Youth Soccer program and should be able to play well," said coach Johnston.

Dan Stone will anchor the North Quincy 11 from his center midfield position. "Dan started for us last year as a sophomore and we expect him to play well this year." Stone also mans the blue line for the Red Raiders hockey team.

Johnston will count on forwards Tom Bianco (senior) and Shawn Johnson (junior) to put the ball in the net for his club.

Two other returning starters are senior defender Jared Rowland and midfielder Peter Johnson.

"Jared and Peter are both quality players. Peter is a real good product of the Quincy Youth Soccer program," said Johnston.

Coach Johnston's expectations are tempered by one fact.

"We play in probably the strongest league in the state. That makes things a little tough. Plymouth, Silver Lake, Weymouth, Bridgewater-Raynham and New Bedford (a non-league opponent this season) have all won state championships in the past few years."

The boys will open at home against Plymouth South Sept. 9 at 3:30 p.m. They travel to Falmouth the following Tuesday, Sept. 13.

WINNERS of the recent Father Bill's Road Race were, front row from left, Lynda Wilson, third place; James Chiochio, first place; Larry Forman, second place and Eric Wilson, fourth place. The event raised several hundred dollars for Quincy's homeless shelter, bringing the three-year total for the race to $1,500.

At Quincy:

Girls 'Optimistic', Boys 'Rebuilding'

The Quincy High School girls' and boys' soccer teams have two different outlooks on the upcoming seasons.

"We should definitely do better than last year," said girls' coach Sonya Herring of her team which returns eight starters from last season - Herring's first as Quincy's head coach.

For the boys it will be a "total rebuilding" year, according to second-year coach Barry Austin. He returns just one starter.

Herring feels her team will be improved all around.

Senior co-captain Jessica Barry will play center defense after missing last year with a blown-out knee. Senior Amy Devin and junior Janet Kane are the two returning fullbacks.

"Jessica coming back should add depth to the defense. Basically the three should work well together," said Herring.

Three returning starters will also man the midfield. Herring expects solid play from junior co-captain Andrea Gill and sophomores Erin Flaherty and Katie Sullivan. The youngsters will provide experience for the next couple of years.

Returning at forward are juniors Traci Murphy and Kelly Howard. The frontliners should give Quincy a great 1-2 punch on offense.

"Kelly was one of the top scorers on the team last year and close to the top in the [Old Colony] League," said Herring. "Traci should have a lot of assists."

Keeper Mary Kelly, a junior, will again guard the goal for the Presidents.

Among the other good-looking prospects for Quincy is Heather Wakelin. "Heather will be a good asset to the team at left midfield," said the

Touch Football League Seeking Teams

The Eastern Mass Touch Football League (EMTFL) is seeking new teams for the upcoming season.

The 10-game season begins Sept. 10. At the end of the season teams vie for the EMTFL Cup in a three-game playoff.

Five players take to the field at a time and a maximum of 20 players are allowed per squad.

The fields are 100 yards long by 37-1/2 yards wide.

The EMTFL is a competitive one-hand tag league that has been in existence since 1978. Physical play on the line is allowed but rules against cheap shots and fighting are strictly enforced. A rules committee insures fair play.

"We only want clean teams," said league commissioner John Anderson.

The league has an official photographer, an awards banquet and an all-star game.

Games are played Sunday mornings at 9:30 at the home team's field. Teams come from throughout Greater Boston.

For more information call Anderson at 769-7750 or 769-6443.

Koch Doubleheader Raises $1300 For Quincy PAL

The Quincy Police and News Media were victorious on the field but the big winner was the Quincy Police Athletic League which received $1,300 in proceeds from the annual Dick Koch Memorial Softball Doubleheader last week at Adams Field.

This year's game receipts bring the 18-year total of the benefit doubleheader to $26,000. The first $24,700 was donated to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Beginning this year, proceeds will be given to a selected charity.

A Quincy PAL official said the benefit game will help support the many programs PAL provides for the city's youth.

"We certainly appreciate what the game does for us," said Officer Bob Hanna, co-chairman of Quincy PAL.

"We couldn't run this program without donations like this. It's the children of the city who benefit from this program," Hanna said.

In the first game, a veteran police softball squad, fresh off an impressive showing at a tournament in Detroit, handcuffed a young but spirited Quincy Fire team, 37-6.

In the nightcap, the News Media prevailed over the city officials 7-3. The game featured timely hitting and great defense from both sides.

After two innings, the officials held a 3-1 advantage. However, over the last five innings, the media notched 10 hits and played 6 runners while holding the officials to

Jaehnig Club Wins Marlboro Tournament

Fireballing phenom Justin Hall hurled a no-hitter as the Jaehnig Chiopracitic 10-and-under all-star team blanked Shrewsbury, 9-0, in the championship game of the Marlboro Baseball Tournament.

Hall struck out 13. For the Quincy boys the win capped a perfect 8-0 run in the tournament.

The game also featured another diamond rarity: a triple play. The Jaehnig club loaded the bases in the second inning with not outs and slugger Pat Jaehnig ripped a line drive to right-center. Shrewsbury's center fielder dove and made what seemed an amazing catch, but the play was ruled a trap. In the confusion the Quincy coaches had their runners hold then watched disbelievingly as the Shrewsbury boys threw to home, third and second to complete the triple play.

The Jaehnig club put the game away early with three runs in the first inning. With two outs

Keith Doherty walked and went to second on Chir Lockhead's bullet single to left field. Both players advanced on a double steal and scored on a clutch double by Mark Maher. Maher crossed the plate due James LaFleur's sharp single down the left field line.

The Quincy team scored the other six runs in the third inning. Doherty walked (he reached on balls four times in the contest) and scored on Lockhead's double. Pat Bregoli slapped a fielder's choice RBI and, after two walks, Tommy Buckley connected for a two-RBI single. Hall aided his cause with a base hit that drove in the game's final two runs.

Seven-year-old David Jaehnig saved the no-hitter with a dynamite stop at second of the only hard-hit ball Shrewsbury could muster in the outing.

Charlie Vidoli walked three times and scored two runs. He also played well in the field.

For Hall it was a fitting cap to an outstanding season. The 10-year-old was arguably the most dominating pitcher in Quincy's Junior League this past season - a league made up of players aged 10 to 12. Fastball Hall has a bright future indeed. But he was hardly alone among the loaded Jaehnig club lineup. Also receiving championship trophies were Pat Bregoli, Tom Buckley, Keith Doherty, Jason and John Fidalgo, David and Patrick Jaehnig, James LaFleur, Chris Lockhead, Mark Maher, Charlie Vidoli, bat boy Matt Jaehnig, manager Mark Jaehnig and coaches Les Fidalgo and Peter Currie.

Plans call for the reconstruction of the Newport Avenue Extension from Hancock Street to West Squantum Street. Officials said the entire base of the road will be replaced, and the project will also specifically address such items as roadway and sidewalk settlement, roadway capacity, signalization and pedestrian safety.

In addition, the project will facilitate traffic flow for the State Street complex, which is located off the Newport Avenue Extension.

Officials must now meet to discuss a schedule for the work. No timetable has been set for the project.

Kinney To Return As Manager Of Parking System

the decision, he said.

Gillon said in the Aug. 11 Quincy Sun that the offers on the contract from the three independent firms broke down this way:

•Kinney offered to charge the city a fee of $215,000 a year for its managerial services, while Quincy would keep all receipts from the parking system. Gillon has estimated that the city's annual parking receipts will total about $400,000, so the Kinney bid will result in a profit of $185,000 for the city if that estimate is accurate.

•Fitz-Inn offered to charge $246,000 annually for managerial services, and would also have allowed the city to keep all parking receipts, which according to Gillon's estimate would mean a $154,000 profit for Quincy.

•Metropolitan offered to charge the city only $70,000 a year for its services, but the company also wanted to keep all receipts. Metropolitan had estimated that the annual parking receipts would total $450,000, but also claimed that it would cost $520,000 to manage the parking system, so the city would need to make up the additional $70,000. Gillon said that deal might actually have worked out in the city's favor if some for some reason parking receipts totaled less than $145,000, or more than $70,000 less than the Kinney bid.

Gillon said certain details of the contract still have to be worked out. For example, he noted that the city received a number of complaints about lighting, litter and security in the parking areas when Kinney previously held the contract.

Gillon said in order to avoid a repeat of that situation, the city will set conditions in the new contract requiring that Metropolitan meets certain standards in its maintenance of the parking areas.

"We'll put enough teeth in the contract that it will be canceled abruptly if they don't meet those standards," said Gillon, who added the city's past problems with Kinney are the reason the new contract is being negotiated, rather than awarded outright.

In addition, Quincy and Kinney must agree on the software chosen for the auditing system of the parking areas. The purpose of the system will be not only to monitor the financial intake of the parking system but also to "show the type of parkers" that utilize the Hancock Lot and the Ross Garage, according to Gillon.

He added that City Auditor Robert Foy will be asked to review the new auditing system before it is approved.

The city plans to offer two-hour free parking on the ground level of the Ross Parking Garage in order to attract more shoppers to the Quincy's downtown shopping district, and the auditing system will help determine how many shoppers are taking advantage of that offer. Gillon said if all goes according to plan, both the Kinney contract and the free parking will be in place by the beginning of October.

Gillon said the City Council has the final word on the rates charged at both parking areas. He added that he will ask the council to schedule a vote on the matter later this month.

Debate Series To Be Aired On Continental Sept. 7-8

Continental Cablevision will telecast a series of six debates among candidates for statewide office Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 7 and 8 at 8 p.m. on Channel 3 in Quincy.

The debates were co-sponsored exclusively by Continental and New England Cable News. Among the candidates included will be Republican U.S. Senate hopefuls Mitt Romney and John Lakian.

New England Cable News has aired the debates, which were produced by Continental at its Cambridge studio.

Roy Hobbs and Mike Nikitas from New England Cable News did turns as moderator in the various debates. Candidates were questioned by a rotating panel including The Boston Globe's Don Aucoin and Sally Jacobs, New England Cable News' Liesa Healy, Barbara MacLeod and Alan Cohn; Massachusetts League of Women Voters President Deena Whitfield and Susan Shaer, an independent producer at Continental's Arlington studio.

The debate schedule is as follows:

Wednesday, Sept. 7
•8 to 8:30 p.m.: Republicans for Auditor Forester "Tim" Clark and Earle Strolle.

•8:30 to 9 p.m.: Republicans for Secretary of State Arthur Chase and Peter Forman.

•9 to 10 p.m.: Democrats for Governor George Bachrach, Michael Barrett and Mark Roosevelt.

Thursday, Sept. 8
•8 to 8:30 p.m.: Discussion with Democrat for Secretary of State Augusto "Augie" Grace (rival William Galvin had a scheduling conflict).

•8:30 to 9 p.m.: Republicans for Attorney General Janice Berry and Guy Carbone.

•9 to 9:30 p.m.: Democrats for Lieutenant Governor Mark Draisen and Robert Massie.

•9:30 to 10 p.m.: Republicans for U.S. Senator John Lakian and Mitt Romney.

The debates were produced live in Continental's studios Aug. 24, 25 and 26. They will be broadcast in each of the 102 Massachusetts communities served by Continental.

For Ward 1 Low-Income Families Food Pantry At Former Maintenance Garage Opens At 15 Bicknell St.

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Peter and Sally Seppala realized their dream of giving something back to the community when they recently opened their tenant-run food pantry.

After two years of working with city officials and governmental agencies, the Seppalas, with help from several tenants of the Seaside Advocacy Group, opened the food pantry for low-income families at 15A Bicknell St., Germantown. The site was converted from a former maintenance facility.

Peter Seppala, the pantry's president, said the purpose of the new food outreach program is to serve people, especially those experiencing financial hardship.

"The people down here need it. The people can't afford to keep up with the economy. It's a shame," Seppala said.

The food pantry serves all residents of Ward 1. "There's no other food pantry in Ward 1," Seppala said. The other pantries are located at the Protestant Social Services Bureau in Wollaston and the South-West Community Center in West Quincy.

Seppala said the food pantry can serve 15 to 25 people a week. He expects his clientele is probably around 200 people, most of whom will frequent the pantry less than once a month.

"I have very few people here every month at this point," he says, adding, "But that could change."

The pantry is well-stocked with baby food and has an assortment of canned goods. Seppala said the pantry cannot stock meat because it lacks a refrigerator.

"I can't supply the meat but we can give you all the fixings to go with it," he said.

Jean Kennedy, receptionist for the Quincy Housing Authority and treasurer of the pantry, said it was a group effort which helped their dream become reality.

"We are thrilled with the response. Everyone has been so helpful," Kennedy said.

Kennedy singled out Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 1 Councilor Peter Kolson.

"They (Cheney and Kolson) have been unbelievably helpful," she said.

Many groups of various backgrounds have pitched in to help the food pantry ranging from Project Bread to the U.S. Post Office.

"A lot of people have helped," Kennedy said. "Even the Post Office held a one-day can drive to collect canned goods."

Other contributors include Boston Gas which donated furniture to the pantry when they relocated, the Quincy Planning Department which issued a $1,000 grant for the pantry and Project Bread which presented $2,000 to the cause. Another $2,000 in private donations were also collected.

In addition, the Quincy Housing Authority also made a major assist by providing space for the food pantry. In return, the Seaside Advocacy Group will pay the QHA $1 per year as long as the lease exists.

The pantry has crystalized from an abstract conversational piece some 12 years ago into a concrete residency in Germantown.

"It's been a long time coming. I remember we were chit-chatting during a Christmas party about how there was only one food pantry in the area and who we could change that," Kennedy explained.

"This is the result." The tenant-run Seaside Advocacy Group food pantry was converted from a two-car garage and maintenance facility at the traffic circle in Germantown. Because of the pantry's small quarters, Seppala would someday like to expand it.

"Eventually, I would like to be able to expand either in the present building on at another site," he said.

Ideally, Seppala would like to convert the area presently used for food storage into a walk-in cooler. The cooler would contain perishable foods such as meat.

Then, he'd like to take the current office space and store food there while building an addition. The addition would house the office staff.

Seppala, 49, formerly worked as a night manager at 7-11 on Copeland St., West Quincy. It is there where he met Steve Brown who was a franchiser at the convenient store.

Brown, who now works at Corporate Press in Norwood, is a member in the business section of the group.

The food pantry will have 10 board members and two volunteers according to Seppala. The tenant-run pantry does have some rules and regulations for deciding who is eligible for assistance.

Those seeking assistance must bring a pay stub, photo identification, receipts for housing expenses and a Medicaid or Social Security card.

Appointments must be made in advance for reasons of confidentiality by calling the food pantry at 479-0828. The pantry is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

An invitation only meeting was held Saturday at the food pantry which was followed by a ribbon-cutting ceremony by Fr. Richard DeVeer, pastor of St. Boniface Church.

An open house for the public was held at the pantry Sunday.

OBITUARIES

Robert Hamill, Jr., 74

WW II Navy Veteran, Shipyard Worker

A funeral Mass for Robert Hamill, Jr., 74, of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

Mr. Hamill died Aug. 26 at home after a brief illness.

Born in Motherwell, Scotland, he immigrated to the U.S. at the age of 12 and settled in Quincy.

A former lofts man, he worked for Bethlehem Steel Co. and General Dynamics at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

He was a Navy veteran of World War II.

He was a communicant of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

Mr. Hamill is survived by his wife, Laura (Thiboutot) Hamill of Quincy; four sons, Robert J. Hamill and William H. Hamill, both of Quincy, Peter P. Hamill of Carver, and Thomas Hamill of Plymouth; five daughters, Margaret Maleck of Plymouth, Alicia Corlew of Long Island, N.Y., Jean Malissos of Salem, N.H., Janet Lynch of Randolph, and Helen Welling of Woburn; two brothers, Thomas Hamill of Braintree and Hugh Hamill of Quincy; two sisters, Anne Cunningham of Weymouth and Helen Mallett of Braintree; 16 grandchildren; four great-grandchildren, and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Knollwood Memorial Park, Canton.

Funeral arrangements were by the Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St. Donations may be made to Hospice of Boston, Long Island, Boston, MA or to the building fund at St. Mary's Church, 95 Crescent St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Stanley A. Holmy, 86

Founded Two Companies; Musician, Ventriloquist

A funeral service for Stanley A. Holmy, 86, of Quincy, was held Aug. 26 in the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Mr. Holmy died Aug. 23 at home after a brief illness.

A musician and ventriloquist, he was also co-founder of the Holmy Concrete Block Co. and the South Shore Car Wash.

A machinist for Bethlehem Steel at the Fore River shipyard during World War II, he founded the concrete company with his late brother, John Holmy, in 1946. After several years, he took over the company and when it closed in 1963, he opened and operated the car wash at the same site with his wife, Vieno (Matson) Holmy.

Born in Quincy, he lived there most of his life. He retired in 1975 and lived in Centerville on Cape Cod for many years before moving back to Quincy.

Mr. Holmy was a graduate of Quincy Trade School.

He was a member of the former Club 74 of Quincy.

He is also survived by a son, Stanley A. Holmy Jr. of Quincy; and two grandchildren.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Donations may be made to the charity of one's choice.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

There's no month like September. Parents eye their school-ward as they take their first steps toward the school bus. Older students leave home for their first adventure in dormitory life. College and high school graduates find themselves looking for jobs.

Year in and year out, September brings gradual and unusual changes in the lives of many of us.

Parents and students wonder about the personality and influence of a new teacher. Teachers do not choose their students and may find themselves in a roomful of strangers. The first days of school often reveal which students will test a teacher's intelligence, patience, or perseverance for the ensuing school year.

September is a month of new things: books, tablets, pencils, prints, plaids, plains and, of course, blue jeans. It is a time to start again with new ideas, new activities and new friends.

What happens in a new school year has far-reaching effects on all of us. It matters not if we are eight or eighty, school is everyone's business.

Arthur Sorenson Jr., 71

AT&T Troubleshooter, Union President; Decorated World War II Veteran

A funeral service for Arthur Sorenson Jr., 71, of Quincy, was held Aug. 26 in First Church of Squantum.

Mr. Sorenson died Aug. 23 in Quincy Hospital after a long illness.

A retired troubleshooter and union president at AT&T, he worked 40 years out of the telephone company's office on Franklin Street in Boston. He was president of Local 1051 of the Communications Workers of America for eight years, spending nearly full-time on union business for some years.

During his time with the phone company, he started the first Red Cross drive among workers. He was the company's head fundraiser for the United Way, teaching fund-raising methods to executives in classes at Harvard College. He retired in 1984.

Mr. Sorenson was a second lieutenant in the bomb group that led the first big raid on Berlin during World War II, and as a 23-year-old, he became lead navigator for many bombing missions. He was awarded the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters and the Distinguished Flying Cross for his service during the war.

Prior to the war, he worked for a time at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy and after the war, he was a founding member of the Nickerson American Legion Post.

Born in Somerville, he moved to Squantum with his family as a youngster and was a 1940 graduate of North Quincy High School. He later attended the University of Pittsburgh.

He was a trustee and deacon at First Church of Squantum. He enjoyed fishing, traveling, swimming at Orchard Beach in Squantum and playing jazz, ragtime and classical pieces on the piano. Mr. Sorenson was also a talented tennis player.

He is survived by his wife, Virginia M. (Sparks) Sorenson; a son, David A. Sorenson of Squantum; three daughters, Barbara J. O'Flaherty of Scituate, Carole A. Sorenson-Fimlaid of New York and Lynda J. Thornton of Squantum; a brother, Henry Sorenson of Squantum; eight grandchildren, and several nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

coach. Herring also boasts three top-notch freshmen: Kara McSweeney (midfield), Jessica DiBona ("a very versatile player") and Kerry Duffy (forward). Each played Quincy Youth Soccer and give the Presidents a bright future.

"It's looking very optimistic and we should have a good year," said Herring.

The girls host Taunton Friday, Sept. 9 at 3:30 in the opening game of the season. They travel to Weymouth Sept. 12 for a 5 p.m. contest.

For the boys' soccer team, things do not look so bright. As the only returning starter, senior sweeper Jason Downey will be called upon to provide the club with both leadership and experience.

However, Downey will be aided by the addition of two senior transfers from Archbishop Williams. Joe Tucker was a three-year starter at midfield for the Bishops. Scott Stasiak also played midfield. The two will give the Presidents much needed strength in the middle.

"I expect a lot of them (Downey, Tucker, Stasiak) this season," said Austin. "They'll be asked to carry the team."

Body Conditioning Class At YMCA

A Body Conditioning Class for men and women with wampup, stretch and toning exercises will be held at the South Shore

The English-born coach will be forced to play some freshmen this season, and Jared Downey (Jason's brother) and Walter Ferra are two that will undergo trial by fire.

"Jared did well at the youth level and we'll be expecting good things from him in the future. Walter Ferra is another good freshman prospect. His brother Oscar was a very good player a few years back," said Austin.

One of Quincy's top defensemen will be sophomore Jason Lumaghini. Lumaghini played football last year but will try his foot at soccer this year after several seasons playing Quincy Youth Soccer. Coach Dick Shea of QYS described him as a "real tiger. He really comes after people."

It is obvious that youth and an lack of number's will not be to Quincy's benefit this season. "I knew I was getting some quality freshmen in," said Austin. "I think we will be much stronger in the next couple of years, I'm sure of it."

"Numbers have always been a problem for Quincy," he added.

Another problem that will plague the Presidents is a schedule that includes two games each against Silver Lake, Weymouth, Bridgewater-Raynham and New Bedford.

"Those teams are always up there; state quarterfinals is minimum for any of these teams. They're all powerhouses," said Austin.

If that is the case the Presidents' schedule does not look easy.

They open the season with three road games: at Taunton Friday, Sept. 9; at Weymouth Sept. 13 at 7 p.m.; and at Bridgewater-Raynham Sept. 15.

Their first home game is against New Bedford Sept. 19 at 3:30.

QHS History Department AP Scores Highest Ever

By LISA CONNELL
Quincy High School School Social Studies Department Chairman John Harrington announced recently that last year's results of the Advanced Placement (AP) tests in the social studies department were among the highest ever, with 16 students eligible for credit or advanced placement at the undergraduate college level.

According to Harrington, of the 40 Quincy High students who took the nearly four-hour exam last spring, 27 students received qualifying grades.

Of the 27 students that qualified, 16 of them did so in subjects under the jurisdiction of the Social Studies Department. These subjects include U.S.

History, European History, Government and Politics, Macroeconomics and Psychology.

Graded on a score of one to five, with five being the highest possible score, most colleges and universities grant college credits for grades of three or better.

Five students received a score of five (very well qualified); nine students received a four (well qualified) and 13 students scored a three (qualified).

Several students qualified in more than one subject.

Traditionally, said Harrington, the AP exams are taken by students in the spring of their senior year.

One student, junior Joseph Lind, received a grade of four in both U.S. History and economics.

Results of the exam are usually received by students and school officials in July.

A qualifying score on an AP test puts a flag upon a candidate's application for a particular college; it shows that this student is above the regular candidate applying for admission to a school, said Harrington in a recent interview.

"These tests help a student get through their undergraduate years quickly. Some can graduate with double majors or in three years, instead of the traditional four. They [the test results] can be real money savers," he said.

Graduating seniors Erica Curtis and Lauralee Summer received a five in Modern European History and English Literature and Composition, respectively.

Students who qualified on more than one test in the past two years by number of AP tests taken are: Erica Curtis, five; Fanny Cheng, two; Joseph Lind, two; Ashley Lynch-Mahoney, four; Mary Teresa Quilty, three; Erin Sullivan, two; Lauralee Summer, four; Christopher Swanton, two; and Adolph Wong, two.

Total subject breakdown and the number of qualifying students are: U.S. history, one; biology, three; macroeconomics, six; English literature and composition, five; European history, six; calculus, one; psychology, two; Spanish language, one; French language, one; U.S. government and politics, one.

SLIPS DURING UPSHIFTS

If an automatic transmission slips as it shifts into higher gears, there are things to look at before assuming a transmission overhaul is necessary.

The first place to look is at the level of the transmission fluid to be sure that it is correct. Next, a look at the transmission filter (or screen) may be in order to verify that it is not partially clogged. If sediment is evident, it could lower the hydraulic pressure within the transmission to cause slipping. While replacing the filter and adding new fluid can restore normal transmission operation, failure later on down the road could occur. Soft sludge in the transmission filter is indicative of significant wear on the friction material on the transmission bands and clutches.

HINT: Large flakes (aside from soft sludge) in the transmission filter usually indicates the need for a transmission overhaul.

Special Mass At St. John's Church Quincy Court, Police Officials Stunned By State Trooper's Death

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The agenda at Quincy District Court this week was edged in sadness as officials and personnel mourned the death of popular State Trooper Mark Charbonnier who served as a state police prosecutor there.

The American and Massachusetts state flags were lowered to half staff in tribute to Charbonnier who was gunned down last week during a routine traffic stop.

Charbonnier, 31, who worked out of the Norwell State Police barracks, died last Friday at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston a few hours after being shot on Route 3 in Kingston.

Obituary, Page 18

The man Charbonnier pulled over on Route 3, 31-year-old David Clark of East Falmouth, at press time had been upgraded to fair condition at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. Police said after Clark shot at Charbonnier, the trooper returned fire and two of Charbonnier's shots hit their target.

Local law enforcement officials took the news of Charbonnier's death hard, particularly because he had been in Quincy

A ROADSIDE MEMORIAL of flowers, clothes and many other personal belongings of slain State Trooper Mark Charbonnier rest on the site where Charbonnier was murdered on Route 3 in Kingston last week after a routine traffic stop. The remembrances were left over the weekend by relatives, comrades and others moved by the tragic killing. State Police plan to erect a permanent memorial on the site.

$100,000 For Each Ward Sheets Asks $600,000 For Sidewalk Repairs

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets plans to ask the City Council for an appropriation of $600,000 to finance major repairs to sidewalks throughout the city.

Sheets, who made the announcement Tuesday, said he wants $100,000 spent in each of the city's six wards to replace the aging sidewalks. The mayor noted that the sidewalks have not seen such extensive renovations in at least 20 years.

The funds for the repairs will be taken from the city's free-cash account, which currently totals about $3 million, according to Sheets. He said he feels the $600,000 will be enough to complete the sidewalk project.

"I'm comfortable with that figure," he said.

He added that he also plans to have money put into a capital outlay program to be included in the city's FY96 budget for future repairs to the sidewalks.

Sheets said his main concern about the current condition of the sidewalks is that they may jeopardize the safety of those who use them.

"The sidewalks are just deteriorated," he said. "I'm particularly concerned about the safety of our senior citizens and young parents pushing baby strollers down the sidewalks. We don't want them stumbling or falling."

The mayor said his office annually receives "hundreds of complaints" about the sidewalks but the economy has prevented the city from doing anything about them in recent years.

Sheets said he plans to send his request for the funding to the City Council at its Sept. 19 meeting.

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, said he supports the appropriation.

"I would think all the council would be supportive," he said. "The councillors see the need to repair the sidewalks. That's putting money back into the neighborhoods, which I personally support. There's a big need for it."

Fabrizio added that in recent years, the city has received less state funding for such projects, which makes the need for city funding even greater.

Sheets said if the council passes the appropriation, the city will send out a request for proposals (R.F.P.) to companies interested in bidding on the project sometime this fall. He added that he hopes repairs can begin by next spring and be completed by late summer.

New College Board To Begin Search For Permanent President

The new Quincy College Board of Trustees is expected to soon begin its search for a new college president, a search that could extend into next year.

School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, a member of the new board, said he would like to see a new president at Quincy College by next spring.

"But that's just my personal feeling," he said. Another board member, Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, said he thinks next spring could be a realistic goal but said "it depends on what else comes up" before then.

"I don't really want to speculate at this point," said Fabrizio.

Interim Quincy College President Donald Young, whose contract expired one day after a five-man appointing council chose the final 11 members of the 13-member board of trustees last week, has expressed an interest in keeping the job on a regular basis.

Officials have said Young will remain in control until the trustees choose a permanent president.

Young said in a phone interview he still has more time to do at the college.

"I'm interesting in continuing," he said in a phone interview. "There is some unfinished business here (his work in developing four-year baccalaureate programs at the college) that needs to be done."

Young added that he is impressed with the talent and diversity of the new board and the "deep understanding of the college's mission" demonstrated by its members as well as others who applied for the board of trustees but were not chosen.

Ten of the new board members are from Quincy. The others are from Brockton, Cohasset and Scituate.

Raymond said an official swearing-in cere-

MacMullen To Address Historic Naval Ships Assn. Conference

U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum Executive Director William MacMullen has been invited by the Historic Naval Ships Association of North America to address their annual conference Sept.

MacMullen will discuss his experiences in establishing the USNSM in Quincy, focusing on non-public finding strategies, and meeting the Navy Department's rigid new guidelines for the transfer of surplus naval vessels.

MacMullen was recently invited by the Naval Air Warfare Center Weapons Division to give a similar presentation at its facility in China Lake, CA.

400 Donate Bricks For Walkway
Granite Workers
 Memorial Dedication
 Oct. 10 At Shea Park

The Granite Workers Memorial will be dedicated in Shea Park in West Quincy on Monday, Oct. 10 at 11 a.m.

A reception will immediately follow at the Ward 4 Community Center in the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center on Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Approximately 400 bricks and 14 benches have been sold and personalized for a memorial walkway at Shea Park. Organizer Steve Cantelli said more bricks are available for a donation of $50 but the bricks will unlikely be ready for the memorial dedication. In that case, the bricks would be added after the dedication.

For more information on ordering bricks, call Albalocci at 472-2580, Steve Cantelli at 479-1019 or Ernie Aristide at 472-6312.

O'Connell Purchases Quincy Bay Inn

By LISA CONNELL

At a press conference Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets announced that the Quincy Bay Inn has been purchased by Quincy developer Peter O'Connell in an area of the city that Sheets said has remained dormant and unchanged for some time.

The name of the 104-room hotel will be changed to The Adams Inn.

Sheets said this purchase was important to the city as a whole as it highlights his plans "to revitalize and rebuild the economy of the city and revitalize and rebuild the city's commercial and retail base."

O'Connell would not disclose the exact purchase price but did say the property's acquisition represents "a multi-million dollar purchase."

O'Connell purchased the Quincy Bay Inn from its last owner, Al Nacar of Quincy.

The Quincy Bay Inn is currently operating at a 40 to 45 percent occupancy rate, according to O'Connell. He is hopeful that following renovations, 70 percent occupancy will become the norm.

O'Connell is hopeful that the city's financial businesses will take advantage of the inn's close proximity to their offices to house colleagues visiting from other cities.

In addition to attracting tourists, he also would like to see management at the Bayside Exposition Center, just a short distance from the inn via the Neponset River Bridge, recommend trade show attendees lodge at the future Adams Inn.

PETER O'CONNELL

Robert Galligan, of K & O Management and a partner in this venture with O'Connell, will manage the hotel.

"As I walked the (inn's) grounds, I realize we have a lot of work to do...but with the spirit for revitalization in this area, and the redevelopment of the tourist industry, ...the Adams Inn really has a place here," said O'Connell.

O'Connell sees his proposal as an "anchor to that end of the city. With cooperation from the city and councillors, we're willing to undertake this risk at this particular time. We think the economy and timing is right."

O'Connell's plans for the new inn met with much support from Quincy 2000 officials and city councillors Ayers and Chretien.

Under O'Connell's ownership, Ward 3 City Councillor sees a top quality, clean establishment, "the kind you'd put your mother up at."

Chretien said it was easy to support this proposal because of the image of Quincy that will be portrayed to local residents and visitors to the city.

"From Quincy Ave. on over to the Neponset Bridge, Quincy will be seen as a city that's safe, clean and has the right values."

Along a similar note, Ward 6 City Councillor said, "Peter O'Connell is a first-class businessman and with Bob Galligan, they will put a whole new concept in that area."

Because of recent redistricting, due to population changes as recorded during the last city census, the Adams Inn falls in Ward 3, not Ward 6, like many other North Quincy businesses.

Chretien said he and Ayers see the proposed Adams Inn as one that will bring stability and integrity to the area and as a building that will "just plain look better." Ayers pledged his support of the project to Chretien and O'Connell.

Referring to O'Connell as a "trailblazer," Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix connected O'Connell's plans with the city's future building of its economy by increasing tourism and business and vacation travel to Quincy. "A master plan for tourism in Quincy is about to begin. This is a first step to building a hotel infrastructure."

The nightclub area from the property will be removed. O'Connell said a liquor license will be sought for the site but only to accommodate scheduled functions. He

LaRaia Calls For Graffiti Removal

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia has called for the establishment of a new city agency that will remove all graffiti from walls, mailboxes and other structures in Quincy.

LaRaia said at press time he planned to introduce a resolution calling for the creation of such a group to the City Council

Tuesday night. He added that he hopes Mayor James Sheets will set up the new agency as soon as possible.

Crisis Center Benefit Friday

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company will hold its fifth annual "Food for Friends" Hot Dog Sale to benefit the Quincy Crisis Center Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The event will be held in front of the Stop & Shop corporate headquarters at 1385 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

Stop & Shop executives will join company employees to operate grills and sell hot dogs, soda, potato chips, frozen yogurt and ice cream. Those in attendance will have a chance to win Boston Bruins and Celtics tickets. Entertainment will be provided by Cosmic Boogie and the Stop & Shop House Blues Band.

The Food for Friends program started in 1989 on the company's 75th anniversary and has raised over $1 million for non-profit organizations fighting hunger in the communities where Stop & Shop operates.

LaRaia Calls For Graffiti Removal

LaRaia said while he does not feel graffiti is a serious problem in the city, he does see it "in spotty areas" in Quincy Center and other parts of the city. He added that he is concerned the graffiti might be "offensive to others who come upon it."

The method of establishing the agency, and the city department through which it is created, will be entirely up to the mayor, he said. LaRaia noted. He also said he does not think the endeavor will financially cost the city that much.

"I don't see it as a major expense," he said.

PAY ATTENTION TO PALPITATIONS

One of the problems with atrial fibrillation (AF) is that its symptoms seem so harmless, even laughable. People may smile at the description of someone's heart "giving pitty-pat" or snicker at someone who becomes short of breath during exertion. In reality, there is nothing comical about AF, in which the upper heart chambers vibrate weakly instead of effectively pumping the blood. The faulty pumping action, often felt as heart palpitations, allows blood to pool and clot, setting the stage for a possible blockage and subsequent stroke or heart attack. The American College of Chest Physicians estimates that half of all strokes could be prevented with blood-thinning drugs, often at low doses.

P.S. At least one million Americans have atrial fibrillation which is a factor in 75,000 strokes annually.

Decelle Watch Goes On

The Decelle watch goes on . . . and . . . on.

The big retailer has been heralded as the pivotal point for the future of the downtown Quincy business district.

But merchants who have been looking forward to the coming of Decelle are now wondering if it will actually happen. And you can't blame them.

Quincy 2000 and Mayor James Sheets rolled out a plush welcome mat adorned with enticing concessions for Decelle to locate in the old Childworld and Cummings stores on Hancock St.

That was some eight or so months ago but so far, no Decelle.

Negotiations have dragged on for those many, many months, giving birth to speculation—and pessimism—that it's not going to happen.

But insiders and others close to those negotiations remain optimistic—if not confident—that it will happen. And soon. Maybe this week—or next.

The downtown business community has heard that before. They still remember when the deal sometime ago was called "this close"—(thumb and forefinger pressed tightly together.)

But those on the inside to what's going on behind the scene point out that negotiations can take a long, long time before they are finalized and the papers signed. Patience, they say, patience.

Decelle, just about everyone agrees, would be a turning point for the downtown retail district—a new beginning, the major anchor store to attract shoppers to downtown.

Long gone from the scene are former attractions such as Sears Roebuck, Remick's, Sheridan's, the Enterprise, Milton's, Kincaide's, Sawyer's, and, more recently, Colman's.

Existing stores need a big name to bring the shoppers here. Decelle would do that. It would also help bring more specialty shops to the area which in turn would bring more shoppers.

Decelle, it is also felt, would help ease the impact of Wal-Mart which now looks pretty much like a sure thing for the planned Granite Crossing Shopping Center on Quincy Ave.

Interestingly, the developer of that shopping center, is trying to help bring Decelle here.

Donald MacKinnon, head of the Hingham-based Atlantic Development, has contributed $30,000 toward the necessary and considerable demolition and renovations needed to prepare the Childworld-Cummings site for Decelle. And he has pledged $100,000 more pending City Council approval of Granite Crossing and Wal-Mart.

He has also moved to help strengthen the downtown retail district in other ways.

One is to help in the permitting for the planned Court House Square proposed for the Hancock parking area—up to $150,000 worth.

Under the constitution federal officials may not accept a gift, payment or title from a foreign country without the consent of Congress.

Chuck D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000 who has put long hours into wooing Decelle, says Court House Square could mean an estimated 1,000 jobs and more potential shoppers giving the retail district a healthy shot in the arm.

MacKinnon also recently pledged a $150,000 grant to the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association for an advertising-promotion plan to stimulate retail activity downtown.

If Decelle and some of these other pieces fall into place, Quincy Center should defend itself against the impact of a Wal-Mart just a little way down the street. Decelle is the major key to downtown's future.

There will be whooping if the long awaited word on Decelle is "yes" as insiders this week still think it is going to be.

But there would be a lot of moaning and groaning if the word turned out to be "no."

The sad part of a "no" would be that eight months had been wasted on what turned out to be a ghost. Eight months during which another major retailer might have been signed and delivered.

But those insiders feel that Decelle is not a ghost. Decelle is coming, they still believe. Just be a little more patient.

A FAMILIAR POLITICAL name—McCauley—could be back on the Quincy city election ballot next year. No, not Frank. But, Sandra. She's reportedly giving thought to running for the School Committee.

SANDRA

The former First Lady is a member of the Thomas Crane Library Board of Trustees, a former trustee of the Quincy Historical Society, and mother of five children who went through the Quincy school system.

FORMER SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN Charles Sweeney, you would have to say, is a romantic at heart.

Sweeney was one of 87 applicants for the new Quincy College Board of Trustees, and was on hand to give a presentation to the appointing council last week. He came down from New Hampshire where he was vacationing.

One applicant confided to the appointing council that she was interrupting her honeymoon to be on hand to give her two-minute profile presentation.

Sweeney was the next to speak and School Committee Vice Chairman Dan Raymond, a member of the appointing council and an old acquaintance mused: "Charlie, you didn't interrupt your honeymoon too, did you?"

"No sir!" replied Sweeney. "I went on my honeymoon 53 years ago and I am not back yet," sending a ripple of laughter through the audience.

His wife, Betty, got a kick out of the comment. Incidentally, Charlie will be 78 Sept. 12. A young 78. During that New Hampshire vacation, he climbed Mount Washington and canoed (with Betty manning one of the oars) down the Sacco River. In the winter he's up there skiing.

(Personally, I thought that Charlie, with his background and long-ties to Quincy College, would have been one of those appointed to the new board. But, be sure, he will keep his interest in that school.)

Quincy Savings Bank Demonstrates Strong Commitment

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Recently, the State Treasurer's office made available for deposit $3.272 million in state funds to Quincy Savings Bank, one of 40 Massachusetts banks that have demonstrated a strong commitment to meeting the banking and credit needs of their local communities.

These deposits recognize the exemplary records of banks with outstanding community reinvestment policies and make more money available for small business loans, home mortgage loans and for community development projects in the areas that need it most. I cannot think of a more direct efficient way to stimulate job creation and a better quality of life for all our citizens.

Approximately $125 million was distributed to banks statewide under the program. This is a prime example of how the lives of Massachusetts citizens can be improved without spending a dime of taxpayers' money, but by creatively investing monies under the control of the treasurer's office. We're happy to be meeting the need for access to capital in Quincy and communities throughout Massachusetts.

Looking Forward To Shopping At Granite Crossing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am very impressed with the time and effort the City Council and other town boards are putting into the Granite Crossing project. The final result will be a positive one for the City of Quincy. Doing it right and making sure everything is done according to the rules is only the fair way to bring business into town. The developer of this project has been extremely cooperative and the end product will be a shopping center both he and Quincy will be proud of.

I am really looking forward to shopping there. It will be terrific to be able to shop right here in

Quincy and not have to go to Braintree. I have been very interested in the idea of shopping dollars staying in the city. If we shop here, the money we spend goes to pay the costs of the business, taxes, lights, fuel, etc. and it goes to pay wages. If Quincy people work there, those wages will go back into the Quincy economy. We really do gain a lot by providing jobs in the city for our residents. Congratulations to the City Council on a job well done, so far. Now, we await your positive vote on this very good Quincy project.

Urges No Vote On Questions 6, 7

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This November, two related tax measures will appear on the statewide ballot—Questions 6 and 7. These so-called "graduated income tax" measures are sponsored by the state's big government employee unions and their lobbyists, who have an unbroken record of pushing for tax increases. Now they want voters to believe that Questions 6 and 7 would reduce state income taxes for most taxpayers, claiming that their tax measures would only hurt the "rich."

The promoters' claims sound too good to be true because they are. They're the bait for a costly tax trap.

The trap is that voter approval of Questions 6 and 7 would change our state constitution to give the Legislature permanent, unlimited powers to increase state income taxes on everyone, and impose new tax penalties on many taxpayers.

The "NO on 6 & 7 Committee"—one of the largest coalitions ever formed in Massachusetts to oppose a ballot question—represents and includes individual taxpayers from all walks of life and over 15,000 companies employing more than one million Massachusetts residents. We believe that once Massachusetts voters get the facts, they will vote "no" on Questions 6 and 7. These small business employers, academics, civic leaders, businesses, economists and associations want

Massachusetts voters to know that Questions 6 and 7 would:

- give the legislature a "blank check" to raise our taxes—with no limit on how many tax brackets are created or how high tax rates could go;
- create a "marriage penalty" on working couples;
- discourage job-creating investment in Massachusetts by increasing the tax rate on small business owners and investors by up to 65 percent and;
- open the door for cities, towns, counties and water and sewer districts to levy local taxes on top of state taxes.

We invite all Massachusetts voters to join us in defeating the tax trap. To get more information or to become a member, call or write us at the "NO on 6 & 7 Committee", P.O. Box 2217, Boston, MA 02107, 617-523-3995.

New Delivery Room At Quincy Hospital

By PAUL D. HAROLD

The old delivery room at Quincy City Hospital, in which 50,000 babies were delivered was closed this week. A new air conditioned quarters on the second floor of the new building was opened with little fanfare.

Mrs. Albert Regele of North Quincy was the last mother to be delivered in the old facility.

The new area boasted four tables and four separate delivery rooms, six labor rooms and a six bed recovery room. When funds became available, the old facility would be converted to a nursery and formulary room.

Jacqueline Bradford In DOE High School Honors Program

Jacqueline Bradford of Quincy recently participated in the Department of Energy's (DOE) Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL) seventh annual DOE High School Honors Program in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Bradford, a student at North Quincy High School, was one of 57 students from 48 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, France, Germany, Italy, Mexico and Northern Ireland who participated in the program.

The program provides a summer research experience for upcoming high school juniors and seniors and college freshmen who exhibit outstanding academic records. Each state and participating foreign country selects one student to send to ORNL for a two-week research experience in the Environmental Sciences Division.

Bradford researched ozone depletion and global warming, specifically the application of sustainable development principles. Students reviewed information on global warming and ozone depletion, and possible solutions to the problem.

The focus of the honors program is on small group, "hands-on" laboratory and field research to encourage students to pursue careers in math and science, especially the environmental sciences disciplines.

New College Board To Begin Search For President

mony of the 13 trustees is the board's first priority, but added that the position of president is an issue that will be quickly addressed.

"We have to resolve, in a short term, the position of presidency," he said. The new trustees have not yet discussed whether Young will be kept permanently or if a replacement will be found, he added.

Fabrizio expressed similar sentiments.

"It's (the presidency) one of the board's top priorities," said Fabrizio.

Raymond said among the board's other immediate concerns are the establishment of policies and subcommittees, the possible conversion of Quincy College from a two-year school to a four-year school, and space needs at the college.

A third board member, School Committeeman Ronald Mariano, agreed that the presidency is the new board's top priority.

"That's the first thing (the board must do), because you need the leader," he said. "We have to find the person who's going to take the college ahead into the year 2000."

Mariano also expressed optimism about the possibility of increasing the school's curriculum from two to four years.

"I think we have a very progressive board that will examine all avenues of making the college into a four-year school," said Mariano.

Quincy College had previously been run by the School Committee, but a governance change was made necessary after the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) ruled that a new governing board of trustees had to be established.

NEASC officials said the college had outgrown its governance by the city's School Committee and needed to form a new board of trustees in order to fall in line with other colleges of comparable size. If no governance change were implemented, Quincy College faced losing its accreditation.

Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a 13-member college board of trustees was passed earlier this year by the City Council and subsequently approved by the state Legislature and Gov. William Weld.

The petition called for a School Committee member and a city councillor to be two members of the new board. Those honors went to Mariano, who also serves as a state representative and Fabrizio, who is employed as a social worker.

The other 11 members were selected last week by a five-man appointing council consisting of Raymond, Fabrizio, Mariano, City Council President Michael Cheney and college trustee Richard J. Hart Jr.

Raymond, an attorney in private practice in Quincy who lives at 88 Elm St., was one of the 11 chosen to represent the private sector. Hart, who lives in Hingham and serves as chief financial officer of Kinetic Rehabilitation Instruments in Hanover, was also selected.

Raymond and Hart had applied for positions on the board but did not nominate or vote for themselves when it came time for the appointing council to choose the board members. The other nine selected were:

•John A. Farmer of 72 Myopia Rd., a vice president at Quincy Savings Bank who has worked in the banking industry for 30 years.

•Geraldine J. Lewis of 22 Gardiner Rd., a registered nurse at the ambulatory surgical center at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

•Theresa M. Lord of 72 Brunswick St., an attorney with the law office of Thomas F. Williams in Quincy. Lord attended Quincy Junior College before it became Quincy College.

•Phillip J. McCue of Cohasset, an attorney and first assistant clerk magistrate at Dedham District Court as well as a Quincy College graduate. One of the home-rule petition's stipulations called for at least one member of the board to be a graduate of the college.

•Matthew J. McDonnell of 121 Shore Ave., an attorney in private practice in Quincy who serves on a number of community groups.

•John J. McKenna of 75 Thornton St., a controller with Riley and Rielly Insurance in Quincy who has experience in finance, data processing, auditing and accounting.

•Joseph A. Nicastro of 45 Edison St., a real estate broker who has taught in the Quincy Public Schools and served an assistant superintendent at King Philip Regional School District in Wrentham.

•Peter O'Neill of 64 Willard St., an attorney in private practice in Quincy who possesses a background in labor law and has worked with Local 254, Service Employees International Union.

•Rev. Michael Wayne Walker of Brockton, administrative minister at Messiah Baptist Church in Brockton.

Farmer said his interest in the board of trustees was two-fold: he felt the board needed someone with a strong financial background, and he wanted to give something back to Quincy after living in the city for 28 years.

He also noted that he was very impressed with the new board after the selections were made.

"It's diversified, it's apolitical, and it seems to be a nice variety of backgrounds," said Farmer.

Eighty-seven people had applied for positions on the board of trustees, although the number dropped slightly after the Quincy city solicitor's office ruled that Quincy College employees and full-time municipal employees cannot serve on the board because of possible conflict of interest reasons.

Only 50 of the 87 applicants gave voluntary two-minute presentations before the appointing council on the evening before the selections were made, but no one was disqualified for not submitting a presentation.

As decreed in the home-rule petition, the terms of the new board members are staggered. All trustees may be re-appointed once, but none may serve more than two consecutive terms, regardless of the length of his or her first term.

According to School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Fabrizio, Mariano, McCue, McDonnell and McKenna will serve two-year terms; Farmer, Hart and Lewis will serve four-year terms and Lord, Nicastro, O'Neill and Raymond will serve six-year terms.

In addition, there is still another opportunity for those applicants who were not appointed to the board to become involved in the college. Fabrizio made a motion last week that was approved by the five-man appointing council for the establishment of a new Quincy College Foundation Board. The board of trustees will address the matter at its first scheduled meeting.

Fabrizio said the function of the foundation board will be similar to that of the college's original board of trustees that Hart served on: fund-raising and serving the college's governing board in an advisory capacity. He added that no limit has been set for the number of foundation board members and that the names of candidates will be taken from the list of applicants who were not appointed to the board of trustees.

“Quincy could do well having Wal-Mart
around.”

Lisa M. Giuffre, Quincy, Mass

It wasn't all that long ago that Quincy had a thriving retail district. People were working and shopping right here where they lived, and the whole city was prospering. With the proposed new Wal-Mart at Granite Crossing, that pleasant memory could also be our bright future.

A new Wal-Mart in Quincy would help fuel the economy and revitalize our entire community. Quincy shoppers would stay in Quincy to take advantage of Wal-Mart's low prices, great selection and exceptional service. Not only that, but a fully developed Granite Crossing would generate over a half-million dollars in new real estate taxes.

And then there are the jobs. Two hundred construction jobs. Five hundred new permanent jobs, about two hundred of them at Wal-Mart. And 70% of those will be quality, full-time jobs with benefits and profit sharing eligibility that provide an excellent opportunity for career advancement.

Put it all together and you have an opportunity that Quincy simply cannot afford to pass up. Support the development at Granite Crossing.

And Wal-Mart. Always a good neighbor.

YOUR NAME WILL GO DOWN IN HISTORY

The City of Quincy is expanding the brick plaza and "Walk of Names" at Constitution Common...located at the entrance to City Hall. For a limited time, you can guarantee that your name...or the name of someone you love...will go down in history. And you'll help improve everyone's Downtown.

Over 3,000 individuals, businesses and organizations have already donated to the "Walk of Names"...and their engraved bricks have become part of Quincy's history.

Phase 2 of the project is now underway. For each $50 donation, a brick will be engraved and included in the design of the walkways. Each personalized brick comes with a special certificate for you to frame or present as a gift.

To place your brick order, call or pick up an order form at City Hall.

376-3676

Quantity is limited. Bricks dedicated on a first come, first served basis. Each $50 donation includes one brick engraved with 2 lines, each 15 characters long. A third line may be added for an additional $20. Ask about purchasing groupings of bricks.

MWRA Work Could Cause Rusty Water

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) Waterworks Division is exercising main live valves and replacing air valves Sept. 6-12.

The work may cause discolored water, which could last up to one week after the project is completed, in the following areas:

- Adams St. at Beale St.
 - Beale St. at Summit Ave.
 - Furnace Brook Parkway at Copeland St.
 - West Squantum St. at Amsterdam Ave.
- Residents living in those areas should draw a few gallons before the water is affected and/or hold off from doing laundry.

"Rusty water does not create a health hazard," said MWRA Waterworks Division Director William Brutsch. "We hope that people will be patient with us as we try to improve our water delivery system."

Raymer: 'I Feel We'll Be Competitive'

Presidents Considered Strong Contenders

By KERRY BYRNE

"I think it's safe to say we'll run the ball this season," said Quincy High offensive coordinator Bob Noble in typical deadpan fashion.

The reason for his assessment? - he and 11th-year head coach Jack Raymer will field one of the most physically imposing lineups in recent memory. Add to that an offensive line which returns four starters and the ground game is a sure bet for the Presidents.

Six-foot, 225-pound senior tailback Sam Brown will be the main man in the 3-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust Quincy game plan. He will benefit from a forward wall which averages nearly 250 pounds per man. Senior tackles Butch Palazza (280 pounds) and Jeff Burrell (280), senior guard Mike Feeley (240) and junior guard Peter Kolson (200) are the returning linemen from last year's 7-3 squad. Senior Matt Strauchon will anchor the line at center.

Senior Jason Bennett or junior Bill Dunn, both defensive starters last year, are fighting for the fullback job.

If Brown can overcome the bumps and bruises that hampered him through double-sessions the Quincy ground game will be difficult to contain.

A promising offense has led others to point to Quincy as a contender for the Old Colony League title. But if a sense of confidence permeates the Quincy camp, Raymer isn't talking. "I feel we'll be competitive," is all he said in regard to his expectations this season. According to the coach, all is not bright for the Presidents. His team will run the ball out of necessity as well as desire. "We have some holes to fill," said Raymer. "People are pointing to us as the team to beat but I don't think they realize some of the things we have to do."

The Presidents lost several key skill people last season, namely starting quarterback Mike Bartlett and virtually the entire receiving corps. To coach Raymer, known as the Riverboat Gambler because of his preference for flamboyant offense, this could be a problem.

Bidding for the QB spot this season are junior Terry Bowman, a converted wide receiver best remembered for the juggling circus catch he made late in last year's 14-7 Turkey Day loss to North Quincy, and sophomore Mark Glynn.

Bowman is a fleet-footed and dangerous runner who could prove frustrating to opposing defenses; especially as a counterweight to the punishing runs of Brown. Bowman was the prime candidate for the job during the off-season but underwent arthroscopic surgery two weeks before practice started, which opened the door for Glynn. The sophomore led the first-team offense during Quincy's first scrimmage against Newton North.

Glynn is a top-notch athlete but definitely inexperienced. In fact, no Quincy quarterback has ever taken a snap in a varsity contest. One advantage to Glynn winning the job is that it would allow Bowman to utilize his speed at wideout, where he would likely be the team's top receiver.

Seniors Chris McArdle, Wilkins Jeanty and Matt Miller, and junior Mike Sheffer could also be superior receivers, regardless of Bowman's place on the field. These speedsters will keep defenses from stacking the middle.

"When the opportunity presents itself we'll pass the ball, but we certainly would like to establish the run first," said Noble.

The tight end spot will be filled by Mike Flagg, Martin Cloonan (both seniors) or gangly sophomore Tom McIntyre.

Experience and size on the line also define Quincy on the other side of the ball. Said defensive coordinator Bob Keuther: "We'll definitely be strong up front but we have a completely new secondary. We'll have to depend on the front line to play well early in the season while our linebackers and secondary mature."

Last season Quincy possessed a defense that was at times dominant. Their five game win streak going into Thanksgiving was highlighted by three consecutive shutouts. One of the main reasons a secondary which made 13 interceptions during the season. Unfortunately for Quincy, those responsible for the INTs are gone. Likely to start on the revamped secondary are McArdle, Sheffer, Miller and senior Greg Santoro. Bowman, Glynn, Jeanty and senior Gino Cardona may also see time in the defensive backfield.

Palazza, Feeley, Flagg and Jay Fennelly will provide the beef on the line in Quincy's 4-3 defensive alignment. Strauchon, John Moss, Jake Drohan, Matt Goguen and Josh Ayoub may also play up front.

Dunn, Bennett and senior Ed Anderson will be the big-play men at linebacker. Cloonan, Kolson and sophomore Jon Ryan are other potential heavy-hitters at LB.

Bennett, Brown, Burrell, Feeley and Palazza will captain the Quincy squad this season.

The Presidents open the season Saturday, Sept. 17 at Marshfield. Their first home game and first Old Colony League contest is Sept. 23 against Bridgewater-Raynham.

Said Raymer of the ever-tough OCL, "this is the most balanced year I've ever seen in the league. The title could be taken by any of a number of teams."

Quincy's schedule features one major change this season. Gone is Matignon, a team they crushed 36-6 last season. In their place is defending Div. IB Super Bowl champion New Bedford.

New Bedford will bring running back JoJo Goodine to the game at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the young man who led all scorers in Div. I football last season. Quincy has the potential to enter that game undefeated. That date, Oct. 14, could shape up as one of the key games in eastern Mass.

Quincy High Honors Baseball Players

The Quincy High School baseball team held its annual banquet and honored the seniors and other players who led the club to their first tournament berth in six years.

The Presidents were eliminated from the tournament with a 4-3 loss to New Bedford. The Whalers went on to win the state title.

Joe Biagini was honored as the Most Improved Player on the varsity squad. The junior-to-be started in right field and proved one of the team's most capable hitters. The Pride Award was given to seniors Jon Gangi and Steve Miller. Gangi was the club's No. 1 backstop. Miller played second base, shortstop and pitched. Tom Malvesti was honored as the Top Hitter. Malvesti will play baseball at Stonehill College next season and will be one of the top returning ball players on the Morrisette American Legion team.

Junior Shaun Kivlin was given the Bob Brill Memorial Award as Quincy's top pitcher. The award was presented by Joe Brill in honor of his brother Bob, who had an outstanding career at Quincy High and played pro ball before succumbing to cancer.

Bob Brill Scholarship Awards were given to Miller and Malvesti to help them as they begin their college careers this fall.

Other seniors honored were Mike Caporale, Chris Cotter, Jason Dalrymple, Pat Donovan, Tim Messing and Jim Menz.

Coach Bob Sylvia spoke highly of the effort and work ethic of the departing group. "I personally think this group overachieved. It's certainly something special in sports when a team is able to play above and beyond what was expected of them."

Quincy Public Schools Athletic Director Bill

Walker also had words of praise for the Presidents. "There is something about this sport. Something about it that takes to win. You took the state champions to the wire - that was a good team, maybe a great team. History will determine that. You should be very proud of that accomplishment."

Quincy High's future stars were also honored for their performances last season.

Among the junior varsity squad, John Duffy was picked as the Most Improved Player. Chad Feetham was the Best Pitcher and Billy Marchone received the Pride Award. Mike Russo, a freshman, was honored as the Best Hitter after batting nearly .500 for the season.

On the freshman list of award winners were Bobby Walsh (Most Improved), Mike Travers (Best Pitcher), Mark Glynn (Best Hitter) and Greg McGrath (Pride Award).

New Pool Schedule Begins Sept. 12

The Quincy Recreation Department's new schedule for recreational swims at the Lincoln-Hancock Community Pool for the fall/winter season will begin Monday, Sept. 12.

The pool will be closed to recreational swims until then to allow the school swim program time for its activities.

The new schedule beginning Sept. 12 is as follows:

•Family Swim: Monday through Friday, 6 to 6:50 p.m.; Sunday, 2 to 2:50 p.m.

•Youth Swim (Ages 6-18): Sunday, 1 to 1:50 p.m.

•Adult Swim: Monday through Friday, 8 to 8:50 p.m.; Sunday, 4 to 4:50 p.m.

•Senior Citizens: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 7 to 7:50 p.m.; Sunday, 3 to 3:50 p.m.

Ski-Conditioning Program Starts Sept. 20

The South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy, will start a ski-conditioning program Tuesday, Sept. 20. Classes will be held Tuesday and Thursdays from 7 to 8 p.m. with an optional workout on Saturday. Registration is underway.

McPhee: 'We'll Play For League Title'

Raiders' Success Depends On First-Line Team

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High School football team, which finished 6-4 last season, hopes to improve on that record this year under 13th-year head coach Ken McPhee (69-49-2).

Despite losing 25 players to graduation from last year's squad, McPhee said he believes this year's football edition can compete for the Old Colony League title.

"We're going to play for the league title," McPhee said in a recent interview. "Every year we play as good as we can be. Our offense should be okay and we don't want to make many mistakes on offense. I think our defense will be pretty good."

The Raiders schedule will not make the going any easier. Six of their 10 games are on visiting turf. "With six away games, it doesn't help to be on the road so much," the coach said.

McPhee hopes to pick up where last season ended. After a 1-4 start, North won their last five games, including their third straight victory over cross-city rival Quincy.

KEN MCPHEE

To do that, however, McPhee must fill the void created by the graduation loss of three team leaders: quarterback Dan Duncan, wide receiver George Wirtz and tight-end Brian Rafferty who will suit up for Rutgers University on a scholarship this fall.

McPhee is confident that these gaps can be filled before the Raiders travel to Stoughton Friday, Sept. 16 for the season opener.

One of the keys to the Raiders success depends on the offensive line.

McPhee is hoping the offense will improve as they develop experience during the season. He's looking for the defense to come through as well.

"Depth is our problem," said coach McPhee. "You gain depth as the season goes on, but not right now, our first line kids are doing a pretty good job."

One of North's big strengths will be in the backfield where senior co-captain Shawn Nee, who led the team with 1,175 rushing yards and nine touchdowns last season, will start at fullback. Other fullbacks to see action will be seniors Glenn Peterson and Tim Zaniboni. Senior Derek Epps will see action at running back and the wide receivers will be seniors Jerry Fernandez, Toby Odom, Epps and Nee.

Getting the starting nod at quarterback will be senior Sean Dolbear, who led the Jayvee team to an impressive 9-1 record last year. "Dolbear possesses a very strong arm," McPhee noted. "But his offensive line will be very inexperienced."

Other quarterback hopefuls are seniors Keith Martinson and Brendon Walsh, junior Jimmy Rendle and sophomore Tim Semchenko.

The offensive line is shaping up with seniors Ricky Maceira and Neil Kiley at tackle along with senior co-captain Dave Carney, and fellow classmates Joe Renzi, Matt Hourin and Bob Ragusa at guard.

Senior Dan Reynolds will likely see most of the action at center.

A lot of players will see action both ways with Maceira and Kiley at defensive tackle. Seniors Martinson and Mike Coner are expected to see action at defensive end.

Ragusa will play at nose guard and the safeties will be Peterson, Fernandez and senior Ken Burke.

Also on defense, Carney and Zaniboni will play linebacker and Odom will play defensive back.

McPhee pointed out that sophomores Brian Walsh and Tom Caughlin would see some varsity action this season.

After traveling to Stoughton, North will open its OCL campaign Sept. 23 at Falmouth. North's first home game is scheduled for Friday, Sept. 30 against Plymouth North.

North will host three other home games at Veterans' Memorial Stadium versus Barnstable, Silver Lake and Quincy. Rounding out the schedule are visits to Weymouth, Don Bosco, Bridgewater-Raynham and Taunton.

McPhee said he expects tough battles from league favorites Barnstable, Bridgewater-Raynham and Quincy, whom the coach called the largest Presidents team he's seen in many years.

This year's assistant coaches are defensive coordinator Earl Metzler, line coach Peter Chrisom Jr., backfield coach Tom Carter, freshmen coach Dick Meyer and assistant coaches Frank Strazzula and Jerry Meyer.

Mark Kelleher, Sean Glennon and local legend Pete Zoia, captain of the 1935 Red Raider team, are back as volunteer assistants. Greg Wilson joins the staff as a volunteer quarterback coach.

Also working with the program this year are Chris Dolan as videotape coordinator, Joe Ruscio as equipment manager and Jackie Ruce as athletic trainer.

Over 300 Registered For Degan Memorial Race

The second annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will take place Sunday, Sept. 18 at 10 a.m.

The race is held in honor of Degan, a former Quincy resident and deputy in the United States Marshal Service killed in the line of duty in Aug. 1992.

The 10K road race begins and ends at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Also featured will be a 5K run/fun walk for those not up to the 10K challenge.

Over 300 runners are already registered and law enforcement officials and military personnel from around the nation will participate. Race officials anticipate over 1,500 runners will take part.

Mayor James Sheets

will start the race and Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci have expressed a desire to participate.

According to race chairperson Karen Degan, William felt very strongly about drug abuse, education, sports and the community, therefore the beneficiaries of this year's race will be the Quincy DARE program and the U.S. Marine Corps Charities.

Free refreshments will be provided and a raffle will be held for all participants and their families.

Other family activities will also be held.

People interested in racing or helping with the event can contact a committee member at 499-7993.

HIGH BRAKE PEDAL EFFORT

If it requires greater than normal force upon the brake pedal to stop a car, the problem may rest with the brake pads or shoes. If the added exertion during braking only occurs after the car is forcefully and repeatedly braked, the symptom may be due to brake overheating and fading (a loss of braking efficiency due to excessive heat). The brakes or pads should be checked and replaced as needed. If discs or drums develop blue-spotting due to overheating, their replacement is also required. In the event that excessive force is always required to brake the car, the power brake booster may have failed or a vacuum hose leading to it may have broken. If a vacuum hose is at roughly. HINT: Some cars equipped with anti-lock brakes use a hydraulic power brake booster instead of a vacuum-operated booster. LEO & WALT'S SUNCOCO would like to remind you that our technicians here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) look forward to the challenge of giving your car the same level of personal attention they give their own. Whether you need to have your brakes checked or extensive work done on them, make us your first stop. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Suncoco and most major credit cards honored.

Under 12 Girls will play at Bishops Field in Mountclair. The teams are Flavin & Flavin, Morrill Real Estate, Fire Extinguisher Service Company, Sweeney Funeral Services, T.P. McDonald Insurance and J&T Contractors.

Under 14 Boys will play Saturday nights at Kincaide Field 1. The teams are Brewster Ambulance Service, AFSCME Local 1489, Harry's Pizza & Seafood, Remax Top Performers, Quincy Elks and Hohmann Oil.

Under 14 Girls will play Saturday nights at Kincaide Field 2. The teams are Flower Loft, Deware Funeral Home, Quincy Savings Bank, The Labor Guild, That's Italian and The Ink Spot.

Cross Country

Hennessy Not Sure About Girls' Prospects

North Quincy High cross country coach Geoff Hennessy is not sure what to expect from his girls as he enters the new season.

Last year the North girls went 7-1 in dual meets and tied for the Old Colony League title, but graduation stole some of the top runners from that team.

"It's too soon to say how we'll do," said coach Hennessy. "We could be .500. We lost some very good people and the OCL is clearly the toughest league in the state."

Gone are Erin Duggan, Mel Gaziano, Kate McNamara and Christy Herman, but returning lettermen Laura Blaikie (senior), Kelly Duggan (junior) and Erica Doherty (junior) hope to fill the void; Hennessy is confident in their abilities because each has all-state experience.

Among the other athletes to watch this year are senior Ursula Feurtado, juniors Colleen Cotter and Kathy Jordan, and sophomores Diane McGunigle, Diane Jordan and Amy Drysdale.

"The development of our younger kids is key, and we have a huge sophomore group. Someone is going to break through for us," said Hennessy.

Other girls who will help the Red Raiders are senior Danielle Rinella, sophomores Vivian Chan, Carrie Jarvie, Rebecca Jordan, Amanda Hunter and Lauren Molloy, and freshmen Linda Chen, Jasmine Gonzalez, Diane Yu, Kristen Keohane and Laurie Flynn.

North Quincy begins their OCL dual meet schedule Thursday, Sept. 22 at 3:30 p.m. against Plymouth South at Pageant Field.

They had warm-up runs in Cambridge and Walpole this past weekend and will tune further with races in Boston and Norwell.

No Seniors On North Boys' Team

The North Quincy boys' cross country team faces one glaring weakness as they enter the new season: they are without a senior.

Last year the North boys went 0-8 in Old Colony League meets but coach Geoff Hennessy hopes individual improvement and accomplishments will inspire the team this year as the athletes mature.

"We can only improve over last year," said Hennessy. "We have no seniors so our three lettermen will have to provide the leadership."

Those three he will be counting on are Terrence

Roche, Steve Cannon and Brian O'Donnell, all juniors.

"O'Donnell had a great spring so I hope he can carry that over to this fall," said the coach.

Among the athletes to watch this season are junior Kevin McCue and sophomores Billy Graney, Greg Burke, Jimmy Wan and Peter Connolly.

Junior Andy Myers and sophomores Ted McGillicuddy and Billy Nelson will also be counted on by Hennessy.

The boys boast a promising group of freshmen: Chris Duffy, Brian Frazee, Mike Devin, Joe Linskey, Jason Newhall and Billy La. "Devin and Linskey both look sharp so far," said Hennessy.

If there is a ray of hope for the boys this year, it is the knowledge that they will all be back in 1995 with a year of experience under their belt.

North Quincy begins their OCL dual meet schedule Thursday, Sept. 22 at 3:30 p.m. against Plymouth South at Pageant Field.

They had warm-up runs in Cambridge and Walpole this past weekend and will tune further with races in Boston and Norwell.

Quincy's Nichol Co-Captain At Holy Cross

When the Holy Cross Crusaders football team takes the field Saturday against Army at West Point, senior center Chris Nichol of Quincy will be leading the way.

During spring practice the 6-foot-2-inch, 260-pound Houghs Neck resident was picked by his teammates to captain the Div. 1-AA team.

"It's a great honor," said

CHRIS NICHOL

Nichol from his dorm in Worcester. "But it carries a lot of responsibility. All the seniors have responsibility but as captains we (he and fellow co-captain Pat Smith) have to be really outgoing; work hard to keep the team up."

Nichol will have his work cut out for him following Holy Cross' 3-8 campaign last season.

"Everybody came to practice in good shape and with a positive attitude this season. I think we'll do better than last year," he said.

That attitude has a lot to do with the fact that Holy Cross ended the season with consecutive wins over Colgate and Fordham, wins in which Nichol played a significant role. Nichol was riding the pine when the Crusaders opened with a 1-6 record, but he took over the center job with four games remaining. With the new center calling the blocking assignments Holy Cross was able to post their three highest point totals of the season in the final three games.

Nichol's role should not be diminished: In coach Peter Vaas' Power-I offense, it is up to the offensive line to control the game, and it is up to the center to control the offensive line. (Coach Vaas, by the way, worked under Lou Holtz at Notre Dame before taking the HC job.)

Nichol began his football career in the Quincy Youth Football League as a member of the Houghs Neck Manets before going on to star at Boston College High School. It was as an offensive tackle at B.C. High that he began carving his bulky frame. He grew to 270 pounds by his senior year, a size which caught the eye of former Holy Cross coach Mark Duffner who eagerly sought out Nichol.

"I put in a lot of work with the weights in high school," said the 20-year-old. "I put on about 90 pounds from freshmen to senior year. In college I got more into running."

The work has certainly paid off. And it's been noticed. Offensive line coach Chris Doyle (who also grew up in Quincy) calls Nichol "one of the strongest Crusaders. He has a great work ethic and is constantly improving."

Realizing that his future lies with his brains and not his biceps, Nichol is also working hard in the classroom.

"This school is very competitive athletically but there's the type of kid here who doesn't just get in on his athletics. You have to be a student too," he said.

Nichol will graduate in the spring with an English degree.

"I think I'll try to go the law school route afterwards," he said.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

I'm a junkie. A football junkie.
I can't get enough. Football, football, football. Get me more football!

The only problem with football is that it's only played one day a week. Actually, football teams play only one game a week, but it can be watched almost any day. Thursday there's a college game on ESPN. Friday is high school football night. Saturday is college, Sunday the pros. Then we have Monday Night Football. But then come the Tuesday/Wednesday doldrums. Sorry, no football.

How bad do I have it? Bad. With no football in town this weekend I drove to Michigan to watch football. On Saturday it was Boston College against the Michigan Wolverines with 105,000 of my closest friends. On Sunday I went to the Pontiac Silverdome to watch the Detroit Lions play the Atlanta Falcons - I'm philosophically and morally opposed to football in a dome, but I had to check it out. Oh, I also watched a high school game - Madison vs. Oak Park. Madison stopped a last minute two-point conversion to preserve an 8-6 win. Great game.

Do you see what I'm getting at? I'm silly.

I like the pros, but love college, love high school. I've been to college games in five states; high school games in four; but pro games are just two.

Now the good folks here at the Sun are gonna pay me to watch football, high school football, which in my opinion blows away the pro game. No, the players aren't as big or as fast, but they're lined up across from someone who desperately wants to make them part of the earth, and it is their job to see to it that that person becomes part of the earth. For no money, no big contract, but just because they want to bury the other person.

What a sport.

Longtime scorekeeper for the Morrisette American Legion baseball team, Richard (Berger) Ryan, has marked his last K and filed his last game report.

Ryan announced his retirement at the team's banquet in late August. He spent 25 years assisting managers/good friend Ray Cattaneo. Said Ryan: "My wife said I've spent the better part of the last 25 summers with Ray. She wants to thank him for it."

Insiders believe Berger will be found roaming around Adams Field come the 1995 season.

One of the players Berger use to keep score for, Rob Kane, was awarded a varsity letter in baseball at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.

Kane was a star for Morrisette and a three-sport (baseball, basketball, football) athlete at Quincy High.

He will graduate from Trinity in 1997.

Robert Cibotti, an Archbishop Williams grad from Quincy, also received a varsity letter from Trinity College. Cibotti was a member of the outdoor track team. He will also graduate in 1997.

Quincy's David Maimoran has been named receivers coach at UMass-Boston for the 1994 season.

Maimoran was a four-year letter for the Beacons as a defensive back. He ranks second on the school's all-time interception list with 12.

Two Quincy men fulfilled a lifetime dream and raised money for good cause when they took part in the John Hancock Fantasy Day at Fenway Park to benefit The Jimmy Fund and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Steven Slattery and Jack Sullivan were two of the 108 people who stepped to the plate at Fenway and took 10 swings at the Green Monster.

Each four-person team in the event donated $5,000 for the chance to hit a longball. John Hancock added $1,000 for each ball that hit the wall and $2,000 for each home run. In all $220,000 were raised.

Girls' Softball League Registration Saturday

Quincy Youth Baseball has announced the formation of their new Quincy Girls' Softball League.

All Quincy girls 9 years old through 8th grade will be eligible to play. Registration will take place Saturday, Sept. 10 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Quincy Recreation Office, 100 Southern Artery.

League fees will be determined by registration turnout and will be announced at a later date.

Coed Aerobics At South Shore YMCA

The South Shore YMCA will offer a coed aerobic conditioning and strength training class for teens, ages 12-17, beginning Tuesday, Sept. 20.

For further information, call 479-8500. Registration is underway.

Foreign Languages Part Of Curriculum For All Seventh Graders

By LISA CONNELL

When seventh grade students throughout Quincy return to classes Sept. 7, they will be exposed to more than the usual reading, writing and arithmetic.

Instruction in French and Spanish will become a part of the regular middle school curriculum due to funds made available from the lease of Quincy College buildings.

As a result of the lease of the buildings, approved late last spring by passage of a home rule petition, monies were made available for programs at the middle school level, that had not been offered in quite some time, according to Quincy School Curriculum Director Janet DiTullio.

Other programs receiving funds are intramural sports and computer technology.

Four teachers will be designated as foreign language teachers at each of the city's four middle schools. Two of those teachers are new to the Quincy public school system.

We lost the foreign program at two different times due to funding programs, said DiTullio.

The school committee has committed to funding a permanent foreign language program for the next two years, according to DiTullio.

All middle school students will receive instruction three times a week for the entire school year. Designed to expose students to two different languages, students will study French half of the year and Spanish the remaining half.

Goals of the new seventh grade program include "gaining oral proficiency and an enthusiasm and love of [a] language," said DiTullio.

"At the end of the seventh grade, the [soon-to-be] eighth graders will select a target, or one, language to focus on. Classes will meet more frequently than three times a week," DiTullio said.

"As they enter the ninth grade, students will continue with either Spanish I, part two or French I, part two, or even try another language," she said.

At a meeting early last year of the Citywide Parents Council, DiTullio, guest speaker, also discussed an exploratory foreign language program for sixth graders. Such a program would have focused on the cultural and lifestyle aspects of a foreign culture.

This proposal was not adopted into the new curriculum.

All youngsters are part of the new education reform act, which involves a common core curriculum, said DiTullio. According to DiTullio, an objective of this act is complete fluency of a foreign language by a student.

O'Connell Purchases Quincy Inn

said he would not seek a liquor license for use at a nightclub.

City Clerk and License Board Chairman Joseph Shea expects O'Connell and Galligan to seek an innkeeper's license which will allow them to serve alcohol to their patrons only.

The serving of liquor at the present site has been ceased, according to O'Connell.

O'Connell expects to spend upwards of one million dollars over the next several months, the majority of that sum being spent within the next 90 days for renovations that will be immediately visible to passersby.

These renovations involve demolition of the A-frame roof structure and demolition of a vacant house on the property.

Rebuilding the parking lot, installing more outdoor lighting and improving the drainage in the area are also on the list of renovations.

Rehabilitation and renovation of the actual hotel rooms will be last, he said.

A pool within the complex will remain.

With the proposed renovations, O'Connell and Galligan hope the public's perception of the inn will change.

Within the last several weeks, two major changes have taken place in the North Quincy area that will change the appearance of the northern gateway of the city, said Sheets.

One is the planned reconstruction of the Newport Ave. extension and the other is the proposed Adams Inn.

Citing both projects as an incentive to look for change in that area of Quincy, Sheets said, "with $2 million dollars to fund reconstruction (from a state grant) of the Newport Ave. extension and with the Adams Inn, this is really incentive to look at traffic flow and the quality of life [in this area.] Both of these changes will create interest in the city."

Sheets and O'Connell also tied in the importance of the inn's renovation with the future commercial development of the Neponset River waterway by the Metropolitan District Commission.

O'Connell does not expect additional traffic to be a problem in the North Quincy area as an access road currently services the area around the inn. Sheets said City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon would be consulted on the matter.

As for development of future private real estate properties O'Connell would not mention specific sites, but said that as people drive through the city, some would seem obvious.

DPW Seeks Permit For Heron Beach Seawall

The Quincy Department of Public Works is seeking permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to construct 230 feet of new seawall at Heron Beach in Quincy.

The application for the federal permit was filed with the Engineers in compliance with Section 10 of the Rivers and Harbors Act of 1899 which provides federal regulation for any work in, under or over navigable waters of the United States and Section 404 of the Clean Water Act which provides for federal regulation of any discharge of dredged or fill material.

A 230-foot concrete seawall is proposed to be constructed to connect two existing sections of seawall along the beach. The existing seawall contains a short section that is offset from the main seawall and was constructed over a layer of peat. Over the years, this wall has subsided and is need of repairs.

Rather than repair the wall in place, it has been proposed to build a new wall closer to the shoreline and over more solid ground that would not be subject to settling. The proposed seawall would consist of wave breaking "C" shaped concrete blocks placed over bedding material.

The proposed wall would cause the loss of approximately 1600 square-feet of sandy intertidal substrate. The intertidal area seaward of this proposed wall contains a dense stand of salt marsh grass and the area immediately up slope of the proposed wall is vegetated.

To assist in evaluating the seawall, the Engineers are soliciting public comments. Written statements should be forwarded to their office no later than Sept. 23, 1994.

Additional information may be obtained by contacting Ted Lento at the New England Division, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 424 Trapelo Rd., Waltham, MA 02254-9149.

Posters Circulated For Missing Man

Family members of an Irish student who disappeared last June have stepped up their search for their missing relative.

On Monday, relatives of 19-year-old Patrick (P.J.) McDonagh distributed posters asking for information about his whereabouts. About 35 friends of the family also took part in the distribution.

Relatives said the posters were distributed at gas stations, train stations and bars in Quincy and Dorchester.

McDonagh disappeared June 26 while visiting his family in Boston. A friend of McDonagh's first claimed McDonagh might have fallen into a Quincy quarry but later said he dropped him off at a bar in Dorchester.

The family has also increased the reward money offered for information about McDonagh's whereabouts to $15,000.

Last Thursday, McDonagh's father, Patrick McDonagh arrived in Massachusetts from Ireland to help with the search.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We have seen a lot of changes over these last few years and sometimes the challenge to accept changes is one of the greatest issues affecting society today. The ability to accept changes can determine to a great extent, our behavior and the improvement we make in our lives. These changes which benefit us are the easiest to accept and are usually unnoticed by most people. We sometimes lack to accept these changes progress.

Sometimes it is difficult to accept changes that do not please us or that create inconveniences. To many of us, great changes, political-economic-social, are less worrisome than the small changes. Minor changes affect our daily activities, and could create stress due primarily to our inclination to magnify them. We should all have the obligation and responsibility to acknowledge and to accept changes which bring us and our country to the place we belong in this world. . .

Quincy Court, Police Officials Stunned By State Trooper's Death

John's Catholic Church in Quincy.

Rev. Peter Quinn told the crowd of about 50 people who attended the Mass on the spur of the moment that although deaths like Charbonnier's are tragic, people should not despair when such events take place.

"I think what we experience first is the power of evil, the power of sin, and we wonder how someone can even contemplate taking someone else's life," Rev. Quinn said. "There is a temptation to feel that's the final authority....We must allow the Lord to come into the midst of our pain, and He will bring healing and hope to what seems to be a tragic situation, and is a tragic situation."

Local officials, however, could only express shock and disbelief when discussing the shooting.

"He (Charbonnier) was such a wonderful, wonderful young man," Tobin said. "He was so well-loved at the court. A young man in the prime of his life, he was killed, and for what reason? It's just senseless."

Tobin said he asked that the Mass in Charbonnier's honor be said "just to let him know that he was loved."

Lawrence Falvey Jr., administrative assistant to the clerk magistrate, agreed.

"He was well-liked," said Falvey. "He was dedicated and honorable. It's a tragedy. He'll be sadly missed."

Falvey noted that Charbonnier sometimes substituted for State Trooper Ken Halloran as a prosecutor at Quincy District Court. He had also worked on a number of his own cases at the court, Falvey added.

Falvey said it was a strange feeling that he had spoken with Charbonnier the day before his death.

"Twenty-four hours ago you're chatting with him," he said, "and then this happens to him."

Other local officials who attended the Mass were equally stunned.

"I feel very bad," said Police Chief Francis Mullen. "He was a young man who, like our own people (Quincy police), was out at night protecting people. Speaking for the whole department, we extend our sympathy to his family. He was a fine trooper."

"Basically, I went to the Mass to offer my sympathy and support for someone who was very bright and who was cut down in cold blood," said Judge Warren Powers, an associate justice at the court. "That says it all in a nutshell."

Rep. Stephen Tobin, who read two Scripture passages at the Mass, was a classmate of Charbonnier's at the New England School of Law. He said Charbonnier's death is not only a reflection of today's society but a reminder that tougher laws are needed for those who commit violent crimes.

"We're losing battles to the criminals," he said. "Unless we realize that we're at war, and declare war on criminals, then more good public servants are going to lose their lives. We have to punish those who simply have no respect for law enforcement."

"When you play by the rules (like Charbonnier), the script is for a happier ending. This man deserved a happier ending. He was killed by someone who was his polar opposite, someone with no morals and no aspirations."

"Why should people care about Mark Charbonnier? Because we don't know how much of a better world it would have been if he had had kids. Who knows what kind of a lawyer he might have been? Society lost a good father and a good lawyer. All that potential is gone."

A supporter of Gov. William Weld's capital punishment bill that was narrowly defeated in July, Rep. Tobin expressed confidence that a new version of the bill calling for the deaths of those responsible for the deaths of public safety officers will be passed in the near future.

Grieving friends, relatives and comrades of Charbonnier placed dozens of flowers, articles of clothing and other personal belongings of the fallen state trooper at the site of his murder on Route 3 in Kingston. Among the items were Charbonnier's boots, a blue and white carnation state trooper flower arrangement, and a cross bearing many hand-written tributes such as "Our Best is now God's Best."

Several thousand people, including many who never knew Charbonnier but were deeply moved by his tragic passing, visited the roadside vigil over the weekend. Many more motorists traveling north and south on Route 3 slowed down near the site to view the memorial.

As thousands of law enforcement officials gathered for Charbonnier's funeral Tuesday morning, two fellow state troopers maintained the vigil at the roadside memorial while light rain fell on the green canopy covering the tribute.

The two troopers, who knew and worked with Charbonnier for four years, recalled their fallen comrade as a respected and professional police authority.

"He was everything people are saying he is," said State Trooper Kathy Stefani.

"He was the consummate state trooper," added State Trooper Richard Lauria. "In the dictionary under the words 'state trooper' they should put Mark's picture."

The funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Peter's Church in Dorchester. Charbonnier was laid to rest in Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

Charbonnier, a fourth-year law student at the New England School of Law, was due to receive his law degree in May, according to Rep. Tobin. He had been a state trooper for six years and lived in Norwell with his wife, the former Ann Marie Connolly, whom he married in April of last year.

The work under this contract consists of selective excavation, including cold planning, and regrading of existing pavement, installation of new pavement, resetting of curbs, wheelchair ramps, adjustment of utility appurtenances, loaming, seeding, storm drainage, pavement stripping and other associated works. All work shall be performed in accordance with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Highway Department Standard Specifications for Highways and Bridges and Construction Standards, as last revised, unless specified otherwise.

All work under this contract shall be completed within 60 calendar days.

A non-refundable deposit of $75.00 in cash or check payable to the City of Quincy shall be required for each set of Contract Documents.

Bidders requesting Contract Documents by mail shall also include and additional non-refundable mail fee of $15.00 in cash or check payable to the City of Quincy.

The Contract Documents may be obtained during the business hours of 8:30 AM to 4:30 PM at the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, Engineering Division, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 on or after Sept. 7, 1994.

Each bid shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total value of the bid in the form described in the Instructions to Bidders.

The Successful Bidder must furnish a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Performance Bond and a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Payment Bond with a surety company acceptable to the City.

The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 30, Section 39M, as last revised.

All Federal, State and City of Quincy regulations in relation to Minority Business Enterprise, Women's Business Enterprise, Minority Work Force, Equal Employment Opportunity, Employment of Quincy Residents and Minimum Wage Rates shall be complied with.

Goals for this project are as follows:

1. The Contractor shall maintain on this project a not less than ten percent (10%) ratio of minority employee manhours to total manhours in each job category.

2. A minimum of ten percent (10%) Minority Business Enterprise (MBE) and five percent (5%) Women's Business Enterprise participation by state-certified MBEs and WBEs will be required and maintained on this project. The bidder shall submit complete MBE/WBE forms and SOMWBA certification letter with the bid.

3. The City of Quincy's Ordinance No. 532, requiring Contractors working on City-supported construction projects to have one Quincy Resident out of every three workers on the project must be complied with.

4. The Contractor shall pay minimum wage rates to the workers, as per the latest schedule of rates, as mandated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries. The City reserves the right to waive any informality or to reject any or all bids when such an action is deemed in the best interests of the City. Non-responsive and/or unbalanced bids may be rejected.

Granite Crossing Gets Impact Report Approval

The state Secretary of Environmental Affairs has issued a certificate approving the final Environmental Impact Report (EIR) submitted by Atlantic Development of Hingham for the Granite Crossing Shopping Center.

The secretary's approval follows a seven-month review process that included participation from state agencies, city departments and local residents.

The certificate, issued Aug. 31, clears the way for the City Council to vote on Atlantic Development's plan to build the Granite Crossing Shopping Center, which would include a Wal-Mart store, near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point.

The review process included input from the Massachusetts Highway Department, the Department of Environmental Protection, the Quincy Planning Board and other city officials, and local residents including condo owners from The Falls.

The certificate, signed by Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Cox, found that the plans for Granite Crossing "adequately and properly comply with the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act." The environmental review included analysis of transportation systems, hazardous waste, storm water management, wetlands, and air quality issues and has met all necessary requirements in order to receive final approval.

"This certificate was granted because we developed appropriate mitigation plans and met all of the environmental and transportation requirements established by the state," said Atlantic Development President Donald MacKinnon. "We are committed to making the Granite Crossing Shopping Center the most successful and attractive retail development in the South Shore."

"In particular, we have made a special effort to improve traffic conditions throughout for the residents and for our future customers. Atlantic Development, working with Quincy 2000, will also fund the start-up costs for a senior shopping shuttle bus service connecting the major senior housing locations with Quincy Center and other Quincy shopping areas."

"Atlantic Development will invest more than $1 million to improve the roadways, to build a state-of-the-art computerized traffic control system that for the first time connects traffic signals in Quincy Point and the Southern Artery corridors to manage traffic flow, to ensure that none of the shopping center traffic passes by The Falls driveway, and to rebuild the intersection on East and West Howard Streets, directly benefiting future development projects such as the Fore River shipyard and the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum," added MacKinnon.

MacKinnon said the roadway improvement plan resolves existing traffic problems, accounts for growth, and has been designed to accommodate any increased traffic flow generated by the Granite Crossing Shopping Center and the projected increase in traffic flow that would be generated by future growth at the shipyard such as the opening of the shipbuilding museum.

In addition, he said, Atlantic Development will install new sidewalks, bus stops, crosswalks and bike paths to ensure safety and ease of passage for all Quincy residents.

Finneran To Speak At Chamber Breakfast

Gambling, welfare reform and the graduated income tax will be topics for discussion by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) at a South Shore Chamber of Commerce 7:44 Breakfast Tuesday, Sept. 13, at 7:44 a.m. at the Lantana in Randolph.

Finneran is expected to also touch upon legislative issues relevant to the business interests of the community. Chamber Board Chairman, Charles Simpson, Jr., chairman and CEO, Quincy Savings Bank, will introduce Finneran. A question and answer session will follow.

Finneran has been a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives since 1979. Since January, 1991, he has served as Chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means, the committee which is responsible for passing or rejecting any state legislative items subject to a budgetary process.

Tickets for Chamber members are $12 each, $110 for tables of 10, and $20 for non-members. Reservations are required. For more information, call the Chamber at 479-1111.

Cites Decelle As Reason Sheets Supports Wal-Mart

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets has officially announced his support for the proposed Granite Crossing shopping center, which would include a Wal-Mart store, near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point.

Sheets, who has stated in the past he would not support the project if it were determined it would be economically harmful to the city's downtown shopping district, said the expected arrival of Decelle in Quincy Center has put to rest any fears he had about Granite Crossing.

City officials announced last week that Decelle, a Braintree-based clothing owned by New Jersey-based Burlington Coat Factory Warehouse Corp., has sent a letter of intent to build a new store at the site of the former Child World and Cummings stores at 1469 Hancock St. A lease signing is expected next month and officials hope the store can be opened about three months after that.

"It is my belief that the presence of Decelle in Downtown Quincy will more than compensate for the loss of retail business as a result of the Wal-Mart store," Sheets said in a prepared statement. "In fact, I believe strongly that Decelle will result in an increased level retail trade well beyond the downtown's current day level.

"The issue of a Wal-Mart location, with its impact on The Falls, traffic and surrounding neighborhoods, is basically an issue for the City Council to determine. It appears to me they have done a very methodical and in-depth study of the related issues.

"Therefore, because Decelle will more than compensate for the impact of Wal-Mart on Downtown Quincy, removing a very major question in my mind, and based on the final judgement of the City Council relative to the local issues, I will support the Wal-Mart project."

One Main Local Race Tuesday Light Voter Turnout Seen

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Approximately 20 percent of Quincy's registered voters are expected to go to the polls next Tuesday and cast ballots in the state primary highlighted by two statewide contests and one local race.

In all, there are 10 contested races in the Democratic and Republican primaries Sept. 20. City Clerk Joseph Shea predicts a light voter turnout.

"I think it will be 20 to 22 percent. I hope it will be more but it doesn't look like it," Shea said.

The clerk bases his prediction largely on the face that there is a lack of local contests. The only real local race is for state senator where Democrat incumbent Michael Morrissey of Quincy is challenged by political newcomer Bernard Walsh of Braintree.

There are no Republican candidates for state senate in the Norfolk-Plymouth District which means the Morrissey-Walsh race is virtually a winner-takes-the-seat contest.

The only other race with local interest is county commissioner where four Democrats are seeking their party's nomination and the right to face Republican incumbent Bruce D. Olsen in the fall final Nov. 8.

There are 45,427 registered voters in Quincy. Of that total, 27,239 are Democrats, 11,920 are undeclared and 6,261 are Republicans.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. in Quincy. Shea said he expects local election results to be tallied by 10 p.m.

In the Democratic primary, there are seven contested races

Pat Toland: A Model Person In Life And Politics

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Patricia "Pat" Toland is being remembered by friends and colleagues as both a model politician and a model person.

Toland, 62, died last week at New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston after a long battle with cancer. Her illustrious career included, among other things, work as a teacher, a member of the Quincy School Committee and City Council, and finally as Quincy's assistant city clerk.

A number of people who knew and worked with her offered their memories of Toland, her life and career to The Quincy Sun.

Mayor James Sheets, who served with Toland on the City Council during the 1980s: "I remember Pat as a very dedicated and committed public official who cared very intensely about a number of issues, including women's issues, education and particularly beautification. And I remember clearly, she would debate these issues with other councilors, but she would always do so with a twinkle in her eye and a smile. She's written a fascinating page in the history of this city as far as women who have been elected to public office are concerned.

"She had been sick for some time, but she still showed up for work last Friday (five days before she died Sept. 7)," the mayor added. "She was an extraordinarily courageous woman and was extraordinarily resilient in the face of adversity. She lived her whole life that way."

City Clerk Joseph Shea: "I think Pat will be remembered because of her knowledge of government and her

$2 Million Marked For Quincy Roads

The State Legislature has enacted a $300 million funding package for local roadway construction.

The appropriation was included in a recently adopted capital outlay budget and will mean $2, 933, 156 for Quincy, according to Reps. Ronald Mariano, Stephen Tobin and Michael Bellotti.

"I am very pleased to be bringing these monies back to Quincy. As a result of the severe weather of this past winter, many of our roads are in need of repair. This program will not only provide safer roadways for residents, but it will also provide economical opportunity for local contractors to get some work," said Mariano.

The plan, which will provide Quincy monies for its street projects over the next two years, will be administered by the Massachusetts Highway Department.

Bellotti, Tobin and Mariano said they remain encouraged by this latest source of revenue coming back on the heels of a successful FY '95 budget session. The recently-adopted budget not only increased a record setting local aid package but also saw an increase in Councils on Aging budgets of over $2 million, a $180 million increase in monies for local schools, $40 million for water and sewer rate relief and $11 million in community policing grants.

"As one of Quincy's representatives, I have done all in my power to ensure that our community receives its fair share of state funds and more. Measures such as these highway monies enhance our infrastructure which will ready our community for future economic growth and be the 21st century," said Bellotti.

Thomas Murray Square Dedicated In Memory Of Lifelong Lawn Ave. Resident

Tom Murray, a lifelong resident of Lawn Ave. in Quincy Point, was 58 years old when he passed away last November.

To honor his memory, a group of Mr. Murray's family, close friends and neighbors recently dedicated a memorial at Avalon and Baker Avenues. The memorial, marked by a granite stone and bronze plaque with the inscription "In Memory of Tom Murray, friend to the Neighborhood," is known as Thomas Murray Square.

Members of the Tom Murray Fund Committee said the memorial is a fitting tribute to a wonderful man.

Avalon Beach neighborhood was quite different because of Tom's absence. The memorial will help keep Tom's spirit alive for years to come.

Since Tom became disabled four years ago, his enjoyment focused on Avalon Beach and weekly bingo games at his beloved St. Joseph's Church, where he attended its school, and Mass regularly.

"Tom never forgot his family," Allison said of his friend. "He talked of his parents and sisters, especially his dear deceased sister. Sister Emily Patrick and the deep gratitude he had for his brother John."

"Tom will be missed in Quincy Point, however, when we pass this memorial, we will look up and smile," Allison said. "That's the way Tom would have wanted it."

Among those attending the dedication were Edna Forrest, Jim Morgan, Adele Gormley, Gerald Sharkey, Chris Daly, John Murray (Tom's brother), Tina Morgan (Tom's cousin), City Councilor Joseph LaRaia, Bob Allison, Ron DiBella and Joyce King.

Mr. Murray was known by the entire neighborhood--from its children to senior citizens.

"You couldn't go to Avalon Beach without a crowd around the corner," said Bob Allison, a lifelong friend of Tom. Their relationship spanned many years as Tom and his mother used to babysit for the Allison family.

Clothing Chain Sends Letter Of Intent To City

Downtown Hails Coming Of Decelle

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy Center merchants are characterizing the coming of Decelle as a major boost for the city's struggling downtown shopping district.

City officials announced last week that Decelle, a Braintree-based retailer owned by Burlington Coat Factory, has signed a letter of intent to move into the three-story site of the former Child World and Cummings stores at 1469 Hancock St. A lease signing for the new store, which would employ about 75 people, is expected next month.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix, who helped negotiate the agreement, said after the lease is signed about six weeks of demolition will be necessary. D'Aprix said the store should be "up and running" in about three months.

"It's a major coup for Quincy," said D'Aprix.

Mayor James Sheets, who has worked with D'Aprix on the matter, agreed.

"I cannot overemphasize the importance of this agreement," he said. "It is the catalyst that will indeed turn downtown Quincy around."

Sheets said he is not concerned about the signing of the lease, adding that "in my opinion, it's a done deal." Neither he or D'Aprix would discuss the terms of the lease.

Quincy Center merchants said they, also, are encouraged by the news, particularly because of the possible construction of the Granite Crossing shopping center, which would include a Wal-Mart store, in Quincy Point. Some downtown business owners had expressed fears that the coming of Wal-Mart would have a disastrous economic effect on their stores.

Members of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) had the following comments:

Caryn Smith, QCBPA President and owner of Caryn's Corner: "Hopefully, Decelle will help revitalize the downtown. Maybe a larger retailer will help the smaller merchants."

Bernie Reisberg, Bernie's Formal Shop: "This is a real pick-me-upper. It will be great, and I take my hat off to the mayor. I think it will certainly start a lot of good things in the city."

Deanne Gazarian, Phase II Jewelry: "The store (Decelle) has the kind of image we want to project, and it's wonderful news. I think it will attract people from surrounding towns, and it's nothing but an asset to the downtown."

Charles Ryder, Ryder's: "I think it's wonderful. It sounds to me like a firm commitment. Let them come. We're anxious to have them here. It's the one catalyst we need to turn this whole thing around."

Joseph McArdle, Hancock Tobacco: "Everybody I've talked to is thrilled they're coming to Quincy. We've been waiting for it for quite a while. I think it will bring the people back to the (Quincy) Center."

David Brennan of Brennan's said his Quincy store has not done as well as expected during its two years in the downtown and added that he had considered vacating the site. The coming of Decelle, however, has changed his mind.

"Any business that is willing to put hundreds of thousands of dollars into Quincy Center is worth sticking around for," said Brennan. "I'm looking forward to staying in Quincy for many years to come under those circumstances."

Quincy Sun 26 Years Old

The Quincy Sun marks its 26th anniversary with this week's issue.

The Sun was founded in September, 1968 as Quincy's hometown weekly community newspaper focusing on Quincy news, features, sports, civic, social and church activities.

The Sun has won a number of awards down through the years for editorials, photos, special articles and supplements in New England Press and Massachusetts Press Associations competition.

In addition, The Sun has been designated a National Blue Ribbon Newspaper by the National Newspaper Foundation in Washington, D.C.

We at The Sun are looking forward to our 27th year which starts with next week's issue. We plan to expand our coverage in the months ahead.

As we look ahead we want to thank our faithful readers—many of whom have been with us from the very first issue—our advertisers who make it all possible and our small army of local newscasters who play a major role in bringing us to your home.

Thank you all, most sincerely.

OPTIONS FOR TREATING PROSTATE PROBLEMS

The older a man gets, the more likely he is to develop problems with his prostate, the gland situated at the base of the bladder that plays a role in semen preparation. One of the most common problems is benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH), or enlargement of the prostate gland. Symptoms may include difficulty in starting urination, a weak urine stream, the sensation that the bladder never empties completely and/or frequent urination, especially at night. Since these symptoms can also be signs of such serious conditions as prostate cancer, their presence should prompt a call to the doctor. If a diagnosis of BPH is made, treatment may involve medication, surgery, or simply monitoring the condition over time.

P.S. At least one out of every three American men over the age of 50 experience benign prostatic hyperplasia. Prostate cancer is more common than you may realize, which makes early detection all the more critical. Routine checkups are important for everyone, but especially as you get older. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer complete medical care with a focus on heart disease. We can inform you what adjustments you can make in your diet and exercise to best maintain your health. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospital.

You couldn't help but like Pat Toland. Politics can be rough and tough—sometimes, unfortunately, a little dirty.

So anyone who knew Pat must, at one time or another, have wondered why she ever decided on a political career. She just didn't look, act or sound like a politician.

But then you really knew why she got into politics: she genuinely wanted to serve her community.

And, she did it well. As a school committeewoman. As a city councillor—including two years as the first woman city council president in Quincy's history. And, as assistant city clerk, a post she held too briefly.

She got hurt and bruised in life and in politics. Disappointed, too. But never discouraged.

In politics and life she was a lady always—and in all ways. She never hurt anyone. She was never unkind. She liked people and they liked her. She was easy to like. Very easy. She was a fun person to be with and talk with over a martini.

Pat was also a fighter. She knew tragedy first hand when it invaded her family and she fought to overcome it. She knew serious illness and fought that.

She was in and out of hospitals these past few months but fought her way back to her job at City Hall. Sometimes it was a struggle to get there.

The last time she got there was Sept. 2. Then came a detour to New England Deaconess Hospital where she died—just five days later.

Her many friends, some of whom may not have realized she was losing the battle because she kept it to herself and never complained, were stunned and saddened.

Among those heavily saddened were City Councillor Chuck Phelan and Michelle Lydon. Pat was their matchmaker.

It happened at a political fundraiser for Pat on St. Patrick's Day (naturally) two years ago. Chuck and Michelle, daughter of former Councillor Jack Lydon, were there separately. Pat put them together that night by suggesting that Michelle ask Chuck to help her in her campaign to restore the Collins playground. And, she reminded Michelle, "You know, he's an eligible bachelor."

Chuck helped in the playground project and soon he and Michelle were dating.

Last Friday night, Chuck and Michelle were married at St. Ann's Church in Wollaston. Pat was among those invited. But death kept her from attending—though everyone who was there knew she was there, too, really. There was a special tribute to her and a moment of silence during the wedding ceremony.

Chuck and Michelle were married by Fr. Jack Ahearn. Ironically, and sadly, the following day, Fr. Ahearn celebrated Pat's funeral Mass, also in St. Ann's Church.

If Pat had a fault, anyone who knew her would agree it had to be tardiness. She very seldom arrived at political functions or kept appointments on time.

She became famous for it. But no one really minded. Her late arrivals became a loveable Pat Toland trademark. Half the fun of attending some of those functions was wondering how late Pat would be this time.

During political campaigns she would call The Sun to say she would be over, say, at 2 o'clock with a political ad or news release.

"You know you're not going to be here at 2 o'clock," I would tell her. "I'll definitely be there," she'd insist.

So I'd bet she wouldn't and she'd bet she would. We shared a fondness for martinis so the wager was always one good dry one.

Pat might arrive at 2 o'clock all right—but, the next day. "Something came up," she'd say. This went on each election year.

I think I lost one, or two martinis to her and won the rest.

At Pat's funeral, her long-time close friend, Alicia Coletti, probably said it for all of us in her eulogy: "Pat's death has left a hole in the world big enough to drive a truck or a whole Army through."

The funeral Mass scheduled for 10 a.m. didn't start until around 10:10 because of the long procession from the Lydon-Russell Funeral Home.

Fr. Ahearn, a longtime friend of Pat's, mused that "Pat would probably have said: 'I was even late for my own funeral.'"

Pat was only 62 when she lost her long battle to cancer Wednesday, Sept. 7.

That appointment was one we all wish she could have been late for. Many, many years late.

Ceremonial Constitution Signing At Adams Site Visitor Center

The National Park Service, Adams National Historic Site, will host a "Ceremonial Signing of the United States Constitution" Saturday at the site's Visitor Center, 1250 Hancock Street.

The event is free and open to the public.

Organized by the National Constitution Center in Philadelphia, the event provides an opportunity for visitors to celebrate the signing of the U.S. Constitution in 1787 and honor the enormous achievements of the Constitutional Convention's 55 delegates in creating a new government and set of laws for the United States.

The United States Constitution embodies the "government of laws and not of men" that John Adams, author of the Massachusetts Constitution envisioned for the nation.

Visitors may participate in the celebration by signing a reproduction of the United States Constitution. The event will last throughout the day. The Visitor Center is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Visitors are also invited to tour the Adams National Historic, which provides a unique perspective on the environment that shaped the character of America's most distinguished family of public servants.

The Adams National Historic Site was established in 1946 to commemorate the lives of second U.S. president John Adams, sixth president John Quincy Adams and their distinguished descendants. The park is open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 11.

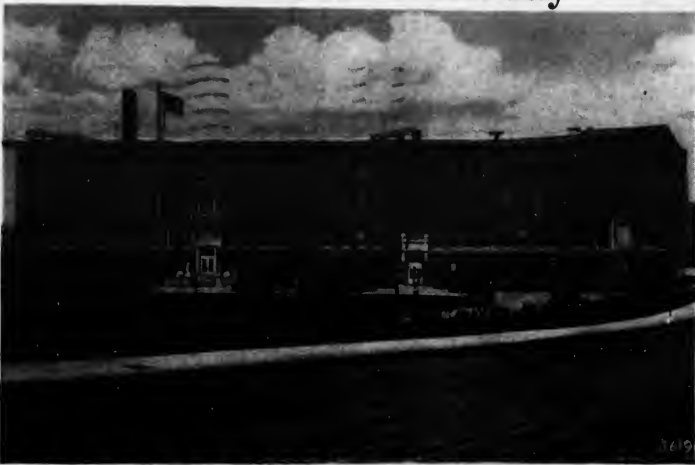

For more information call the Adams National Historic Center at 770-1175.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A postcard of the North Quincy High School sometime between 1931 when the east wing was built and 1936 when the west wing was added. The original junior high school which was the center unit of the present building was dedicated in February 1927. This school became a six year junior and senior high school with it's first high school graduating class in 1934. That arrangement continued until the Atlantic Junior High opened in the late 60's. A prominent feature of this school building was the two globes which cradled the entrance stairway. These globes disappeared when the building was refurbished several years ago. Does anyone know where the globes are today?

City Needs Mulvey, Not Inspectional Service Dept.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

What is going on with this city? The mayor wants to fire the building inspector and/or his assistants when he is in need of more help and create an inspectional service department which appears to be a department out of control in most communities that have one.

The City of Quincy is blessed to have a person of Mr. Mulvey's caliber in its employ. I have seen him in operation at License Board hearings in his roll as a commissioner, at the Zoning Board of Appeals where he advises both board members and variance applicants, and in his very cramped office dealing with the public in a job that none of us would want if we understood its responsibilities. I feel very comfortable knowing that Mr. Mulvey will always do what is right and that he truly cares for our safety and well-being. Quite frankly, with the abuse this talented and dedicated man gets from some elected officials, I do not know why he or anyone would want his job. Dedication, I guess.

The mayor's ill-conceived plan does not address the fact that the public will still have to make a trek to the Health Department on Hancock Street and the Fire Department on Quincy Avenue for some permit approvals. He should try to put all these various public safety agencies in one building as Mr. Mulvey has suggested over the years.

Then you will have one-stop shopping, but the public works building is not suitable or big enough since it has no elevator to connect both floors and if the mayor stopped in to the public works building and saw the cramped quarters of the building department, he would know he needs to rethink his off-the-hip, election-year notion.

Mr. Mulvey must have a very strong constitution to put up with this constant badgering by some elected officials who know they could ease the permitting process by changing zoning ordinance if there is no problem at all.

Mr. Mulvey, continue to protect and serve the people in Quincy as you have been these past years. I, along with many others, know you treat everyone the same, no matter what their position is. You really cleaned up the building department, and it's a department that should be respected along with your staff. A big difference from the years gone by. Politics should not run the building department.

Concerned Over Health Care Reform Gridlock

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Executive Board of the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights wishes to express its extreme concern regarding the Washington gridlock on real health-care reform and subsequent loss of focus on the essential ingredients of such reform. These essential ingredients include:

- Universal Access: all people residing within our borders and within the territories under U.S. jurisdiction, must be covered, whatever their legal status.

- Comprehensive Benefits: whatever it is necessary to preserve, restore or promote health, including immunization and other preventive measures, should be covered, and made available in the most appropriate setting.

- Provider Choice: the bond of trust between patient and provider must be preserved, whether that provider be a physician, a nurse or other professional.

- Equal Care: whether a person is rich or poor, black or white, young or old, male or female, gay or straight, employed or unemployed, speaking English or some other language, the same comprehensive range of care and provide options should be offered, in a culturally sensitive manner.

We note that the Congressional bill which comes closest to meeting these goals, the Wellstone/McDermott/Conyers single-payer bill, has the most support, yet gets the least attention. We also note, with growing alarm, the debate's excessive focus on cost containment, while health care is being precariously restructured, diluting quality, threatening patient safety and laying off numbers of dedicated workers. We strongly feel that quality, access and cost containment can and must be addressed simultaneously and swiftly.

New Registry Near Completion

By PAUL D. HAROLD

The registry building on Broad St. designed by Joseph Donahue was expected to be completed by November.

Built to replace the current building at 1089 Hancock St., it's the result of a five year study to relocate the facility. The new site for 70 years was the location of the city home.

Though it's a state agency, the building is being built by the city. The cost of $230,000 will be paid off by an annual rent of $29,350.

Motor Vehicles Registrar

Richard McLaughlin highlighted the importance of the Quincy office, noting that it is one of the busiest in the state with 3,000 transactions a week and as many as 1,000 a day during the renewal period.

BUSINESS IMPACTS QUINCY SCHOOLS

The Federal Court's bussing plan for Boston has resulted in Boston students attempting to register in the Quincy schools.

William Spencer, supervisor of attendance for Quincy schools said that an average of 14 new transfers from Boston were received daily, many of them illegitimate.

Boston School Committee Chairman John Kerrigan noted that the "militancy of a few students" is the reason Boston students are transferring to suburban schools.

This year's enrollment showed an increase of 275 students.

SHIPYARD BOOMING

With numerous ship contracts scheduled at Fore River, General Dynamics began an extensive recruitment of workers: shipyard mechanics, electricians, pipefitters, shipfitters, riggers, painters, welders, sheet metal workers and sandblasters.

G.D. boasted, "Working in Quincy is like buying yourself a piece of the future. Especially when you look at our list of contracts that reach well into the 70's sub tenders, ammo ships, LSD's and others still in blueprint stages."

LEAGUE CELEBRATES 50TH ANNIVERSARY

The Quincy League of Women Voters celebrated its 50th anniversary at a reception at the Thomas Crane Library.

The new president, Mrs. David Coletti, noted the Quincy branch started in 1941, helped found the Quincy branch.

Other league officers for the year were, Mrs. David Burns, vice president; Mrs. William Ryan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Woodley, recording secretary and Mrs. John Toland, treasurer.

Mrs. Edna Austin, now age 84, the first woman to serve on the City Council, was founding president. Other founders were Mrs. Paul Reardon, Mrs. H. Reid Ward and Miss Margaret Hanley.

Author-Journalist At Crane Library Sept. 23

Author and journalist Brian Hall will read from his most recent book, The Impossible Country, Friday, Sept. 23, at 12:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square.

His book, subtitled A Journey Through The Last Days Of Yugoslavia, chronicles his trip to that country in the spring of 1991 just as the descent into bloody civil war began.

Hall's eyewitness account mixes personal portraits of each ethnicity with historical background to establish a clear picture of each region. As he traveled, he spoke with, and lived with, Serbs, Croats and Muslims and shared their experiences. The result is that the readers will meet people with whom they can laugh, sympathize and grieve.

Brian Hall is also the author of Stealing From A Deep Place: Travels In Southeastern Europe, an engaging book about people and places. He was born and raised in Lexington and is a Harvard graduate. His vivid character sketches of the people he meets in his travels reflect his own personal dynamism.

The reading is an opportunity to learn about the Balkan crisis. The event is sponsored by publisher David Godine.

ClimbFest At Quincy Quarries Saturday

The Quincy Quarries will be the site on Saturday, Sept. 17, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for ClimbFest '94, the fifth annual rock-climbing competition co-sponsored by the Metropolitan District Commission and the Boston Chapter of the Appalachian Mountain Club.

ClimbFest '94 is a day-long competition and outdoor festival emphasizing the sport of rock-climbing. Over 100 athletes will compete for prizes at the most popular rock-climbing site in the Boston area.

The competition is open to all climbers, from novices to experts.

Registration for climbing contests begins on Saturday at 7:30 a.m. Cost is $22. There is no admission for spectators.

Activities scheduled for the outdoor festival include park ranger-led tours of the granite quarries, live animals from the Trillside Museum and a chance to climb the "Treadwall," a free-standing climbing wall open to the public.

Proceeds from the events will be directed toward improvements at the Quincy Quarries Historic Site.

For more information, including directions, call 698-1802.

Kathleen Sheehy Receives VA Scholarship

Kathleen Sheehy, 62 John St., Quincy, a student at Tufts University's Boston School of Occupational Therapy, has received a scholarship from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

About 3,000 graduate students enrolled in a college or university health-sciences program applied to the VA for a tax-free scholarship, typically averaging $10,000, which covers tuition, fees and a monthly stipend. Only 350 scholarships were awarded after a review process that the VA describes as highly competitive.

Miss Sheehy is working toward a master's degree in occupational therapy, which the VA considers to be a health-care specialization with practitioners in short supply.

Downtown Hails Decelle

Joanne Falco, Great Cuts: "I think it's a positive thing. Hopefully, it will help us all. Overall, I think it will have a positive impact on the community."

Don Russell of Woolworth's, one of the most outspoken opponents of the Granite Crossing shopping center, said "A letter of intent is not a signed lease. Until I see construction start there (the proposed Decelle site) and until I see 1 signed lease there, I'm not going to believe it."

Russell, added, however, that if Decelle did become a reality, "I think it would be great."

Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, has been trying to bring the discount clothier Decelle to the 40,000-square-foot site since last January.

D'Aprix said Quincy 2000 spent "hundreds of hours" negotiating with Decelle representatives. He noted that the negotiations included examining the building, talking with the landlord, Walcott Corp. of Boston; planning renovations and preparing market analyses.

D'Aprix added that Quincy 2000 has also offered an incentive package to Decelle, although he would not disclose any details.

Burlington Coat Factory CEO and Vice President Mark Nesci, who signed the letter of intent the city received, praised Quincy 2000 for its work during the negotiations.

"We certainly appreciate Quincy 2000's persistent efforts and highly creative deal structuring," Nesci wrote. "We feel confident that Decelle will create a first-class retail store for Quincy."

Nesci also praised Sheets for his role in the matter. Sheets said the deal would not have been possible without Quincy 2000, and D'Aprix returned the compliment, saying it could not have been accomplished without the mayor.

Last month, it was announced that Atlantic Development Corp. of Hingham, which hopes to build the Granite Crossing shopping center, plans to finance all demolition needed inside the building. Atlantic Development President Donald MacKinnon said he expects to spend about $100,000 on the project.

The Quincy store will be Decelle's first new location since it was purchased by New Jersey-based Burlington Coat Factory Warehouse Corp. late last year. Sheets said merchandise will be sold on the first and second floors and in the basement of the store.

D'Aprix also noted that plans call for the store to have escalators, something currently unavailable in downtown stores.

"We anticipate it will be a fully-escalated building," said D'Aprix.

Decelle sells mainly women's and children's clothing and accessories, as well as some men's products. The chain has eight stores in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, including shops in Cambridge, Lexington, Norwood and West Roxbury.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS hosted the official dedication of the "Walk of Names" project in front of City Hall Annex last Sunday. Those who purchased bricks as well as the general public were invited.

Sheets Gives His Support For Wal-Mart

of a 135,000-square-foot Wal-Mart store, a 60,000 to 75,000-square-foot supermarket, and possibly another 15,000-square-foot retail store if the supermarket does not fill the full 75,000 square feet.

Proponents of the project say the project will create 200 construction jobs, 500 permanent jobs, traffic improvements to Falls Boulevard and a minimum $600,000 in tax revenue for the city. In addition, the developer has offered a $600,000 mitigation package to the condominium owners.

Opponents of the project, most notably a group called "We're Against the Wal" that consists mainly of Falls residents, have said the project will adversely affect the quality of life and property values at The Falls as well as pull shoppers away from Quincy Center.

However, a recent study by Byrne-McKinney Associates of Boston showed that the values of only 12 of the 120 units at The Falls might drop. Atlantic Development has agreed to recompense any condo owners whose property values fall.

The Granite Crossing project has been approved by a number of boards, including the Quincy Planning Board, Quincy Conservation Commission and state Department of Environmental Protection. The City Council must give final approval to the project.

Six council votes are required to approve the project. Four councilors--Ward 2 Councilor Ted DeCristofaro, whose ward includes the project site, as well as Ward 3 Councilor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 4 Councilor Thomas Fabrizio and Councilor Timothy Cahill--have said they will support the project. Three others--Ward 1 Councilor Peter Kolson, Ward 5 Councilor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councilor Bruce Ayers--have said they are leaning in that direction.

Council President Michael Cheney and Councilor Joseph LaRaia have said they need more time to review information about the project before they can make their decisions.

Although Sheets technically has no say in the matter, at least one councilor said his vote could be affected by the mayor's announcement.

"It (Sheets' decision) carries a lot of influence," said Ayers.

The council originally was supposed to vote on the project by Sept. 27. However, Atlantic Development Corp. has agreed to Cheney's request for an extension.

Cheney has scheduled three special council meetings for Sept. 28 and 29 and Oct. 3 to allow the council time to review any final details about the project. He said Tuesday, however, that the council might decide not to use all three or even two of the meetings and could vote at the Sept. 28 meeting.

Studds To Tour Harbor Islands

Mayor James Sheets, will represent Quincy.

The tour will begin at 10 a.m. with a boat ride to George's Island, currently the main destination for visitors. The group will tour Fort Warren and watch a rowing demonstration by members of the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

Studds and Kennedy will then take a ferry to Quincy, where they will ride a Park Service Trolley to the Adams National Historic Site. Studds wants to link the Adams Site and two other Park Service sites in Quincy with the islands.

Last summer, Studds hosted a similar tour with Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt to announce the Park Service would study the proposal. The study is nearly complete and will be released sometime next month.

Bail Reform Becomes Law

Rep. Michael Bellotti announces that the bail reform bill enacted in July is now law.

The new law is one of a series of measures recently adopted in the Legislature that Bellotti said is part of the ongoing battle against domestic violence.

"As we in the Legislature continue to address the epidemic of domestic violence, it is important for would-be perpetrators to know that they will be dealt with in a severe and timely manner," said Bellotti.

The move, which is being hailed by advocates for battered women, allows judges to consider the dangerousness of a defendant when setting bail. Before the Legislature's action, judges were only permitted to examine the probability of flight when deciding bail. Experts believe this will help keep the perpetrators of domestic violence, who more times than not are repeat offenders, off the street.

Bellotti said the action was part of the Legislature's strategy to combat the problem from every possible angle. Another example of this effort is the recently-created "abuse prevention law." The law provides for the immediate suspension of a license to carry a firearm upon the issuance of a restraining order, as well as mandating the surrender of all firearms and ammunition, by the defendant.

YOUR NAME WILL GO DOWN IN HISTORY

The City of Quincy is expanding the brick plaza and "Walk of Names" at Constitution Common...located at the entrance to City Hall. For a limited time, you can guarantee that your name...or the name of someone you love...will go down in history. And you'll help improve everyone's Downtown.

Over 3,000 individuals, businesses and organizations have already donated to the "Walk of Names"...and their engraved bricks have become part of Quincy's history.

Phase 2 of the project is now underway. For each $50 donation, a brick will be engraved and included in the design of the walkways. Each personalized brick comes with a special certificate for you to frame or present as a gift.

To place your brick order, call 376-3676

or pick up an order form at City Hall.

Quantity is limited. Bricks dedicated on a first come, first served basis. Each $50 donation includes one brick engraved with 2 lines, each 15 characters long. A third line may be added for an additional $20. Ask about purchasing groupings of bricks.

“Wal-Mart
people back
Quincy.”

Quincy Agnitti, Quincy Businessman

It wasn't all that long ago that Quincy had a thriving retail district. People were working and shopping right here where they lived, and the whole city was prospering. With the proposed new Wal-Mart at Granite Crossing, that pleasant memory could also be our bright future.

A new Wal-Mart in Quincy would help fuel the economy and revitalize our entire community. Quincy shoppers would stay in Quincy to take advantage of Wal-Mart's low prices, great selection and exceptional service. Not only that, but a fully developed Granite Crossing would generate over a half-million dollars in new real estate taxes.

And then there are the jobs. Two hundred construction jobs. Five hundred new permanent jobs, about two hundred of them at Wal-Mart. And 70% of those will be quality, full-time jobs with benefits and profit sharing eligibility that provide an excellent opportunity for career advancement.

Put it all together and you have an opportunity that Quincy simply cannot afford to pass up. Support the development at Granite Crossing.

And Wal-Mart. Always a good neighbor.

Pat Toland: A Model Person In Life And Politics

'people-strength.' She was a just a terrific, even-tempered person, which is exactly what you need in this (city clerk's) office. You didn't have to worry about Pat learning the people part of the assistant clerk's job."

Former School Committeewoman Mary Collins, a longtime friend of Toland's who was with her when she died: "She had a great sense of humor, and she was always a lot of fun to be with. Even though she was sick, she was always very positive. She was a real trooper. I don't know how she did it; I know I couldn't have."

"She was a great mother, and her family always came first," Collins said. "She was also very community-minded. She was quite a woman, and I'm going to miss her tremendously. Everyone will."

Alicia Coletti, another longtime friend and Chapter 1 director of food services for the Quincy Public Schools: "What we'll remember is the way she was with people. She liked people. They say all politicians like people, but I think she was different in that she listened to what people said as much as she talked to them."

"I think that's why she was successful politically, and I know that's why she was successful with the many friends she made," she added.

City Council President Michael Cheney: "I really enjoyed serving with Pat in city government for over 10 years. She was a great humanitarian. She always looked after the little person, the people who felt they had no voice in government. I'm going to miss Pat tremendously."

Former City Clerk John Gillis: "I first met Pat when she was involved with the League of Women Voters. She made the League very popular because she was so understanding."

"I remember when Pat, myself and a girl named Flavin decided we should use voting machines in the city. Pat really understood the election process. And she was a loyal Democrat: she never deviated, and I loved her for that."

"She was a gallant girl, and I'll miss her both politically and as a friend," Gillis said.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro: "Pat was a good person, and I feel very, very bad. We've lost a dedicated servant to the City of Quincy. In whatever capacity she served, she always did the best she could. We're going to miss her."

Former Ward 3 Councillor Jack Lyden: "She was just a very lovely lady, and a very close personal friend of my wife and myself."

Former Mayor Francis McCauley: "We served

"AFTER YOU'VE BEEN in one aspect of government for a while, you become interested in the entire picture," said Patricia Toland after being elected to the City Council in 1981. Toland had previously served on the Quincy School Committee.

together on the School Committee, and I got to know her during that time. We worked pretty closely together. She was a hard worker, and all of us who worked in government enjoyed working with her."

"We used to kid Pat that she was always late for meetings," McCauley noted. "But once she was there, she always got the job done."

City Councillor and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia: "She was very caring, considerate and pleasant, and those are attributes I recognized when I sat next to her on the council in the '80s. I know she had battled with cancer for a few years, and I'm saddened by her passing."

"Pat was part of a growing trend of women being elected to office," added LaRaia, who was mayor during part of Toland's tenure on the School Committee. "I know she was very involved in women's issues, and certainly, she's made a mark on Quincy's government."

Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin, who also served as mayor while Toland was on the School Committee: "I have a fondness for Pat that's deep-seeded, and I'm very sad. We shared some tender moments together because we shared a personal tragedy (each experienced the death of a child), and it sort of made things special with Pat. She was just a lovely lady."

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan: "I'll always remember her as a decent human being, a kind and caring person. She was a lot of fun. She enjoyed people, she enjoyed knowing people, and she always tried to help people as best she could. She gave most of her life to serve the public."

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson: "Pat was always interested in issues, especially education issues and the welfare of children. When she believed in something, she was very tenacious, but she was also very arful, a careful listener who always listened to other people's opinions. She'll be long-remembered and well-respected."

Sen. Michael Morrissey: "She was really good about talking to people who were angry and getting cooler heads to prevail. You could always count on her to resolve things amicably."

Rep. Stephen Tobin: "Pat Toland and I last spoke at the Democratic Convention (in Worcester) last June, and it's the most beautiful memory I have of her. She talked about her family and her love for the City of Quincy. I believe she was one of our finest elected officials because of her passion and commitment."

"She was a friend, and the Tobin family sends its prayers to (Toland's children) Liz, John and Brendan," he said.

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall: "I met her 30 years ago when I was serving on the City Council and she was just starting out with the League of Women Voters. She's been a person whom I highly respected, and one who always fought for people with needs greater DOCTOR, I CAN HEAR...

The year was 1895. Harvey Lillard, the owner of a janitorial service, was deaf. While exerting himself in a cramped, stooping position, he felt something give way in his back. He was deaf for 17 years.

While cleaning the office of Dr. Daniel Palmer, the doctor noticed that Harvey could not hear and did an examination of Harvey's back. The examination showed a vertebra misaligned from its normal position. Dr. Palmer reasoned that if that vertebra was replaced, the man's hearing should be restored. With the permission of Harvey, Dr. Palmer racked it into position. "Doctor, I can hear..."

Dr. Daniel David Palmer was the founder of Chiropractic. He advertised his practice as "Cures Without Medicine" and used a combination of chiropractic adjustments as well as magnetic healing techniques successfully on his patients. One of his patients helped him with the name chiropractic which comes from the greek words "Chel" or hand and "Praxis" practice. Put together it means "Done By Hand."

Estate Planning Workshop At Quincy Hospital

The American Lung Association will sponsor a workshop on retirement and state planning at Quincy Hospital.

The workshop will be held Tuesday, Sept. 20 at 1 p.m. in Room A at the hospital and Tuesday, Sept. 27 at 7 p.m. in Rooms B and C.

Entitled "Retirement and State Planning," the workshop will include the following topics: protecting assets from a nursing home stay, maximizing retirement income with safety of principle, use of trusts for estates of any size, avoiding estate taxes and probate fees.

The workshop will be presented by The Speakers' Bureau, a division of the Marketing Collaborative Inc. The firm, with its networks around the country, attempts to put donors and community organizations in touch with expert financial planners and attorneys.

Admission is free. Those in attendance will have the option of having a free hour of consultation from the speakers at a later date.

than hers.

"I'm also privileged to have her daughter working for me today," Marshall added. "She's very bright and very much like her mother."

Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt: "We go back many years, and they certainly don't make many like Pat Toland. She was just a remarkable woman. I have no doubt she had many best friends, because she had that capacity to make you feel close to her.

"It's a loss for me, her family and the city," he said.

Former School Committee member Charles Sweeney: "I was fortunate to have served with her on the School Committee. She was constantly optimistic, she never thought of defeat and she never had any. She had a quick mind, a sparkling sense of humor, and a lifelong commitment to principles and progress. Above all, I treasured her as a friend."

Former Mayor Walter Hannon: "Pat Toland was, first and foremost, a real sweet lady who participated in the rough and tumble world of politics, but never doing so without being a lady. Her service to the City of Quincy was outstanding, and should serve as an example to all women that there is a place for them in the male-dominated world of public office.

"Most of all, she was a devoted wife and mother who raised her children to be as good and kind as she was," added Hannon.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, who also served with Toland on the City Council: "She really was a very good friend of mine, and we had many a laugh together. She was very much a gracious lady who cared about people, and she had a sort of common touch that I think contributed to her success politically.

"On the City Council, if Pat gave you her word on something, you always knew her word was good," McGrath noted. "She was someone you could count on."

Former Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke: "When she was a councillor, she'd always drop by my office to say 'hello.' I don't remember her ever going upstairs (at City Hall) without stepping in and saying 'hello.'"

"In my estimation, she fit the assistant clerk's job to a 'T,'" he added. "She knew the council, she knew the elections, and she had the ability to just go in and take over."

A native of Dorchester, Toland graduated from St. Gregory's High School and received an undergraduate degree from Boston State College. She worked as an elementary school teacher for 11 years in Randolph before giving up her job to raise a family shortly after her marriage in 1962.

In 1964, she moved to Quincy. She founded and was first president of the Furnace Brook Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization. She was also active in the Quincy League of Women Voters.

Toland, a lifelong Democrat, began her political career in 1975 after winning a seat on the School Committee. She was elected to another four-year term in 1979.

In 1981, she ran for city councillor-at-large and won. She was re-elected five times and in 1988 became the first woman in Quincy's history to be elected City Council president.

Toland was also the only woman to be elected to both the School Committee and City Council.

Toland resigned her council seat in January 1993 to seek the job of assistant city clerk. She was appointed in the post in April of last year and remained on the job until days before her death.

At Toland's funeral Mass celebrated at St. Ann's Church in Wollaston, her casket was carried by seven special honorary bearers: Sheets, McCauley, Arthur Tobin, LaRaia, Hannon, Gillis and Shea. More than 400 people attended the Mass.

Toland is survived by her three children, a sister, and many nieces and nephews.

Board Upholds Warden's Decision On Shellfish License

By LISA CONNELL
Time and tide wait for no one.

Ray Mitchell of Littlefield St., Houghs Neck, was two days late filing for his shellfish license last April. A clam digger in Quincy for the past 14 years, he was denied his license.

Mitchell told the License Board Tuesday that at the filing deadline, April 30, he didn't have the $100 required to purchase the license.

Licenses are available for $100 at City Hall for Quincy residents. Non-residents can buy the same license for $300. Licenses must be obtained annually between April 1 and April 30.

"I've been clam digging for 14 straight years in the city and I was just a couple of days late," said Mitchell, 29.

Quincy Shellfish Warden Andrew Ayer, who also appeared before the Board, said that when a clam digger misses the deadline, he or she must meet with Ayer and a panel of four other fellow clammers. A vote is taken during a meeting to determine if the clammer should be granted a license.

The panel meets on the beach and is composed of Ayer, a master or supervising digger and three other, less senior clam diggers.

When the vote was taken this past July, Mitchell was denied a license. The vote was three to two.

Ayer always casts a "no" vote in these instances because he believes clammers should be aware of and adhere to the 30 day application period in April.

"Everyone [the clam diggers] likes him; it's not that they don't like him; they had to buy it in the [time] period and they think everyone else should," Ayer said.

Ayer had advised Mitchell to wait until the fall or winter for a decision by his fellow clammers. At a later date, an applicant is looked upon more favorably by fellow clammers when weather conditions become more harsh and clam digging becomes a test of true dedication.

Mitchell and Ayer appeared before the License Board, who cast the final vote when the five-member clammer panel votes no.

Mitchell, who relies on clam digging for part-time income, fears he is in danger of being laid-off soon from his full-time job in construction. He lives with his wife, Lauralyn, and daughter, 10, and son, 4.

The License Board voted to uphold the decision reached by Ayer and other clam diggers.

"The ordinance wouldn't be worth the paper it is printed on," said Building Inspector and License Board Vice-Chairman Matthias Mulvey.

"We all have to work together and support the other departments. Short of being in the service, out of the country or in the hospital, I can't see any reason why we shouldn't uphold the ordinance," said City Clerk and License Board Chairman Joseph Shea.

Restriction of the period when a digging license can be bought began in 1989, as a means of controlling the amount of clams being dug annually and to allow time for the clam population to replenish itself. Thirty months is the normal amount of time for a new crop of clams to grow, according to Ayer.

Ayer remembers that 15 years ago, the clam population was so plentiful that the New England mollusk was harvested during two low tides a day, seven days a week.

But this level of clamming eventually led to the scarcity of the popular food, which prompted city officials to restrict the number of people who could dig at any of Quincy's waterfront areas.

Restrictions also protect the monies that can be earned by clammers, especially those who rely on it for their total livelihood.

Ayer is allowed to give out as many clamming licenses as he wants. "I could put a cap on it... if the city couldn't support that amount of diggers," he said.

"On a bad day, a decent digger can get about $100 for two and a half racks," said Ayer.

Racks hold 50 pounds of clams and can sell for at least $45, at the wholesale level.

It is not uncommon for six racks to be gathered during one digging period, according to Ayer.

Currently 63 Quincy residents hold clam digging licenses. Two non-residents hold such permits. Mitchell may purchase a new license next April 1.

highlighted by the three-way gubernatorial contest. Former Assistant DA George Bachrach, State Sen. Michael Barrett and Rep. Mark Roosevelt are vying for the Democrat nomination and the right to challenge Republican Gov. William Weld in November.

Other contested races and candidates on the Democrat ballot are:

- Lieutenant governor: Rep. Marc D. Draisen of Boston and Robert K. Massie of Somerville.
- Secretary of State: Former Rep. William Galvin of Boston and former Rep. Augusto F. Grace of Burlington.

- U.S. Congress: Incumbent Gerry Studds of Cohasset and Roger P. Ham of 99 Sumner St., Quincy. Ham, 43, registered to vote in Quincy in February after relocating from Ridgely Park, New Jersey. He lists his occupation as sales.
- County Commissioner: Peter H. Collins of Milton,

- Senator in Norfolk-Plymouth District: Incumbent Michael W. Morrissey, 111 Lansdowne St., Quincy; and Bernard L. Walsh, a Braintree town meeting member.
- Governor's Council: Incumbent Christopher J. Iannella, Jr. of Boston and John J. Kerrigan of 66 Post Island Rd., Quincy.

There are also a number of uncontested primary races.

Incumbent Democrats running unopposed are Sen. Edward (Ted) Kennedy, Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, Auditor Joseph DeNucci, Norfolk County DA William D. Delahunt of Quincy, Norfolk County Clerk of Courts Nicholas Barbardoro of Braintree, Norfolk County Register of Deeds Barry T. Hannon of Braintree, and local representatives Michael Bellotti, Steve Tobin and Ron Mariano.

In addition, Sen. Shannon O'Brien is unopposed in the Democratic primary for state treasurer and will challenge Republican incumbent Joseph Malone in November.

Incumbent Republicans running unopposed in the primary are:

- Gov. William Weld, Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci;
- Treasurer Joseph Malone;
- and Norfolk County Commissioner Bruce Olsen of Stoughton.

Four other Republicans are unopposed in the primary and will face Democrat incumbents in November. Keith Jason Hemeon of Sandwich will challenge either Studds or Ham for Congress; Steven Williams of 17 Ryden St., Quincy will face Rep. Steve Tobin in the Second Norfolk District; and Michael H. Mushnick of Millis will challenge Barbardoro for Norfolk County Clerk of Courts.

Alcohol Is Number 1* Part II

Some More Facts About Alcohol:

•Drinking coffee, taking a cold shower, or breathing fresh air will not sober you up. The only thing that sobers you up is time.

•One beer, one shot of whiskey, and one glass of wine all have the same amount of alcohol. Don't fall for the notion that beer and wine are less intoxicating than hard liquors.

•Only 3-5% of alcoholics are what we think of as bums. Most alcoholics are just like the people you know. Anyone can become an alcoholic—young, old, rich, poor, married, single, employed, or out of work.

•The earlier young people start drinking and using drugs, the more likely they are to become addicted.

•Alcohol ages and damages the brain.

Take Action:

•Make a pledge with your friends that you will help each other avoid alcohol and other drugs.

•If someone you know has an alcohol or other drug problem, encourage them to get help.

•Write ads for your school newspaper that make people aware of advertising gimmicks.

•If you belong to any club or other youth group, suggest that its members organize an anti-drinking project.

•Make a presentation to your school's PTO meeting about how teachers and parents can help kids avoid drugs and alcohol.

•Ask for help if someone is pressuring you to try alcohol or other drugs. Talk to someone you trust.

•Organize alcohol free post prom and graduation parties.

Remember: Alcohol is #1 in many people's lives. Don't let it become #1 in your life.

State DEP Approves Granite Crossing Project

The state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has granted final approval to the Granite Crossing shopping center project proposed by Atlantic Development of Hingham.

The DEP approved the company's construction plans Sept. 5 following the statutory appeal period.

Atlantic Development submitted its plan for Granite Crossing, which would include a Wal-Mart store and be built near The Falls condominium complex in Quincy Point, to the Quincy Conservation Commission July 11. On Aug. 19, the Conservation Commission issued permits granting initial authorization to proceed with the project.

An appeal period mandated by law followed and has since expired. The DEP's decision clears the way for Granite Crossing to proceed.

"These approvals by the Quincy Conservation Commission and the state Department of Environmental Protection come after many months of careful planning and engineering review and demonstrate that our plan to develop Granite Crossing is environmentally responsible," said Atlantic Development President Donald MacKinnon.

In July, Atlantic Development submitted a notice of intent outlining its development plans. MacKinnon said the report considered a wide variety of construction and post construction issues, and a key element of the project concerned rain water runoff and the impact of development on a nearby detention pond area.

Atlantic Development proposed construction practices that would protect adjacent wetlands by marking them "off-limits" with colored flagging and by protecting them with doubled rows of anchored haybales. The company also agreed to build a six-foot chain link fence along the edge of the detention basin, according to MacKinnon.

Other protections include modification to catch basins, including the installation of oil and gas traps. In addition, the plan calls for contracts with maintenance contractors to clean catch basins, collect debris, remove ice and snow, and generally maintain the property. The use of salt and chemical de-icing agents for snow removal will be restricted to Falls Boulevard, MacKinnon said.

"We have taken great care to design a variety of systems, such as oil and gas traps, to make sure the environment is protected," he said. "Our goal is to make the Granite Crossing shopping center the most successful and attractive retail project in the region, and to do it in a way that is environmentally friendly."

The City Council must vote on whether to give final approval to the project. Although Sept. 27 was the original deadline date, Atlantic Development has agreed to Council President Michael Cheney's request for an extension.

Cheney has requested that three special council meetings be scheduled to discuss any final details about the project, although he said the council might not use all three meeting dates. Cheney said the vote will be taken Sept. 28 or 29 or Oct. 3.

Recreation Exercise Class Sept. 26

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct exercise classes Monday and Wednesday evenings at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School gymnasium.

Two separate classes will be held, one at 6 p.m. and one at 7 p.m. Both begin Monday, Sept. 26.

The 6 o'clock class will include high and low impact aerobics. The 7 o'clock class will feature strength and stretching exercises designed to improve tone, flexibility and endurance of specific body areas. Both classes will be taught by Debbie Vacca.

Registration can be done when the program begins and two payment options are available: A one-time $25 fee covers all classes from Sept. 26 through Dec. 21. A $3 fee will cover each individual class.

A towel or exercise mat and proper gym attire are recommended.

Participants in the 7 o'clock class may also take part in the adult swim a 8 p.m. in the Lincoln-Hancock pool.

For more information call the Quincy Recreation Department at 376-1394.

At Marshfield Saturday

Quincy Hopes To Erase Thanksgiving Memory

By KERRY BYRNE

Hopes for a great football season run high at Quincy High School but coach Jack Raymer isn't ordering the Super Bowl jackets just yet.

"You're only as good as your last game, and in our last game we weren't very good," he said.

The game he was referring to was the Presidents' 14-7 loss to North Quincy last Thanksgiving. Quincy turned in their worst offensive showing of the season that day and Raymer knows that Old Colony League titles aren't built on one-TD games.

He and his Presidents will try to reverse the trend Saturday at 1:30 when they hit the road to take on non-league opponent Marshfield. Last season Quincy needed some last-minute heroics to pull out a 21-20 win over Marshfield on opening day. A two-point conversion by then-sophomore receiver Terry Bowman provided the winning margin in the game's final moments.

Raymer expects a battle again this year. "It's always a good game when we play Marshfield. They always play us tough. It has turned into a great rivalry for both teams. [Marshfield head coach Lou] Silva always has a good, well-coached team. This game is going to be a true test for us," he said.

His concern is aided by the fact that the Presidents have been less-than-spectacular in scrimmages against Newton North, Watertown and Braintree.

"I think we've had a good preseason, we've looked at a lot of kids, but we haven't peaked yet," said Raymer. "But," he added more assuredly, "I feel we can run the football against most of the teams we'll play. And our offensive line has looked very good in the preseason."

While trying to break in a new and untested QB Saturday, Quincy will rely on that offensive line to carry the load. In tackles Butch Palaza (6 feet 4 inches, 275 pounds) and Jeff Burrell (6-0, 275), guards Mike Feeley (6-0, 235) and Pete Kolson (6-1, 205) and center Matt Strauchon (6-1, 220) Quincy has a large, physical and experienced front five. All but Strauchon started each game last season and all but the junior Kolson are seniors. Burrell, Palaza and Feeley are also captains of the Quincy squad.

Running behind them will be a 6-foot, 230-pound wall of muscle named Sam Brown. If the senior captain and tailback can polish his raw running style he will be difficult for any team to stop. Blocking for him out of the backfield will be junior fullback Bill Dunn (6-0, 195).

Also in the backfield will be senior wingback Greg Santoro (5-9, 170).

Quincy's wide receivers will be junior Mike Sheffer (5-7, 160) and senior Wilkins Jeanty (6-1, 175). Santoro, senior Martin Cloonan (5-10, 175) and sophomore Jon Ryan (6-0, 170) will share duties at tight end.

But while the core of the Quincy offensive lineup seems sound, lack of experience at quarterback is a major concern for Raymer. Battling for the job are junior Terry Bowman (5-9, 155) and sophomore Mark Glynn (5-8, 155). Neither player has any experience leading a varsity team and neither has been able to outdistance the other in the preseason.

"We've worked hard to develop our passing game," said Raymer. "But the development of our QB's is going to be a continuous process throughout the season."

Without the ability to go deep, the Presidents will rely on strong defense to keep the game close. If Quincy falls behind they may not have the ability to play catch-up football.

Manning the defensive line will be Palaza and senior Mike Flagg (6-1, 190) at end and Feeley and either John Moss (6-0, 275) or Jay Fennelly (6-2, 240) at tackle.

Dunn and senior Ed Anderson (6-0, 170) are slated to be the outside linebackers. Senior captain Jason Bennett (5-10, 200) will roam the middle of the defense.

The secondary (Quincy's Smurfs), will consist of Sheffer and either senior Chris McArdle (5-10, 165) or Bowman at the corners and Santoro and senior Matt Miller (5-8, 155) at the safety positions.

The secondary has a tough act to follow - last season the Presidents' defensive backfield recorded 13 interceptions.

Quincy finished 7-3 last season.

Marshfield At A Glance

Record: 4-6 last season; 2-5 and tied for fifth in the Atlantic Coast League.

Coach: Lou Silva (13th season, 51-64-4)

Previous meeting: Despite the record, the Div. 3 Rams engaged the Presidents in a dogfight last season. Quincy barely escaped with a 21-20 last-minute win to start the season.

Offense: Marshfield has a small but speedy group. Silva will try to utilize this asset with a one-back offense. His dual wingbacks will do a great deal of the ground work. Look for the Rams to go deep to one of their lanky tight ends.

Defense: Marshfield will throw multiple looks at the Presidents in an effort to neutralize Quincy's sizable size advantage. Quincy should be able to overpower the Rams, but as last year's Turkey Day game proved, the bulky Presidents have trouble dealing with a fast, swarming defense.

Player to watch: Running back Scott Romaine.

COLOR COMMENTARY

Some definite color trends among car buyers have emerged in the year past. White (19.3 percent) was the top choice for luxury cars in 1993, followed by green (9.7 percent), light brown (9 percent), medium red (8.7 percent), white pearl (8.6 percent), black (8.5 percent), and medium gray (7.1 percent). White (20.1 percent) also headed the color list for full/intermediate cars, followed by green (15.1 percent), medium red (11.2 percent), light brown (8 percent), silver (6.2 percent), medium gray (5.8 percent), and black (4.9 percent). Green (16.1 percent) switched places with white (15.3 percent) to top the sport compact category, followed by bright red (12.9 percent), medium red (11.4 percent), black (8.3 percent), and turquoise (7.7 percent).

HINT: The top color choices for trucks/vans in 1993 was white (21.8 percent), followed by green (15.2 percent) and bright red (10.7 percent), to no one's surprise.

Kickoff Friday At 7 P.M.

Raiders Ready For Opener At Stoughton

By DAVE SOUTHWICK
Coach Ken McPhee and his players are ready "right now" to open North Quincy's 62nd football season Friday at Stoughton. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m.

Stoughton, a member of the Div. 3 Hockmuck League, was 8-2 last season, including a 14-7 win over the Red Raiders in the opening week. That victory broke North Quincy's win streak at 14, their longest such streak since 1966.

The Black Knights return only one starter from last year, junior linebacker John Pires.

"We know they graduated a lot of players last year," said coach McPhee. "But we also know they have some kids coming back and they are a big, physical team."

The starting quarterback for North will be senior Sean Dolbear (5 feet 9 inches, 180 pounds). "Dolbear has a very strong arm," said McPhee. "He has progressed very well during our scrimmages."

McPhee will start Glenn Peterson (5-10, 185) at fullback. Others that could see action are sophomore Sean Donovan (5-9, 165) and junior Chris Ritchie (5-9, 180).

Senior co-captain Shawn Nee (5-8, 160) will start at tailback. Nee led the team in rushing (1,175 yards) and touchdowns (9) a year ago. He will be backed up by sophomore Brian Walsh (5-5, 160) and seniors Johnny Lee (5-9, 140) and Ken Burke (5-5, 140).

Senior Jamie Karvelis (5-4, 145) will start at wingback. Senior Jerry Fernandez (6-2, 185) will start at wide receiver with seniors Derek Epps (6-1, 170), Toby Odom (6-0, 155) and Eric Zimmerman (6-1, 175) seeing some action.

Senior Dan Reynolds (6-1, 215) receives the starting assignment at center. Senior co-captain Dave Carney (6-2, 230), and seniors Sean Kennerson (6-2, 215) and Matt Hourin (6-0, 190) will share the offensive guard duties. Seniors Joe Renzi (5-10, 195), Neil Kiley (6-1, 245) and Ricky Maciera (5-11, 275) will battle for the two starting offensive tackle positions.

On defense, North will have senior Bob Ragusa (5-10, 180) start at nose guard, while Kennerson, Maciera and Kiley will battle for the defensive tackle spot.

Senior Keith Martinson will be the top defensive end. Walsh will also see time at end. Looking for the starting nod at linebacker will be Carney, Epps, Odom and Tim Zaniboni. A number of players are battling at safety. They include Fernandez, Peterson, senior Fred Perry (5-8, 180) and juniors Ritchie and James Rendle (5-11, 140).

On special teams Nee and Epps will handle the kickoff and punt returns. Nee will punt and Rendle will do the place-kicking.

North opens the season injury-free and McPhee reports all are healthy following scrimmages against Newton North and Marshfield.

The Red Raider uniform will feature a few minor changes this season - new game pants and a new helmet logo.

"The kids really like the Florida State (helmet) emblem so the parents and the booster club went out and bought them and the pants for us," said McPhee.

Stoughton At A Glance

Record: 8-2 last season; 5-2 and tied for second in the Hockmuck League.

Coach: Greg Burke (5th season).

Previous meeting: The Black Knights beat North Quincy 14-7 in the opening game of the 1993 season. The loss ended North's 14-game unbeaten streak.

Offense: Last year coach Greg Burke's team possessed a dominating running attack, but they lost 25 seniors from that squad, including star running back Aaron Bascon. They will rely on speed and more passing to offset the loss of their big players. They will not control the line of scrimmage as well as they did last year against the Red Raiders.

Defense: Look for Stoughton to concentrate on stopping the big-play abilities of wide receiver Derek Epps and running back Shawn Nee, who is as nimble as a cat as they come.

Player to watch: fullback/linebacker John Pires.

Sports Spotlight

The Perfect Autumn Weekend.

To some it's a walk through the red-orange-yellow tinted hills of New Hampshire. To others it's the last round on the links before winter makes golf a distant memory. To a 19-year-old college student, dizzy with booze and hormones, it's...well, maybe I'll stay away from that one.

To me it's when my five football teams, Quincy High (alumnus), North Quincy High (Red Line alumnus), Boston College (alumnus), Notre Dame (subway alumnus) and the Patriots (lifelong victim) all chalk up W's.

Unfortunately it hasn't happened too many times over the years, mostly because the Patriots win only about once every solar eclipse. In fact, I don't even remember a Perfect Autumn Weekend happening, although I'm sure it must have happened sometime recently - kind of like getting a human on the phone when you call a mindless, faceless corporate conglomerate.

So far this year it hasn't gone well. After two weeks BC is 0-1, the Irish are 1-1 and the Pats are 0-2. A collective 1-4. Last week was particularly harsh; BC had the day off but both the Irish and the Patriots lost to archrivals on last-minute field goals. I feel like they're out to get me. Who are they?, you say. I think they are a third person plural pronoun, but that's not important right now.

Anyway, I feel like things are going to change this week. The high school season starts up and the winds of change are blowing steadily. Friday night the Red Raiders will beat Stoughton like a stray dog. Saturday the Presidents will spank Marshfield like a newborn, Boston College will flatten Virginia Tech like hot tar, Notre Dame will whip Michigan State like race horse, and Sunday New England will plant Cincinnati like a cactus at Tucson real estate development.

Then all will be good in the world.

What happens when North Quincy plays Quincy on Thanksgiving or BC plays Notre Dame Oct. 8? That's a question for another day.

It's no secret that volleyball in Quincy is second to none.

North Quincy's three all-scholastics from last year - Maureen McCarthy, Wendy Sweetser and Heather Simmons - are playing against some of the toughest volleyball competition in the country in college.

None more so than McCarthy. A freshman at perennial Top 10 volleyball power Florida State University, she played against rival volleyball juggernauts UCLA and Penn State over the weekend.

Her former teammate Wendy is playing for Lafayette University in Pennsylvania. When the Leopards take on archrival Bucknell, Wendy will be facing two of her former North Quincy teammates, Brenda Hayduk and Heather Rendle. Heather is the daughter of North Quincy girls' volleyball coach and Quincy High boys' volleyball coach Jim Rendle.

Heather Simmons stayed close to home, opting to play at Bridgewater State College instead of schools like Queens College and Franklin Pierce.

Former Quincy High star Lori Novak is a captain of the volleyball team at Bentley College in Waltham.

Her 1,003 assists, 294 digs and 44 service aces helped lead Bentley to a 27-14 record last season's first ever bid in the NCAA Division II Championships.

The assist mark was her third straight season with over 1,000.

Two former North Quincy soccer stars made their freshman debut with the Eastern Nazarene eleven.

Bob Johnston and Neil Hutchinson helped the Crusaders open the season with a 3-1 victory of Rivier College. Bob is the son of North Quincy boys' soccer coach Jim Johnston.

One other freshman on that team is a newcomer to the Granite City - Jon Bromley recently moved to Quincy from Plattsburgh, New York.

The Wollaston college was a preseason favorite to win the Commonwealth Coast Conference title.

Quincy Track Club Workouts

The Quincy Track Club will hold workouts for its fall distance and cross country program on Tuesdays and Thursdays 6-7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Boys and girls 5-14 are welcome. There is no charge.

For more information call Geoff Hennessy at 773-5824.

Line Dancing at YMCA

The South Shore YMCA will be offering a new country line dancing program. The newest dance craze, line dancing is also a great way to exercise.

Classes begin Monday, Sept. 19, at 10 a.m. Registration is underway.

At Russell Park Courts

Quincy Tennis Tourney Underway

The 24th annual Quincy Tennis Tournament, sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department and Continental Cablevision, is off to a great start according to tournament director John Franceschini.

Men's singles defending champion Leonard Ciavarro and finalist Paul Carty are back and again are the players to beat. Carty and doubles partner Mark Scanlon will try to make it two years in a row in the men's doubles. They should see strong competition from the teams of Peter Trafton and Tom Savoie as well as Ciavarro and Bruce Riddick.

On the women's side, Wendy Trafton is the number-one seed and should see upcoming Cindy Wong and Amy DiBona as her main objectives. Wendy along with her mother Gail will be tough to beat in the women's doubles.

Joe Ryan, a standout player for many years, will be a serious threat to win the men's 50 and over singles and the men's 35 and over singles. The mixed doubles team of Aileen and Peter Eley are defending their 1993 crown. Peter and Wendy Trafton, along with Joe and Elizabeth Ryan, should be their toughest opponents.

The tournament is open to Quincy residents and city champions will be crowned in nine divisions. All matches are played evenings on weekdays and start at 9 a.m. on weekends at the Russell Park Tennis Courts located behind Quincy High School.

Spectators are invited and bleacher seating is available. Weather permitting the tournament finals are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

All competitors receive a complementary T-shirt and championship plaques for the winners and finalists are provided by Continental Cablevision, the third year sponsor of this event.

In matches played to date, the results are:

Men's Singles
Abe El-Kassem defeated Richard Griffin, 6-1, 6-3.
Jeff Rothberg def. Chris Sanges, 6-1, 6-2.

Jim Seufferli def. Carl Williams, 6-1, 6-2.

Ciavarro-Riddick def. Downey-Dunn, 6-1, 6-1.

Girls Track

Quincy Optimistic, Improved, Experienced

"We're very, very optimistic about this season," said Quincy High School cross country coach John Franceschini.

And he should be.

The girls' team went 2-6 last year, but they return every runner this season, including all-star Liz Sawan, just a junior. Other returning lettermen include juniors Maryann Ashworth, Amy Nicklas and Suzanne Civitarese, and sophomore Kathryn Lencki.

"Last season lack of depth hurt us," said Franceschini, "but with our returning starters and some new additions that shouldn't be a problem this year."

Among the new cross country athletes that the coach feels add depth to the team are Katie Gallagher, Nicole O'Brien and Kasey McNaught, all juniors. He is also very high on two incoming freshmen, Julie Dunn and Erin Djefr.

Off-season effort is another reason why the coach is confident as his girls enter dual meet action in the talented Old Colony League.

"The girls worked very hard in the off season. This is the hardest working group of girls we've ever had," said the coach.

"Our immediate goal is to be no worse than .500.

Anything else is icing on the cake."

Among Quincy's tough dual meet opponents are defending girls' state champion Falmouth (Oct. 11 at Falmouth) and crosstown rival North Quincy (Oct. 28), who tied for the OCL title last season.

Franceschini also has faith that the boys' team will be much improved over last year's 2-6 squad.

"We have a veteran team coming back. We have more depth this year and some of our runners could be all-stars," he said.

Jim Lencki is the squad's one returning all-star. The coach also expects good things from seniors Damon Blaco and Doug Gallagher, junior Hubert Lam and sophomore Matt Langille.

Seniors Brian Gallahue, Erik Palluccio, Kevin Dwyer and Rich Bergeron will add depth to the squad. The Presidents will also benefit from the addition of John Campbell, a transfer from Boston College High School.

Other top athletes are juniors John Duffy and Jeff Russell and freshmen Chris Haidul and Steve Geloran.

Franceschini's prediction for the boys' team is much the same as that for the girls' squad: "If everyone comes through for us and we remain injury free we'll be .500 or better."

His other goals include having Lencki, Blaco and Gallagher being named OCL all-stars.

The coach expects Weymouth, Barnstable and Bridgewater-Raynham to provide the boys with their stiffest competition.

The Quincy girls and boys open the season Sept. 22 at Taunton.

Volleyball

North Quincy Rebuilding, But Still A Contender

Coach Jim Rendle believes his North Quincy girls' volleyball team is in a "rebuilding year," but still feels that they're a player when it comes to state title contenders.

Gone from last year's 20-5 squad are all-scholastics Maureen McCarthy (Florida State), Wendy Sweetser (Lafayette) and Heather Simmons (Bridgewater State); in their place are three untested sophomores - middle hitter Erica Crawford, outside hitter Kerry Jellison and setter Kerry Ginty.

Said Rendle of his sophomore contingent: "They're doing a terrific job so far. But it will take them some time before they can compete at the same level as the girls we lost."

But it is apparent that Rendle's version of a "rebuilding year" for his Red Raiders volleyball team is different than most coaches' idea of a rebuilding year: "Our goal is still to win the state title. I feel we'll still be among the top four or five teams in the state," he said.

One major roadblock, though, is the loss of junior Linda Jellison who recently underwent knee surgery and is out "indefinitely" according to the coach.

His sophomores, not to mention the rest of his team, none of whom started last season, will undergo some serious on-the-job training. North Quincy is slated to play four of the top teams in the state two times each: Barnstable, defending state champion; New Bedford, who has lost only to North Quincy and Barnstable over the last three years; Medway, winners of five consecutive Div. 2 state titles and losers of just three matches in five years - each time to NQ; and Marlboro who lost only to Barnstable in the state semifinals last season.

Also on the brutal schedule are North Sectional semifinalists Chelmsford and Dracut.

"With our schedule we're going to come up with some losses. But the beauty of it is that our sophomores will have some major experience come tournament time," said Rendle.

Rounding out his starting lineup are senior outside hitters Amy Li and Jen Teahan, senior setter Nhan Ho, and junior middle blocker Sara Stanton.

"Our strength, especially in the early going, will be defense," said Rendle.

For that he will rely on the back row defense of (Cont'd On Page 25)

Schultz of Quincy and Gordon "Chip" Schultz of Stuart, Fla.; two daughters, Carol Adley of Coral Springs, Fla., and Humarock and Cynthia Huber of Weymouth, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Burial was private.

Patricia M. Toland, 62Quincy Asst. City Clerk; Served On City Council, School Committee

Five mayors were among those paying final tribute to Assistant City Clerk Patricia M. (Nagle) Toland at a funeral Mass last Saturday at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

Mrs. Toland, a former member and first woman president of the city council and former school committeewoman, died Sept. 7 at New England Deaconess Hospital in Boston after a long battle with cancer.

Honorary bearers at the funeral Mass were Mayor James Sheets, former Mayors Francis McCauley, Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRaia and Walter Hannon; City Clerk Joseph Shea, and County Commissioner John Gillis, former city clerk.

Fr. Jack Ahearn told the many people in attendance that Toland was loved by the public as well as her fellow politicians.

"She was comfortable with everyone," said Fr. Ahearn. "If she were at a function, she did not single out the mayor first, she mixed with everyone."

"She was a gentle woman but could be very tenacious, as her colleagues on the City Council knew, very tenacious when it came to what she believed in."

Born in Dorchester, Mrs. Toland graduated from St. Gregory's High School and received an undergraduate degree from Boston State College.

She was an elementary school teacher in Randolph for 11 years. Mrs. Toland gave up her job shortly after her marriage in 1962 to start raising a family. She lived in Dorchester until 1964, when she and her family moved to Quincy.

She founded and was the first president of the Furnace Brook Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization. She was also active in the Quincy League of Women Voters.

A lifelong Democrat, she launched her political career in 1975 by winning a four-year term on the

PATRICIA TOLAND

School Committee. She was elected to another four-year term in 1979.

Mrs. Toland ran for and won a seat as city councillor-at-large, becoming one of only three women to be elected to the council. She was re-elected five times and became the first woman in Quincy's history to be elected City Council president.

During her tenure, she was also vice president of the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

She resigned her council seat in January 1993 to seek the job of assistant city clerk. She was appointed to the post in April 1993 and worked until days before her death.

Mrs. Toland had also served on the board of Quincy College until its recent organization.

Wife of the late John Toland Jr., she is survived by two sons, John Toland III and Brendan P. Toland, both of Quincy; a daughter, Elizabeth V. Toland of Quincy; a daughter, Elizabeth V. Toland of Quincy; a sister, Marie Egan of West Yarmouth; and many nieces and nephews. She was the mother of the late Gregory P. Toland and sister of the late Paul Nagle.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery. Funeral arrangements were by the Lydon Funeral Home, 644 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to the Gregory P. Toland Alumni Theater Scholarship at North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02171 or to the charity of one's choice.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

PERSONALITY TIP: Let's start today to change our lives by doing something different or something thoughtful for others each day. Look for a smile and return it. You'll never know how far this one little gesture may travel.

Some people have personalities that spread greeting all over the place. The smile they give us as we pass them on the street, the wave of the hand as their car passes our house. The way they walk into a group-say something with a smile, pat somebody on the back...

Granted, sometimes a backslapper can become a nuisance. The guy that's always grinning can make himself tiresome. But the person who has the art of dispensing greetings and making everybody feel cheerful is only for a few moments in a person we never get tired of meeting.

Some people don't take life seriously enough, and some people take it too seriously. But if we can dispel a little of the world's gloom, we are making ourselves useful and beloved. We sure could use more of that wide grin!

M. Ena Fredette

Former Quincy School Teacher,
WW II WAVES Lieutenant

A funeral service for M. Ena Fredette of North Quincy was held Sept. 10 in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

A memorial service will be held at a later date in Memorial Congregational Church.

Miss Fredette died Sept. 8 in the Quincy Nursing and Rehabilitation Center.

A graduate of Quincy High School and Bridgewater Normal School, she began her teaching career at the Walter Fernald State School in Waltham. She also taught at the former Hancock School in Quincy.

During World War II, Miss Fredette was one of the first women from the Quincy area to join the WAVES, where she rose to the rank of lieutenant.

She trained in the WAVES in Hollywood, Fla., and taught navigation to Navy pilots in Corpus Christi, Texas. For a brief period, she was stationed at the former Squantum Naval Air Station.

After the war, she received a bachelor's degree, magna cum laude, and a master's degree from Boston University.

She returned to the Quincy public school system and taught geography. She was also a guidance counselor at Central Junior High School, the Snug Harbor School and other schools in the Quincy system.

She was a member of Omega Iota Phi sorority, the Pilot Club and Delta Kappa Gamma. Former treasurer of the Quincy Teachers Association, she was also belonged to the Quincy Retired Teachers Association.

Building on her teaching career and places she had visited during her lifetime, she began a new career as a travel agent.

She was a travel agent for the Bay Colony Travel Agency in Braintree. She worked for 10 years at the agency before retiring when she was in her 70s.

A long-time member of Memorial Congregational Church, she was the first woman to be elected moderator and served as chairman of the board of religious education.

In addition she was a former director of the Protestant Social Service Bureau.

She was a volunteer chairman of the Red Feather Drive for Precinct 6.

Christ Church Begins 'Reach Out Days Program'

Christ Episcopal Church in Quincy, one of the oldest Anglican congregations in Massachusetts, is starting a Community Service program this month called "Reach Out Days."

Mission Committee Co-Chairwoman Rebecca Black-Graham said: "This is a fun way for us to give back to the community in monthly service projects. Each month we are undertaking a different project. It's only a few hours on the second Saturday of each month and there is so much we can do in that short time."

The program is designed to give volunteers a taste of the many service and community organization projects open to volunteers in Quincy.

"I hope that people will get fired up about something they try on a 'Reach Out Day' and volunteer on their own," said Black-Graham. "There's always room for helping hands."

Some of the projects the group is undertaking are cleaning up Wollaston Beach before autumn, helping out at Southwest Community Center, working with the Quincy Teen Mothers Program and helping with South Shore Hospice efforts.

All are welcome to join the group on the second Saturday of each month. Black-Graham intends to announce each project and enlist public support as well as support from parishioners.

Everyone attending a "Reach Out Day" will receive an "I Reached Out" button. Those attending all events will receive a T-shirt outlining the mission of all Christians: "Feed the Hungry, Clothe the Naked, Soothe the Suffering."
